Graves '63 Announces $1 Million Campaign Gift

CAMPAIGN CO-CHAIR AND HER FAMILY CITE TURNING POINT IN COLLEGE'S HISTORY

Frances Bailey Graves '63 and her husband, Bill, have announced a $1 million gift to Agnes Scott College's comprehensive campaign from The Graves Foundation. She is co-chair of the campaign and vice chair of the Board of Trustees.

Graves said that her family's donation is an effort to give back to an institution that has helped shape her life. "My experiences as a student at Agnes Scott helped me realize the value of the liberal arts as a foundation for lifelong learning and integrating the many facets of my life," Graves said. "The variety of challenges and accomplishments I experienced as a student continue even today to help define who I am."

"We are deeply grateful for the generosity of the Graves family," said President Mary Brown Bullock '66. "Frannie is an exemplary Agnes Scott donor, giving her time and energy as well as this extraordinary gift."

The College will formally announce its comprehensive campaign this fall. The campaign will enhance the College's academic offerings by adding faculty positions and strengthening existing programs. It will also help fund much of the College's recent and planned construction, including renovations to Evans Dining Hall, McCain Library and Bradley Observatory, and new construction of Alston Campus Center, a four-story science building and a parking facility.

"We are at a pivotal point in the life of this institution," Graves said. "We are increasing the size of the student body, we have the leadership of the right president, and we have a strong faculty. We are making a strong institution even stronger."

The specific manner in which the $1 million donation from The Graves Foundation will be used is still being determined and will be announced later.

A New Schedule for Main Events

The publishing schedule for MAIN EVENTS has changed. Unlike previous years, there will be no December issue this year, but beginning in 2001, readers will receive their copies of Agnes Scott's alumnae newspaper four times a year—in January, March, June and September. Alumnae will receive class news in all four issues.

Continuing 'Transformations'

EVENT SERIES IS PART TWO OF ONGOING MILLENNIUM CELEBRATION

Agnes Scott continues its three-year millennium celebration, "Transformations," with a renovated and expanded Bradley Observatory, the return of The Capitol Steps and a lecture series focusing on globalization.

Fall events include:

- Capitol Steps—"The only group in America that attempts to be funnier than Congress" returned to Agnes Scott. The troupe of current and former Congressional staffers turned comedians satirize the people and places that once employed them. The group has recorded 18 albums and has been featured on numerous radio and television shows. Friday and Saturday, Sept. 22-23, 8 p.m., Presser Hall.
- Altan—The renowned Irish band performs music rich in the Donegal tradition. The group has released eight albums, of which the most recent is Another Sky. Thursday, Sept. 28, 8 p.m., Presser Hall.
- "One World, Ready or Not"—William Greider, political journalist and author, will deliver the first Global Perspectives Lecture, one in a series of Millennium Lectures on issues surrounding globalization. Greider is author of several books, former editor at Rolling Stone and The Washington Post, and correspondent for six Frontline documentaries on PBS. Thursday, Oct. 5, 8 p.m., Presser Hall.
- "Do Elections Matter?"—This panel discussion, also part of the Global Perspectives lecture series, will be moderated by Robert Pastor of Emory University and The Carter Center and will consider the importance of the election process around the world. Tuesday, Oct. 24, 8 p.m., Presser Hall.
- A Matter of Scale—This art exhibit offers a look at the effect of scale on the perceptual experience. The viewer discovers the body's relationship to interior and exterior landscapes. The Dalton Galleries exhibit will spill over into Bradley Observatory with special images and sculptures that relate specifically to an artist's vision of the cosmic universe. Thursday, Oct. 26, 8 p.m., Dalton Galleries and Bradley Observatory.
- "Life Beyond Earth"—Timothy Ferris, host and writer for PBS' Life Beyond Earth and professor emeritus at the University of California at Berkeley, delivers the keynote address for the reopening of the renovated Bradley Observatory. Wednesday, Nov. 1, 8 p.m., Presser Hall.

• Jane Comfort and Company—The nationally known dance ensemble returns to the College to perform the dance/opera Asphalt, the story of an artist abandoned as a child who walks out of his life and into the landscape on New York City streets. Friday and Saturday, Nov. 17-18, 8 p.m., Presser Hall.

The event series will continue in the spring with the Ko-Thi African dance company, The Boston Camerata, pianist Ursula Oppens and singer Claudia Stevens, as well as the continuing Global Perspectives lecture series and the College's annual celebrations of Martin Luther King Jr. Day, Women's History Month and the Writers' Festival. MLK events will feature performers Ossie Davis and Ruby Dee, and the Writers' Festival will feature John Updike, Sharon Olds and Marsha Norman '69.

MOVING IN—Agnes Scott welcomed its largest first-year class (257 students) and its largest total enrollment ever as students moved into their rooms in late August.

FROM THE PRESIDENT

If you visit the Agnes Scott campus this fall, you will see a transformation in progress. Major construction projects are redefining Alston Campus Center, McCain Library and Woodruff Quad. The College busily prepares for its upcoming comprehensive campaign. Cultural events continue to celebrate the advent of the new millennium with substance and style. And the class of 2004 has arrived as the College's largest ever. The vision and strategic planning behind these landmark events, as well as the arrival of Marilyn Hammond '68, our new director of alumnae relations, have provided an opportunity for the College and the Alumnae Association to reassess our mission to the nearly 10,000 alumnae of this College, scattered in every state and 41 foreign countries.

As background to our future planning, the College commissioned a telephone survey of alumnae opinions that Marilyn cites in her column in this issue of MAIN EVENTS. Let me amplify with some additional results from this survey. I was most gratified to learn that 82 percent "strongly agree" with the statement: "I am proud to call myself a graduate of ASC." An additional 14 percent "agree" with that statement for an amazing total of 96 percent feeling pride in graduating from our alma mater.

Even more significant to me, however, were the results on an open-ended question about the College's mission and purpose. Without prompting, the answers clustered around the following seven values: to educate and prepare women; to promote values, spirituality and an understanding of our Christian heritage; to stand for high standards and a superior education; to teach the liberal arts; to strengthen diversity; to provide a personalized education; and to ensure graduate's involvement in a global world. These collective values represent the views of 600 alumnae statistically representing all ages and all geographic locations. They closely mirror our mission and objectives today.

While most believe we have been true to this mission, with 45 percent strongly agreeing and 38 percent agreeing, 18 percent have more neutral or negative views. The positives prevail, but it is clear we need more discussion within the Agnes Scott alumnae community as a whole about our mission and purpose.

We need to have this discussion on campus as well. Now that we are close to our goal of an enrollment of 1,000 students, a strong future for our college is assured and we can begin to shape this future with more precision. This is an exciting prospect for all of us.

You will be hearing more about this Alumnae Survey in the weeks and months ahead. It included many individual comments and recommendations for ways in which the College could improve its communications with alumnae and its programs for alumnae. If you were not one of the 600 who received a personal call, we'd love to hear from you as well. Our survey indicated that many of you would like to be using the Web more. This is your chance. My e-mail is mbb@agnesscott.edu, Marilyn's is mhammond@agnesscott.edu and the Agnes Scott home page is www.agnesscott.edu.

We look forward to hearing from you.

Bradley Observatory Opening Ceremony

Friday, November 3, 10 a.m.

Convocation Community Hour

Agnes Scott students, faculty, staff, alumnae, trustees and the community are invited to the opening of the newly renovated and expanded Bradley Observatory. There will be a brief program and open house. Students will lead tours of the building including the new planetarium and Beck Telescope dome room. Refreshments will be served.

Handicap parking only will be available at the observatory. All others are invited to park in the West parking facility on South McDonough Street.

STUDENT LEADER PROFILE

AMALEA HIJAR '02

President of Campus Civitan
Hometown: St. Petersburg, Fla.
Major: Philosophy

Current Activities: Residence Hall Association (Resident Director, Walters, 2000-01), member of the International Committee for the Growth and Development of Campus Civitan, Collegiate Chorale

Q: What is Campus Civitan?

Campus Civitan is a branch of Civitan International, a service organization founded in 1920 that performs general community service but has a focus on children with developmental disabilities. CC was a strong program prior to the Vietnam war, but then lost many of its members and leaders. About five years ago, it started to make a comeback and now we have an international committee dedicated to stabilizing CC. Some of our specific goals include more clubs, an International Board, a fund-raising event for the Civitan International Research Center, a longer convention and an improved Web site.

Q: What inspired you to charter this organization at Agnes Scott?

Community service and an awareness of my responsibilities to society were an integral part of my upbringing. In high school, I became very involved in Junior Civitan (another branch of Civitan International) by serving my club and the district and attending an international convention. While there were several service organizations already set up on campus, I felt that CC had something special to offer to the campus community because of its focus. Experience in Civitan had taught me that service organizations tend to be more effective when their membership is less than 50. In the end the hard work paid off—Agnes Scott CC was named New International Club of the Year.

Q: What have you learned from your leadership role in Campus Civitan?

Oh goodness, a lot! I've learned everything from the official rules of order for meetings to fund-raising to all sorts of things about Atlanta. The club building process particularly taught me Agnes Scott procedures and improved my presentation skills. After being involved in this organization for five years, I can really say it's a part of who I am.

Q: Do you plan on continuing your involvement in Campus Civitan?

Forever. This year and possibly next I'll be on the International Committee writing articles about CC, making presentations to Senior Clubs asking them to sponsor or build a CC and applying for grant money and sponsors, among other things. I also want to build a Junior Civitan Club at Decatur High School. After I graduate, I plan on going to graduate school, and I'll join or build a club at whichever school I attend and continue working on or with the International Committee. Once I finish with college, I'll join or build a Senior Civitan Club and encourage it to sponsor or build a Campus or Junior Club. Who knows, maybe some day I'll become involved in Senior Civitan at the international level. One of the things I love about Civitan is that you can make it a part of all of your life.

Alumnae Weekend

PARTIES, PANELS, PRESENTATIONS IN SPRING 2000

Bullock Heads Harvard Review Process

ALSO A PARTICIPANT IN HONG KONG CONFERENCE

President Mary Brown Bullock '66 is serving as chair of Harvard University's external review committee for East Asian Studies, and will present a report to Harvard's Board of Overseers in September.

Harvard conducts a peer review process of its programs every three to four years-nearly twice as frequently as many other institutions, Bullock said. She served as a member of the review committee for East Asian Studies four years ago.

Her responsibilities as chair for the current review have included a site visit in April with interviews of students and faculty members in undergraduate and graduate programs related to all aspects of Asian studies and editing a written report, and will conclude with a final oral report to Harvard's board this month.

Bullock will also attend a conference in Hong Kong in September on medical education in Asia that will bring together heads of medical institutions throughout Asia. Much of Bullock's research has focused on science and medicine in China. She will give a presentation on 20th-century themes in medical education in Asia.

Rees Wins Fulbright

GRANT TO SUPPORT MIGRATION RESEARCH IN MEXICO

Martha W. Rees, associate professor of anthropology, has been awarded a Fulbright grant to carry out migration research and organize a course on "Community and Ecology" at the Center for Advanced Study and Research in Social Anthropology in Oaxaca, Mexico.

Rees is a social anthropologist specializing in household economics in Mexico and among Mexican immigrants to the United States. Her research has been supported by the National Science Foundation, and she has held a previous Fulbright lectureship.

Rees is one of approximately 2,000 U.S. recipients of Fulbright grants who will travel abroad for the 2000-01 academic year. Established in 1946, the program's purpose is to build mutual understanding between peoples of the United States and the rest of the world.

A Report on the "Ginny Fund"

The investments class at Agnes Scott is fortunate to have some "real money" to invest in the market. In 1996, former library staff member Carl Beck gave the College a gift with the understanding that the fund be used as a teaching tool for the Economics 210 students. This gift was in honor of his wife, Virginia Beck, and is named the "Ginny Fund." After some investigation, the gift was invested in April 1998. The class is happy to report that the "Ginny Fund" is doing extremely well, earning an average annual return of 27 percent during its first two years.

ADMINISTRATION & STAFF

Cristina Santana Crays '94, associate director of admission, received a master of science degree in educational psychology from Georgia State University in May.

Emily Gwynn, media services manager, received a master of science in instructional technology from Georgia State University in May.

Tim Hussey, director of interactive communications, co-instructed two professional development workshops on writing content for the World Wide Web for the Georgia chapter of the Public Relations Society of America.

Amy Parry, gallery assistant, curated an art exhibition titled "Voyeurism" at the Eyedrum Gallery in Atlanta in June and July.

Shuronda Smith, assistant dean of students and director of student activities, was selected as the educational session coordinator for the Southeast Regional Conference for the National Association for Campus Activities, to be held in October in Winston Salem, N.C.

HUMANITIES

Christopher Ames, professor and chair of the English department, presented a paper, "Many Fetes: the Villa Diana Party and Fitzgerald's Festive Vision," at the fifth International F. Scott Fitzgerald Conference at the University of Nice in July. Ames also presented "The Narratology of the Hollywood Pitch" at the International Conference on Narrative in Atlanta in April.

Violet Johnson, associate professor of history, presented two papers: "Race and Ethnicity in the Shaping of Work and Housing Patterns: the Case of Boston's West Indians of the First Half of the Twentieth Century" at the annual conference of the New England American Studies Association in Portland, Maine, in April; and "United by Yankee Oppression? Blacks and Irish-American Catholics in Boston in the Age of Ward Bossism" at the Ulster-American Heritage Symposium at the Centre for Migration Studies, Omagh, Northern Ireland, in June.

Sally MacEwen, associate professor of classical languages and literatures, presented a paper, "Traditional Subjects, Untraditional Teaching: the Classroom as Loving Community," at the annual meeting of the Friends Association on Higher Education at Earlham College in June.

Rafael Ocasio, associate professor of Spanish, co-authored a paper, "Dinámica Racial en la Talía del Siglo de Oro," published in El Texto Puesto en Escena: Estudios Sobre la Comedia del Siglo de Oro en Honor a Everett W. Hesse (Anita Stoll and Barbara Mujica, eds., Tamesis, 2000). Ocasio also presented "Representations of Ritual in Cuban Popular Media" and "Monuments of the Black Atlantic: History, Memory, and Politics" at The Middle Passage Project, College of William & Mary and The Collegium for African American Research in Williamsburg, Va., in May; and "Imágenes de la 'Familia Revolucionaria' en la Literatura Infantil Cubana" at the August meeting of the American Association of Teachers of Spanish and Portuguese in San Juan, Puerto Rico.

Régine Reynolds-Cornell, professor emerita of French, contributed a chapter on Georgette de Montenay to Writings by Pre-Revolutionary French Women (Garland Publishing, 2000). The book was also dedicated to her by the editors, Anne R. Larsen and Collette H. Winn. Reynolds-Cornell also organized a round-table at the annual meeting of the Renaissance Society of America in March in Florence, Italy.

Michael Schlig, assistant professor of Spanish, presented a paper, "Mimesis and Mirrors in Neoclassic Spanish Poetry," at the Kentucky Foreign Language Conference in Lexington in April. Schlig also chaired a session on 18th- and 19th-century Spanish literature.

Willie Tolliver, assistant professor of English, presented a paper, "Tyrannies of Flesh: Neocolonialism and Female Desire in Recent French Film," at the British Commonwealth and Postcolonial Studies Conference in Savannah, Ga., in February.

Isa Williams, director of The Atlanta Semester and assistant professor of women's studies, presented a paper, "Educating Women for Leadership: Are Leaders Made or Born?" at the Rutgers University Institute for Women's Leadership in New Brunswick, N.J., in April.

ARTS

Anne Beidler, associate professor of art, was visiting artist lecturer at the University of South Carolina Spartanburg in March. Beidler's lecture was given in conjunction with her solo exhibition, "Recurrent Transformation," at USCS in February and March. Beidler also had a solo exhibition, "she moves through," at McHenry County College, Crystal Lake, Ill., in June and July.

Calvert Johnson, professor of music and College organist, published England: 1730-1830, vol. 5 in the series Historical Organ Repertoire and Performance Practices (Greensboro, N.C.: Wayne Leupold Editions, July 2000). Johnson was also selected as one of 20 participants in an institute for college professors across many disciplines. The institute, "Korean Society and Culture," was sponsored by the East-West Center in Honolulu, Hawaii, and the Korea Foundation in July and August.

Lyn Schenbeck, visiting associate professor of music, published an article, "Finding the Poet's Voice: Strategies for Collective Interpretation of Choral Text," in The Choral Journal, March 2000. Schenbeck has also received a grant for her study of student-community orchestras in the United States and Canada.

David Thompson, associate professor of theatre, has had numerous articles and opinion pieces published in periodicals and editorial services including Scripps Howard News Service, Agence France-Presse, South China Morning News and the Atlanta Journal-Constitution, among others. Topics have included the Oscars, the Tony Awards and other issues related to theatre.

MATH & SCIENCE

at the Atlanta Astronomy Club at Emory University in July.

Larry Riddle, professor of mathematics, served as chief faculty consultant for the grading of more than one million Advanced Placement Calculus exam problems by 580 college and high school mathematics teachers at the annual Advanced Placement reading in calculus at Colorado State University. Riddle also gave a presentation titled "Things I've Learned Teaching Calculus" on an arc length contest given in his Calculus II course.

Ruth Riter, assistant professor of chemistry, received a grant from the Fund for Collaborative Research established by Mr. and Mrs. J. Dennis Delafield for the 2000-01 academic year. The grant will help fund research on the "Investigation of Electron Transfer Across Reverse Micellar Interfaces."

SOCIAL SCIENCES

Eileen L. Cooley, associate professor of psychology, co-presented with two Agnes Scott students a poster titled "Attachment Style and Decoding of Nonverbal Cues Among College Women" at the annual meeting of the Southeastern Psychological Association in March in New Orleans. Cooley also presented a paper, "Social Competence in Boys with Severe Emotional Disturbance: Nonverbal Accuracy, Social Problem Solving and Self Esteem," at the Southern Society for Philosophy and Psychology in Atlanta in April.

Jennifer Lucas, assistant professor of psychology, presented (with students) the following papers: "Perceived Commute Strain, Negative Physical Symptoms, and Exhaustion in Employees that Commute," "The Relationship Subjective Impedance to the Driver Stress of Commuters," and "Commute Predictability, Work Productivity, and Driver Stress of Employees that Commute" at the Psi Chi Undergraduate Research Conference for the Behavioral Sciences in Athens, Ga., in March; and "Job Involvement of Men and Women in Dual-Career Couples and Their Job Satisfaction, Marital Satisfaction and Work-Family Conflict" at the annual meeting of the Southern Society of Philosophy and Psychology in Atlanta in April. Lucas also presented, with students, three posters: "A Comparison of Men and Women in Dual-Career Couples," "A Comparison of Greek and Non-Greek College Students," and "Self Esteem in Female Freshman Athletes and Non-Athletes" at the annual meeting of the Southeastern Psychological Society in New Orleans in March.

Martha Rees, associate professor of anthropology, presented a paper, "Migración y Comunidad: Efectos Locales de la Migración en los Valles Centrales de Oaxaca," at the third biennial Symposium on Oaxacan Studies in Oaxaca, Mexico, in July.

Isa Williams, director of The Atlanta Semester and assistant professor of women's studies, and Brenda Hoke, associate professor of sociology, participated in a panel presentation of "Experiential Education: a Panel Discussion of Academic Programs and Courses that Blend Teaching, Research and Learning." Four Agnes Scott students also participated in the panel, which was held in March at the Southern Sociological Conference in New Orleans.

NEWS BRIEFS

PIPPIN WINS AMERICAN ACADEMY OF RELIGION AWARD
Tina Pippin, associate professor and chair of religious studies at Agnes Scott College, has won the first American Academy of Religion Excellence in Teaching Award.

The award is based on her "outstanding performance as a classroom teacher, development of effective teaching methods, influence in interesting students in the field of religion, and commitment to professional identity as a teacher of religion," according to the AAR.

Pippin's research interest is in religion and culture (cultural studies). Primarily, she reads biblical texts in their postmodern contexts, especially apocalyptic literature and cultures. She has authored several books and is a co-founder of CLAASP: Creating Links Among Activist Scholars and People, a pedagogy group committed to liberatory and feminist pedagogies, which meets yearly at the AAR meeting.

Pippin will officially receive the award at the AAR annual meeting in Nashville in November.

SHEATS HONORED BY PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH

The Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.) presented in April its Higher Education Award to Mary Boney Sheats, professor emerita of Bible and religion. She was one of four national leaders to receive the honor this year.

In a citation honoring Sheats, Curtis A. Kearns Jr., director of National Ministries Division, noted that "her legacy exists not only in the numerous students who majored in Bible and religion, but also in the more than 50 graduates of Agnes Scott College who became ordained ministers."

Sheats taught at Agnes Scott from 1949 until her retirement in 1983. During her tenure, she was Charles A. Dana Professor, the College's first Fuller E. Callaway Professor, and chair of the Department of Bible and Religion.

Sheats earned her bachelor's degree at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro, a master of arts from Emory University and a doctorate from Columbia University.

Sheats resides in Wilmington, N.C., and is a member of First Presbyterian Church.

PHILLIPS' SON TO COMPETE IN SYDNEY

Dwight Phillips, son of Laura Phillips in ASC's Food Services, earned a place on the U.S. Olympic team in the long jump in Olympic trials at Sacramento, Calif., in July.

Phillips' qualifying jump was 26 feet 8.5 inches, good enough for second of three spots on the Olympic team, which is currently in Sydney, Australia. This year's U.S. Olympic long jump team is the first in 24 years without four-time gold medalist Carl Lewis competing. Phillips has been compared to Lewis, both for his style of jumping and for the fact that he also doubles as a sprinter.

Phillips is a graduate of Tucker High School and has been a member of the Arizona State University track team.

Laura Phillips will be able to watch her son compete in Sydney, thanks to contributions from the ASC community that will help defray her expenses.

ASSOCIATE DEAN APPOINTED

Agnes Scott has welcomed the appointment of Lerita Coleman Brown as associate dean of the college.

Brown will share with the dean of the college his responsibilities for coordinating the academic program and for planning, seeking faculty support for and implementing curricular initiatives. Brown will be responsible for a number of programs and offices, including Agnes Scott's Atlanta Semester program, the Office of International Education and Office of Academic Advising.

Brown comes to Agnes Scott from the psychology department at the University of Colorado at Boulder where she was an associate professor as well as associate chair and director of undergraduate studies. She received her Ph.D. in psychology from Harvard University and her B.A. in psychology from the University of California, Santa Cruz.

ASC WELCOMES FOUR NEW FACULTY

The College has also welcomed four recently appointed full-time tenure-track faculty: Amy J. Lovell '90, Roger Rothman, Alan Koch and Tracey E.W. Laird.

Lovell was appointed assistant professor of astronomy. She graduated from Agnes Scott with a major in physics and astronomy. She received her Ph.D. in astronomy from the University of Massachusetts, and returns to Agnes Scott from Amherst College where she was a Five College Astronomy Science Education Fellow.

Rothman joins Agnes Scott's faculty as assistant professor of art, specializing in art history. He received his B.A. from Princeton University, an M.F.A. in painting from Hunter College, and an M.A., M.Phil. and Ph.D. from Columbia University. He has been an instructor at Barnard College, the School of Visual Arts (New York), Sarah Lawrence College, Parsons School of Design and Columbia University.

Koch will serve Agnes Scott as assistant professor of mathematics. He received his B.A. from the University of Vermont, his M.A. and Ph.D. from the State University of New York at Albany. Most recently, he has worked as assistant professor of mathematics at St. Edwards University in Austin, Texas. He also taught at Hope College (Holland, Mich.), Renasselaer Polytechnic Institute (Troy, N.Y.) and State University of New York at Albany.

Laird is Agnes Scott's newest assistant professor of music. She received her B.A. from Loyola University (New Orleans), her M.A. and her Ph.D. in ethnomusicology from the University of Michigan.

THE NEW ALSTON—It won't be long until construction on the new Alston Campus Center and its neighbor, McCain Library, is complete. Both buildings will open early spring semester and will face a newly landscaped Woodruff Quad. The openings of the two facilities will mark the completion of five major building projects in a two-year period. Evans Hall, Bradley Observatory and a four-level parking facility have also been completed during that time.

PARTING WORDS

Going Global

STUDENTS' GOALS, ASC OPPORTUNITIES BROADEN HORIZONS OF EDUCATION

I only knew three, perhaps four, of them, and I was envious of them all.

They were the adventurous and globally ambitious classmates who had spent some time overseas as part of their education. Their resumes would be impressive with such experience on them; they clearly would have an edge in the competitive job market.

There were relatively few such students when I was in college, even though my university had about 25,000 undergraduates. Their academic path was not the norm. They had gone beyond the usual boundaries, both in curriculum and geography. While their experience abroad was by no means remarkable—it could be had by anyone who truly sought it and could afford it—neither was it standard or expected. It set them apart.

My college experience wasn't that long ago—less than two decades, to be precise enough—and yet the opportunities to study abroad have increased dramatically since then. And unlike that short time ago, it perhaps no longer sets students apart to have international study on their resumes; it may now even set them apart not to have it.

Agnes Scott's students arrive on this metro Atlanta campus with far broader horizons than can be viewed from the bell tower. Forty percent of recent ASC graduates have studied abroad through independent experiences and faculty-led programs. The College has annual Global Connections and Global Awareness programs and offers study abroad at more than 170 institutions in more than 40 countries. Its ample financial assistance helps any student who seeks international experience obtain it. The College is producing graduates who can excel in a global milieu.

This summer, I had the privilege of spending part of a Global Awareness trip in Beijing with a group of students led by psychology professor Ayse Carden '66 and biology professor Harry Wistrand. I also spent a day in a salt marsh in Savannah with professor John Pilger's Honduras-bound marine biology class. And these were not the only College trips abroad this summer; students on other tours studied in Spain and Nicaragua.

It was a privilege to participate briefly in two of these trips because I got to tag along and pretend I was a student again. I saw well-prepared ASC students study the real world; learn things no professor, textbook or Web site can teach; add to already impressive resumes; and enjoy their education more than I ever did. In some ways, it helped make up for opportunities I missed those few years ago.

The College continues to internationalize its curriculum because students would be left behind if it did not. The world may be shrinking, but Agnes Scott expands, sending more students farther than ever. And I remain envious.

A Call for Outstanding Alumnae

AWARDS PROGRAM SOLICITS ANNUAL NOMINATIONS

For 111 years, Agnes Scott College has been producing outstanding alumnae—alumnae who have made major contributions in a variety of fields including arts and literature, business, government, medicine and the sciences.

Every year, the College recognizes a select few alumnae who have achieved excellence in their careers or who have displayed outstanding service to the College or their communities.

It is almost time once again for nominations to be made for the Outstanding Alumnae Awards Program. Alumnae will be asked to nominate their peers in one of four categories:

- Distinguished Career—recognizes an alumna who has achieved continued excellence in her chosen profession.
- Service to the College—recognizes an alumna who has exhibited a strong level of interest in and support of Agnes Scott College.
- Service to the Community—recognizes an alumna who has displayed outstanding service to the community, locally or globally.

- Outstanding Young Alumna—recognizes an alumna under the age of 30 for early competence in her chosen field and exceptional promise for the future.

Alumnae will receive nomination information in the mail soon. Nominations and relevant information should be received by the Office of Alumnae Relations by Dec. 1. Nominations will be accepted via e-mail and the Agnes Scott Web site.

The Alumnae Recognition committee will meet in mid-January to review nominations and select recipients. Awards will be presented during Alumnae Weekend April 27-29. Recipients will also be featured in Main EVENTS.

Questions about the Outstanding Alumnae Awards Program may be directed to the Office of Alumnae Relations at 404-471-6323; toll-free at 800-868-8602, ext. 6323; or by e-mail at alumnae@agnesscott.edu.

A MESSAGE FROM MARILYN

When I interviewed for my new job as director of alumnae relations, someone asked me why I had chosen to attend Agnes Scott College as a student. In my answer, I elaborated on the appeal of a small college in a large city and my desire to major in English and teach, all of which put Agnes Scott high on my list. But the real reason I chose Agnes Scott was that, when I interviewed at another liberal arts college for women, the director of admission was wearing a shirtwaist dress (business casual circa 1963!). At Agnes Scott, the admission director wore a business suit, and I knew right away that this was a place that took women seriously.

Recently, 600 alumnae were randomly selected to participate in a phone survey designed to tell us what you think about the College. You told us that you believe there is an important role in the world today for a liberal arts college for women (93 percent) and that you would recommend Agnes Scott to prospective students (85 percent). You also told us you were proud to call yourselves graduates (96 percent). However, 40 percent of you said that you did not know about the overall quality of education at Agnes Scott today, probably not surprising since only a little more than half of our alumnae have been back to campus since graduation.

Your belief that there is a role today for a liberal arts college for women is clearly substantiated by what Agnes Scott College has become. And for those who are uncertain about the quality of education, I have seen in these last few months that academic excellence is as clear a mission today as when the College was founded.

In fact, I have been amazed at the breadth and depth of our programs and the rich assortment of experiential learning that's available here today. In addition to the 28 liberal arts majors that Agnes Scott offers, there are also experiential learning opportunities for careers or advanced degrees in teaching, medicine, law and business. We guarantee internships for all students and offer study-abroad programs that have attracted almost 40 percent of recent graduates. We also confer a master of arts in teaching secondary English and offer a post-baccalaureate pre-medical program. As a result, our graduates are successful in gaining employment or acceptance to graduate programs, and the College is in the top 10 percent of liberal arts colleges in the percentage of graduates earning doctoral degrees.

I was impressed by Agnes Scott all those years ago, and I still am. This is a place that continues to take women and their potential for academic and leadership excellence seriously. It's great to be back!

Beth Griffin Memorial Fund

In December 1997, the Agnes Scott College community suffered a great loss with the death of Elizabeth Riseley Griffin '97. Engaged in research at Yerkes Regional Primate Research Center at Emory University, Beth fulfilled her dream of working with primates. As an Agnes Scott student, Beth was a bright light on this campus, wowing us with her graceful dance moves, her science smarts and her hilarious sense of humor.

A sculpture or kinetic mobile will be erected near the new science building in order to memorialize Beth's spirit. This remembrance will capture Beth's energy and beauty in the design of the sculpture and her intelligence and love of science in the placement of the sculpture.

Please consider a donation to the Beth Griffin Memorial Fund to make this tribute to Beth a reality. With your assistance, we will create a tangible reminder of Beth on the Agnes Scott campus. (Checks may be payable to Agnes Scott College, noting your designation for the Beth Griffin Memorial Fund.)

Thank you for honoring Beth with a gift to her memorial fund.

Guidelines For Submitting Class News

Class news is published in MAIN EVENTS in January, March, June and September. Please submit news to your class secretary according to the following deadlines:

■ August 20 for January publication

■ November 20 for March publication

■ February 20 for June publication

■ May 20 for September publication

Class news may also be submitted directly to the Office of Alumnae Relations. Whether submitting news to your secretary or the alumnae office, be sure to include your full name (first, maiden, last) and class year.

When reporting births, deaths and advanced degrees, please include as much detailed information as possible. In all cases, exact dates and full names are needed.

Please report weddings and other planned events (vacations, visits with alumnae and friends) only after the fact.

Agnes Scott has nearly 10,000 living alumnae. We want to keep in touch with all of you and keep you in touch with each other.

Contact your class secretary with your news today!

Mary Sloan Laird is settled at King's Bridge Retirement Center, where she is getting used to dinner at 4:30. She likes not having the responsibility of cooking it. She also plays bridge and participates in the planned activities. In addition to many other friends, Mary has reacquainted herself with high school classmates.

Dorothy Potts Lavendol and her sister, Marjorie Durden, are happily involved with volunteering and church-related events. Instead of an expensive trip this year, they are going to explore "Georgia's romantic past, the vibrant present and Olympian future," following Jane Ockerhausen's suggestions in The Georgia One-Day Trip Book. In an auspicious beginning, Dorothy and Marjorie began with a champagne brunch at the Tate House, a beautiful marble mansion in Tate, Ga.

In January Marian Calhoun Murray and members of her family attended the memorial service in Atlanta for Betty Fountain Edwards Gray. In May, she and Mary Virginia Allen went to the reunion but missed seeing Amy Underwood Trowell.

Rosalyn Crispin Robinson has been getting her cancer support group allied with the national association and establishing a van system, Harlingen, for the transport of indigent and elderly persons to and from the hospital and their doctors. When the system "opened for business," Rosalyn had the distinction of being asked to "cut the ribbon."

Classmates should watch for a display on the campus of 10 books by Rosalyn's son, Charles M. Robinson III. Charles is a historian, concentrating mostly on the Confederacy and on Indian affairs in the Southwest. He has two more books under contract.

According to the grapevine, Lib Heaton Mullino attended the reunion.

Bruce M. Gregory writes that his mother, Carolyn Cole Gregory, has been released from Manor Care nursing home after five months of recovery and rehab necessitated by a broken hip. Carolyn is presently in an assisted-living home at Arbor Terrace.

During spring break Dorothea Blackshear Brady took her two grandchildren, Bo and Brady Hall, to visit their Blackshear relations in Atlanta. Then they joined other members of the clan—38 in all—for a Blackshear reunion on St. Simons. "It was great fun" for everyone.

Amy Underwood Trowell regrets her absence from the reunion because of osteoporosis, which developed a few years ago. She retired in 1997 after 25 years as librarian of the Edisto Island Branch of the Charleston City Library. Amy will stay at her beach home on Edisto Island as long as she can drive. Following her lead, her daughter, Charlotte Husselman, is a school librarian in St. Louis, and her daughter, Nancy Trowell Kearns '59, also has that profession at a branch of the University of Georgia in Douglas, Ga. Altogether, Amy has five grandchildren and three great-grandchildren.

DEATHS

SECRETARY

Mildred E. Clark Sargent
1019 Stillbrook Road
Pensacola, FL 32514-1629

Frances James Donohue represented the class of 1936 at the funeral of Jane Blick Meatyard. Jane's daughter has set up an Agnes Scott memorial fund in memory of her mother. During an extended visit to her sister, Rebecca, in Mobile, Ala., Frances met some relatives she had not seen in years at a family reunion. In other family news, Frances' handsome grandsons keep growing taller. At church, a Sunday school class of 4-year-olds captures her attention.

Alice McCallie Pressly and Bill are delighted that their grandson, David, has moved to Atlanta and visits them frequently.

Through e-mail Helen Handte Morse and Jack are kept informed and enlightened by their six grandchildren.

Mary Cornely Dwight and Ken moved to the health-care wing of Sharon Towers, Charlotte, N.C. Their daughter, Patsi Sheets, sees them often and will receive their mail at her address.

Rebecca Whitley Nunan and Carlton swim every week. Daughter Elizabeth has retired from teaching but is working in one of brother Alec's four bookstores, creating a line of greeting cards. Rebecca reads a great deal, writes and teaches her grandchildren and great-granddaughters. She also participates in a sewing circle of wives and widows of Emory professors. The family continues its study of Spanish.

Reba Rogers Griffith lives independently in the Sunnyside Retirement Community, Martinsville, Va.

Shirley Christian Ledgerwood and John took part in an Elderhostel activity on life after death in Cumberland Gap, Tenn. She is writing the memoirs of her grandmother. Shirley also shows slides of her numerous trips, including one to Yugoslavia.

For the first time in 25 years, Elizabeth Burson Wilson welcomed all four of her grandchildren to St. Simons Island. This event involved people flying in from France, Virginia and the District of Columbia.

Ida Buist Rigby moved to a retirement center that she likes very much. Her two daughters live nearby.

Sarah Jones Cheatham teaches an interesting Sunday school class. She now has 21 great-grandchildren—14 boys and seven girls. Her two youngest granddaughters have almost completed college. Sarah eagerly anticipates the 65th reunion in 2001.

Ori Sue Jones Jordan has relocated to a retirement community.

Mary Walker Fox sold her home and took up residence in Clairmont Place, Decatur, Ga.

Mildred Clark Sargent and Jim are amazed at how their senior years bring experiences never considered earlier. The family has been saddened by several deaths.

Edith Belser Wearn has been going through old letters and is glad to have Nancy Moor Cantey in the same retirement center in West Columbia, S.C. Edith's five grown children are widely scattered across the country, but one has built a home in Charleston.

Edith and Michelle Furlow Oliver, from Montgomery, Ala., keep in touch.

On hearing of the death of Franklin Garrett in March and the memorial service at the Atlanta History Center in April, Isabel McCain Brown noted that "he was an amazing man" and that "Frances Steele Garrett was the right wife for him."

Other news from Isabel reveals that Julia Thing Stamberger has closed her pottery shop and changed her address.

Also according to Isabel, Mary King Critchell, active for years in Japanese-American relations, is cited in a book featuring individuals who have been outstanding in the promotion of world friendship. In 1999 Mary was in Japan on one of her many trips at the expense and invitation of citizens appreciative of her services with the Education Office of the Allied Occupation Forces, 1948-1950. In addition to working with schools and training women and youth for leadership skills in voluntary groups and democratic procedures, she arranged disaster relief for 95,000 women widowed by the war in Kagoshima, on the island of Kyushu, not far from Nagasaki. When Mary returned to the U.S., she set up a student exchange program at Ann Arbor, Mich. At a gathering during the aforementioned 1999 trip, held at the Peace Museum, Mary spoke, as did several women whom she had trained. Those remarks are included in a book, Mary King Critchell: King San: Relationships U.S. and Japan 50 Years. Alas, U.S. readers will have to wait for the English translation.

Frances King Yager's granddaughter, Frances Baxley, graduated from Dartmouth and has a Fulbright fellowship. She is now studying in Germany. Frances' other granddaughter, Julie, has married.

Lib Blackshear Flinn has completed the history of the centennial of North Avenue Presbyterian Church. In addition, she is organizing the archives in the Heritage Room of the church. In March, Lib and Bill went to their granddaughter's wedding in Miami. In April, they attended a family reunion of 36 Blackshears in Blackshear, Ga. The town is named for Gen. David Blackshear, who fought in the American Revolution.

Mildred Davis Harding's new book, Waking Up in Egypt, provides a delightful memoir of her life with her husband, John, as two young professors at the American University of Cairo during the 1950s. More than a travelogue, it describes their struggles with servants, transportation, students and the Arabic language while caring for two children, ages 3 years and 3 months. With Mildred's doctorate in English from Columbia University and John's Ph.D. in anthropology from the University of Chicago, the couple seemed more than capable of coping with student strikes and political unrest in the transition of power from Naguib to Nasser. When John was accused of being a revolutionary, however, he and Mildred left to teach in other American universities in Baghdad and Beirut. A paperback edition of Waking Up in Egypt is a "read-at-one-sitting" adventure and may be ordered directly from Mildred's home address: 955 30th Ave. S, Apt. 212, Gulfport, FL 33707-5339.

Elsie West Duval contrasts the nonchalant taking of the census in 2000 with her Blitzkrieg days in 1940 when census takers went from door to door, questioning each citizen personally. Her essay about those experiences, entitled "Blitzkrieg, the Census Taker," was published in the Richmond Times. Elsie's daughter and two children visited her in April, flying from Seattle after pooling all their frequent flyer miles. On May 5 she attended the high school graduation of her oldest granddaughter in Atlanta.

This year Ellen Little Lesene plans to see the Oberammergau Passion Play with her daughter.

After recovery from a serious illness, Joyce Roper McKey is relaxing in her Highlands retreat.

When Giddy Erwin Dyer and husband Robert leave Evanston, Ill., for The Pines, a retirement center in Davidson, N.C., she will be moving "back to her roots." Their son, Rob, is happy in retirement with his flourishing bed and breakfast venture in Charlotte. Daughter Wynn teaches returning students at Northwestern University. After the ordeal of relocation Giddy and Robert will reward themselves in September with a trip by barge through Burgundy and Provence.

The biggest news in May was the happy reunion the last weekend in April. Those absent were certainly missed, but letters and pictures were shared. By this time everyone should have received the directory. At the alumnae meeting Saturday morning the class won two silver bowl trophies: one for the largest percentage of contributors to the Annual Fund, the other for the largest amount given, $27,783.

At the class meeting the following were elected officers for the next five years: president Harriet "Hat" Stimson Davis, vice presidents Elizabeth "Dibba" Davis Johnston and Virginia Milner Carter, co-secretaries Mary "Mef" Evelyn Francis Ault and Sophie Montgomery Crane. Notes were written to Mary Lang Gill Olson, outgoing president, prevented from coming by her husband's illness. The secretaries also collected some up-to-the-minute news from those present. Saturday night's class dinner was attended by 54 classmates, husbands, family and friends.

Grace Elizabeth Anderson Cooper reported that her granddaughter, Rachel Maddux, was received into Phi Beta Kappa at Chapel Hill. This year her son, Emmett, is publishing a Bible called The Honeyword Bible, intended especially for children up to sixth grade.

Ernestine Cass Dickerson is learning from the ailments of family and friends, so she is taking water aerobics and checking out her medicines. She is active in church as well as in a weekly prayer group.

Virginia Milner Carter and Penn Hammond Vieau traveled together to Provence and Paris, including an eight-day barge trip with a fabulous chef on board.

Mary Francis "Mef" Ault was in Shahjahanpur, India, for three weeks last fall. She taught English at Nave Institute, a long established school there. This short-term volunteer teaching has taken her to interesting places around the world.

Margaret Hopkins Martin has moved to a retirement facility at Jacksonville Beach. She is very happy there and has a granddaughter living with her.

Betty Jean O'Brien Jackson writes an intriguing sentence herewith quoted for individual interpretation: "Now I have four granddaughters; my youngest, Beth, was born when I was 39, and she just had her first child at the age of 39!" Betty Jean and

Charlie have recently celebrated their 51st wedding anniversary, but she can only say, "It doesn't seem that long."

Henrietta "Henri"

Thompson Wilkinson says the trip to Atlanta and one to Louisville in June were probably the extent of her travels this year. She is enjoying her retirement home in Black Mountain, near Montreat and Asheville.

Mary Ellen "Polly" Ware Duncan has spent much of her time in quilting lately and has a prize to show for it. Her first full-sized hand-quilted quilt received an honorable mention ribbon at the Quilters of South Carolina Show at the Aiken Historical Museum.

Martha Zellner Webb reports a romantic story. Last year her husband did not choose to accompany her on a river-boat trip she wanted to take from Amsterdam to Budapest. Then she asked a friend who had lost her husband two years earlier to go with her. Along the way a "charming, and interesting" gentleman noticed them and began eating at their table. He had lost his wife about two years ago also, and by the end of the trip he and friend Connie were madly in love. Martha the matchmaker? At any rate, she recently returned from their wedding in Phoenix, Ariz.

Ruth Eyles Lewis was elected fund chair at Alumnae Weekend.

Cape Coral, FL 33991-2808

Kathryn "Kaby" Benefield Bartlett writes from Santa Monica, Calif., where they have lived for 40 years, saying that they are thinking of moving to an assisted living facility (summer camp for oldies) in the Santa Barbara area. Ten years ago, they lost to cancer their wonderful daughter, Kitt, who had four children. Kaby's two boys live in California, and neither is married. She and Parker see them often. Although they traveled for years, now it seems such an effort that those days are over.

Florence Ellis Gifford and John are so grateful as they continue to get good reports from daughter Florence's bout with cancer. Her son is at the University of Georgia; her daughter, at the University of Virginia. Both love their schools.

A booklet of Pattie

Patterson Johnson's poetry has been placed in the Alumnae House. After Pattie's death her son, David, found a book of her poetry, some going back to high school days. He had a booklet of selected poems printed for members of her family. Many covered her days at Agnes Scott and some were written later. A copy of the booklet was given to the Alumnae House and presented at a tea there in February. Pattie's husband, Hal, and son, David, made the presentation.

Lucile Gaines MacLennan had a spectacular three-week cruise around Cape Horn in South America in January, seeing the largest penguin colony in Argentina, the Iquacu Falls in Brazil and the Falkland Islands.

Gene Slack Morse and Chet are enjoying travel in this country. They have taken two paddle-boat trips. One trip in March was from New Orleans to Memphis with stops on the way, a Natchez pilgrimage among them. A fall leaf tour from Louisville to Cincinnati in October was outstanding. This fall they plan to venture up the St. Lawrence, to Nova Scotia, Quebec and Toronto. In May they attended a granddaughter's graduation from the University of Montana.

On Feb. 8 Elizabeth Irby Milam became the proud grandmother of triplets, two boys and a girl.

Grace Walker Winn's death on Feb. 24 was unexpected. She and Al had moved to Winston-Salem several years ago to be near her daughter Grace Ellis '87. They were loved by members of the North Decatur Presbyterian Church, having served there and lived in Decatur from 1981 to 1997.

DEATHS

- Grace Walker Winn, Feb. 24.
- Susan Self Teat, May 14.

42

SECRETARY

Jane Stillwell Espy
2 Downshire Circle
Decatur, Ga. 30033-1419

After living for 44 years in the same house that she and Sigurd built, Virginia Watkins Johnson Francis moved to a new apartment in University Terrace Good Samaritan Village, joining many old retired NMSU friends. Virginia made this decision because of failing eyesight and the death last year of her husband, David Francis. She feels fortunate to have her two children and their families, two stepsons and their families, living in Las Cruces as well.

Mary Kirkpatrick Reed lost her husband, Dan, in 1999, and she suffers with arthritis as a result of injuries sustained in a fall. She is, nevertheless, working for the Columbus, Ga., Rotary Club and is glad to stay busy with that and church responsibilities.

Helen Schukraft Sutherland writes that after living 29 years in their Conyers home with acreage, she and T.J. have moved five miles away into a quiet new development behind the International Horse Park. They have kept their motor home and like spending January and February in South Texas. In January they celebrated their 54th anniversary. Helen is occupied with church work and a large family of six children and 19 grandchildren.

Dorothy Nabers Allen and Kirk cruised around the Hawaiian Islands over Christmas and New Year when Kirk was chaplain on the cruise ship Statendam. They visited Ford Island in Pearl Harbor, where he had been stationed during World War II. Kirk and Dot have been in charge of the Montreat Conference Center Exhibit for the last five years at the Presbyterian Church's General Assembly. Last year it was held in Texas; this year it will be in California. Their nine grandchildren range in age from 32 down to Caroline Allen, the latest arrival born in March.

In May Elise Nance Bridges received her master's degree in theological studies from Erskine Theological Seminary.

DEATHS

- Mary Anne Hannah Griffith, March 3, 1999.
- J. Dan Reed, husband of Mary Kirkpatrick Reed, Dec. 28, 1999.
- Arnold Emmons, husband of Margaret Hartsook Emmons, Jan. 23.

ADVANCED DEGREES

- Elise Nance Bridges, master's in theological studies, Erskine Theological Seminary, May 2000.

SECRETARY

Mardia A. Hopper Brown

Decatur, GA 30030-1608

Clara Rountree Couch is involved in her clay work that she has been doing for 40 years—mostly sculptures and large ceramics. She lives in her country home near Burnsville, N.C. She and her four daughters who live in North Carolina are very close. In May, Clara led a workshop in primitive firing held on Horn Island, off the coast of Mississippi. She took dung and sawdust with her and gathered plenty of wood on the island. A friend, Pinky Bass, accompanied her to take pictures.

Flora Campbell McLain is excited about repairing the old home place in Springfield, Tenn., where she grew up. Her part of the family inheritance included the house her grandfa-

Elizabeth Warden Marshall joined in the Alumnae Weekend festivities with Nell Allison Sheldon and Jane Guthrie Rhodes. Elizabeth continues to "keep the home fires burning" in Decatur, Ga. Even after 22 years of retirement, she finds much to do. She stays "deeply involved" in the local humane society, helps in the office at Decatur Presbyterian Church and with transportation from Philips Towers, a retirement high rise. Elizabeth attends Decatur Club alumnae meetings on the campus and is devoted to her companion, her dog. Her sole worry after 62 years of living alone, might be how much longer she can do that. But she is postponing that concern for tomorrow.

Elizabeth writes that Mary Hudson Irby has completed her chemotherapy without too many side effects and sounds her usual "up-beat" self over the telephone. In early March Elizabeth talked with Mary following Mary and James' move into a new, elegant retirement center offering "superb" food and numerous recreational facilities. After their busy life in the Presbyterian ministry, Mary and James enjoy being "waited on."

Additional news from Elizabeth reports that Frances Castleberry is now in a wheelchair, able to manage her life by herself and her hair "as red as ever." Frances' little dog, Benji, keeps her company.

Anne Thompson Rose planned a family reunion at Virginia Beach in June. She sees Mary Smith Bryan when the van from Westminster Canterbury Retirement Home transports a group for a tournament with another group. Because Anne's children live as far away as Massachusetts and California, she doesn't see them often.

Nell Allison Sheldon and Jane Guthrie Rhodes went to a performance of Rigoletto in Atlanta. Jane's Sunday school class, called "Bible and Arts," has featured speakers from every college and university in the area, including ASC. In June, Jane vacationed with her family at Lakemont, Ga. ther built and the spring for which the town was named. During Easter week, Flora welcomed son Dick and family from Michigan, together with daughter Joyce and family from North Carolina.

Maryann Cochran Abbott and Marjorie Wilson Ligon talk to each other often and see each other once a month when their high school group, the "Thirty-Niners," gets together for lunch at a home or restaurant.

Kat Wright Philips and Davidson traveled on an informative trip to Egypt and its ancient Nile River sites in the fall. They spent the summer months in Montreat, N.C.

Sarah Bolton Newland Lunceford lives in Washington, Ga., where she is resident director of the thriving Little Theatre and is active with the Georgia Council of Teachers of English as well as with the Georgia Theatre Conference. On Feb. 24 she suffered the loss of her sister, Louise Capen, a retired missionary who worked in Southeast Asia.

Joella Craig Dendy's daughter, Jo, teaches fifth grade in Boulder, Colo. Her daughter, Margaret, serves as chief of the appellate division in the public defender's office in Palm Beach, Fla. Joella's three grandchildren are Elliott, 15; Laura, now a freshman in Wooster College; and Sam, a musician.

Bryant Holsenbeck Moore had three years with the class of '40, married and left. She returned to complete work for a degree with the class of '43. She has had reunions with the class of '40 but found the contacts during "that trying year—1942-43—at Agnes Scott very meaningful and helpful." She says that "everyone was so kind." She returned to Atlanta in 1965 and has been there ever since. She and her husband downsized in 1998, moving into an independent retirement community that they like. Their children settled in Pennsylvania and in New York. Bryant and her husband celebrated their 60th wedding anniversary in October 1999.

In a telephone conversation Barbara Wilber Gerland discussed the totally unexpected death of Betty DuBose Skiles of a heart attack on April 6.

DEATHS

- Elizabeth DuBose Skiles, April 6.

The class of '44 would like to congratulate Ellen Arnold Cottrell, who received the Outstanding Alumna Award for Service to the College. It was given at Alumnae Weekend. The class is very proud of Ellen and of other members who have been honored at Alumnae Weekend during the years.

Aurie Montgomery Miller was especially happy to attend Alumnae Weekend as her sister, Sophie Montgomery Crane '40, was commended for Service to the Community. Sophie and her husband, Paul, spent two decades as missionaries in Korea. Aurie and John have moved to Highland Farms, a retirement community in Black Mountain, N.C. They have friends there and also at nearby Montreat.

Nell Turner Spettel had hip replacement surgery last September but is driving and dancing again! She drove to Thomasville, Ga., to meet with classmates Bobbie Powell Flowers and her sister, Celetta Powell Jones '46, along with Leila Holmes '45. Nell also sees Mary Louise Duffee Philips about every two weeks. Nell "was in the Mrs. Senior Georgia Pageant with no sponsors and won fourth runner-up!" Congratulations!

Cleo Jacquelyn "Jackie" Smith Collar and her husband, Henry, took a round-the-world trip last year and stayed at the same hotel in Athens, Greece, as Bill and Hillary. Hillary said "good morning" to Jackie.

Mary Dozier Pallotta's sister, Kathryn Dozier Bankston '47, lives with her.

Nancy Jean Geer Alexander writes that her old roommate, Marybeth Little Lobdell, is coming for a visit from Armonk, N.Y.

Betty Abernathy Wallace is about to publish Before the Ice Comes, her third book of poetry.

Jane daSilva Montague and husband Bob enjoyed several trips in 1999: to Kansas City, Mo., Dallas, Boston and Baltimore. She is happy with her volunteer work at a neighborhood elementary school, Rotary Club and church, as well as with the grandchildren of her late twin, Jean daSilva Ricketts.

Anna Clark Rogers Sawyer visited Virginia Henry Carson in her charming home in the foothills overlooking Tucson, Ariz. A highlight was seeing The West, a non-profit needlework and gift shop at which Ginny is a longtime volunteer. "Clarkie" also reported lunching with Josephine Caldwell Young '67 and her husband, Walter. On the flight back to Danville, she sat with Elaine Orr Wise '65, now an English professor at the University of Louisville.

Lida Walker Askew and Gene traveled to Chapel Hill, N.C., to visit Margaret Yancey

Kirkman and Neil before going to Atlanta to see Marian Yancey Carroll. A mini-reunion luncheon was hosted by Marian at Petite Auberge with Dabney Adams Hart, Elizabeth Blair Carter, Claire Kemper Brook, Adele Dieckmann McKee and the Askews.

Sheely Little Miller and Harriett Gregory Heriot provided this report on a recent adventure, saying, they "did what Nancy Deal Weaver did in October of 1999." They went on an Overseas Adventure Travel trip to Nepal, where they did trekking in the lower Himalayas, rafting on the Seti River, and an elephant safari in the Royal Chitwan National Park of Nepal.

Julia Weathers Wynne and her husband welcomed a new grandchild last July. They are enjoying two other 2-year-old grandsons and two teenage granddaughters.

Ivy Morris Dougherty and Jack celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary in December and his retirement in January. With new freedom the couple finds more time to visit with nine grandchildren and to travel abroad with old friends.

Dorothy Quillian Reeves has completed a term as ASC alumnae president while husband Harrison recently retired from 44 years of medical practice. Travel and eight grandchildren keep them fully occupied.

Joan Lawrence Rogers must be one of the most traveled classmates. Not too many months ago she and Larry were getting ready for an early morning flight from Bangkok to the U.S. when Joan turned on CNN. She was surprised at 4:30 in the morning in Thailand to witness Mary Brown Bullock's interview during a feature segment on China!

Mary Price Coulling and Sidney feel fortunate to be moving into a two-bedroom cottage in a grand new retirement community only about three blocks from their Lexington, Va., home. The new address is 160 Kendal Dr., Box 1003, Lexington, VA 24450. All class news should be sent to the new address.

Betty "Blebla" Blackmon Kinnett and husband John have almost finished wading through 50 years of accumulated business records, etc. Getting computers has helped with the congestion.

Writing to tell the class about the death of her sister, Patty Persohn, Mary Jane Persohn Cheever reveals that despite being tethered to an oxygen supply, Patty was actively enjoying life to the very end. She says that Patty's Agnes Scott classmates were very special lifelong friends.

Su Boney Davis will be traveling with her church choir to Transylvania in August for one and a half weeks. They will be singing at an International Unitarian Conference and will be touring through Budapest, Bucharest and a number of small villages.

Jimmie Ann McGee Collings and Tom saw their newest grandchild at Christmas. Baby Meya was born in June 1999. Jimmie's son, Sam, is in law school at the University of Baltimore; his wife, Lan, received her Ph.D. in genetics and does research at Johns Hopkins. Jimmie Ann and Tom teach English as a Second Language.

Winnie Horton Martin and Will flew into Portland in February for a paddleboat cruise down the Columbia, Snake and Willamette rivers. They went by the base of Mount Hood and Mount St. Helens, then took a jet boat ride into Hell's Canyon. Their itinerary followed part of the route of the Lewis and Clark expedition. In addition to seeing maritime museums and a rodeo, Winnie danced with Native Americans.

Marjorie Stukes Smith, husband David and friends David and Barry Mann left their homes in England and drove to Galgau, Romania, to set up a house church. It has been named The Frances House in honor of Marjorie's mother, Frances Gilliland Stukes '24. They all stayed with a Romanian couple in a small house where the bathroom was off the porch, complete with a chicken coop. Although the dedication service was expected to be small, Marjorie was surprised when the door to Frances House had to be removed to accommodate all of the people. The only English spoken was by Marjorie when she gave a testimonial.

Catherine Warren Dukehart is active in her church, garden and bridge clubs. She traveled in April to Italy. Another Agnes Scott alumna on the tour was Marian Franklin Anderson '40. Kitty has three sons, each of whom has three children. Two sons live in Statesboro; the third, in Sandy Springs, Ga.

Anna DaVault Haley lost her husband, John, in November. John received a B.A. from Emory and a Ph.D. from New College, University of Edinburgh, Scotland. He was pastor emeritus of Westminster Presbyterian Church in Greenville, S.C. Since his death, Anna has had long visits in St. Petersburg, Fla., and Charleston, S.C. She is now back in Greenville and beginning to draw up the many loose ends of her life.

Dorothy Jean Harrison King visited her daughter, Ivey, and grandson in Switzerland over the Christmas holidays. Ivey has a Ph.D. in psychology and teaches preschool and English classes. Dorothy Jean's son, John, has two small children and lives in Atlanta. Dorothy Jean has taught a women's Sunday school class in her church for 30 years. She participates in literacy action programs as well.

Barbara Ann Futral Turner works in her Sock Shop and Kid Shop in Griffin, Ga. She has a third shop in Macon. Barbara Ann has five children who are scattered all over the country as are her nine grandchildren.

Bo Hancock Abernathy and Caroling Lester Haynes, along with Sidney, took a trip to Egypt with the Fernbank Museum of Natural History.

Gwyn Davies Kelley and John are planning to come to the 50th reunion. Gwyn has experienced some healing benefits from poetry.

Jackie Josey Hahne has been hosting quite a few guests from the class of 1954. Last fall Harriet Durham Maloof stayed with Jackie while attending the Leadership Conference at ASC. Patti Boring Sellas, Julia Grier Storey and Judy Promnitz Marine came over to party with them. Later, one can imagine Jackie's surprise when Valley Burnet North rang her bell for an A.G.N.E.S. Network overnight! In January, Nancy Lee-Riffe partook of her hospitality while in Atlanta for a Quaker meeting; Jackie provided excellent entertainment: a movie and an ice storm. In 1999, Jackie was a foster parent to two guide dog puppies. She serves as foster parent for Atlanta's Sheltie Rescue.

Vallie Burnet Orr has traveled to London, Brugge, Paris and on a tour with her daughter. She plays tennis and is in the church choir.

Nancy Lee-Riffe visited Lou Hill Reaves in time to help her clean up after another ice storm.

Eleanor Hutchinson Smith and Harriet Potts Edge have enjoyed working together on the 50th Reunion Committee for Newman High School. Eleanor contacts Patti Boring Sellas by phone; their conversations revealed that Eleanor's daughter was the social worker for Patti's aunt while she was in the hospital.

In spite of Kathleen Stout Mainland's miserable January with the flu, she relishes her freedom from being class secretary. She spent Christmas in Colorado with her 18-month-old grandson.

Julia Grier Storey has happily recovered from cataract surgery on one eye.

Florrie Fleming Corley and her husband, Jim, are writing the history of the First Presbyterian Church in Marietta, Ga. Their collaborative effort will be in print and available in November. She had a wonderful trip (again) to China in October 1999 and found the grave of her great-aunt, a missionary from 1891 to 1910.

Judy Promnitz Marine retired from Westminster on June 15. She has been too busy working and recuperating from brain surgery in 1998 to make many retirement plans. She is sure, however, these will include travel and being with her seven grandchildren.

Severe arthritis has made Joanne Massee Wise a near-shut-in for two years. She cannot drive and must walk with a cane. She keeps in touch, nevertheless, with Julia Grier Storey by phone and occasionally sees Jane Landon Baird at the Cathedral Bookstore.

Carmie Thrasher Cochrane is also fighting arthritis. With no regrets and some wonderful memories, she retired from her private practice of psychology in 1999. In addition, 1999 brought her first grandchild, a delight. Sadly, on Dec. 30, 1999, John Arthur Cochrane, her husband of nearly 40 years, died in his sleep of a heart attack. Now she is challenged to accept, regroup and redesign her own life anew.

How does a church organist play the organ with a finger in a splint? "Carefully," answers Mary Pritchett Webb. She learned the hard way in January.

Mitzi Kiser Law and Fred had a Southern jaunt with friends to see Charleston and Savannah. The jaunt ended in Atlanta in a celebration of Mitzi's birthday with her oldest daughter, Alison, and giving her friends a tour of ASC.

Beverly Watson Howie and John have been traveling to see their sons and their families. They visited their eldest son and his Spanish bride in Madrid as well as their second son and his family in New York State and at their cottage in Penobscot, Maine. Beverly and John's youngest son and his fiancée teach English at S.W. His first book, The Bluffton Charge, has been published. It recounts his parents' experiences in 1955-57 when John was a Methodist preacher in South Carolina's low country and he and Beverly were trying to do some pre-civil rights work.

Kathryn Cumbee Magnotto, Tony and their puppy, McGee, live in North Myrtle Beach. Tony golfs while Kathryn has accumulated 10 years supervising ladies' Bible study. She finds that at 66, life gets down to the basics: faith, spouse, the children, grandchildren and good friends.

Jane Gaines Johnson spent Christmas with both children and her first granddaughter, 1-year-old Lucy. Ralph postponed prostate surgery, substituting a scuba-diving trip to the South Pacific in February and a safari in East Africa in March. They say, "First things first!"

Carolyn Alford Beaty entertained her six grandchildren—five boys and a girl—at Christmas. LeAnn and Jeff live in Columbia, S.C.; David, an obstetrician/gynecologist, is in Clarksville; and Bill and Kathleen are in Duluth. This year Carolyn and Roy traveled to Italy, France and Switzerland. She teaches second grade and assists in a ladies' class at church. Both she and Roy volunteer at the hospital.

In spite of failing eyesight, Libby Wilson Blanton has had a good year. She has had the company of her children and grandchildren because they are very attentive to her. Libby toured Europe with friends and plans a visit to new friends from that trip who reside in Tacoma, Wash. She will also audit some classes at the local university (USF) in art, literature or history. Libby topped things off with a special reunion with Sandra Dickson Ballentine.

Sarah Legg Schoon lifts weights to stay fit and occasionally audits English Lit classes at the nearby junior college (a fascinating combination).

Helen Allred Jackson is enthusiastic about a grandson named Alex.

Connie Curry's book, The Fire Ever Burning, was released in March. She has traveled to Cuba and Ireland this year.

After Patty Hamilton Lee's husband, Bill, retired in February, they moved to Florida in order to be closer to their children and grandchildren.

Sara McIntyre Bahner was unable to be present at the reunion because she was attending the wedding of the son of her best childhood friend who married the daughter of another best childhood friend.

Having previously committed herself to visit her son in Hawaii, Pat Hale Whitton regretfully could not join classmates at the reunion.

The last MAIN EVENTS reported that Diana Carpenter White won the DeKalb County, Ga., "Teacher of the Year" for 1999-2000. The news item did not add, however, that the system includes 93,000 students and 6,900 teachers—a very impressive honor! In September Diana will journey to England, thanks to Chevron, as part of her award. She plans to retire after 30 years of teaching Special Education/EBD (emotional and behavior disorders). She and Ivan will build a house on 16 acres outside Cleveland, Ga., in the Northeast Georgia mountains.

Edith "Edie" MacKinnon Sloan and her husband, Charlie, have sold their bookstore in Waynesville, N.C., and are happy in retirement. They look forward to more hiking, travel and visits with their children and grandson and, of course, reading.

Anne McWhorter Butler attended the baptism of her new grandson on Easter Eve. Wallace Tait Butler was three and a half months old when his mother, an Episcopal priest, baptized him at the Church of the Holy Comforter, Kenilworth, Ill. Mac, Anne's son, was the proud father holding Wallace, who did not make a sound for two hours.

Mary "Sissy" Daniel Finney is thrilled to report the arrival of her first grandson, Luke Lexington Vargas, last summer. Luke is the son of her daughter, Britten, and Steve, who live near Sissy and Jim in Santa Fe. He has red hair and blue eyes like his grandmother, who enjoys babysitting on Tuesdays and Thursdays. Son Gardner also lives in Santa Fe now. Sissy is especially delighted with the freedom from time constraints in retirement.

Classmates extend deep sympathy to Carolyn Frederick Williamson on the death of her mother, Carolyn Essig Frederick '28, on Feb. 4.

Ann Harvey is recovering from heart surgery after suffering a ruptured aorta in late February. Ann's daughter, Katherine "Cindy" Harvey Daub, died from complications of pregnancy on Feb. 27. The class extends its sympathy, love and prayers for Ann's comfort and complete recovery.

Suzanne "Suzi" Bailey Mann also receives deepest sympathy at the death of her daughter, Martha Stuart, on Feb. 27, after a battle with ovarian cancer. All hearts reach out to Suzi in this time of sorrow.

A happy note records the retirement on April 30 of Mary Clayton Bryan DuBard from her position at the University of Alabama at Birmingham. For almost 20 years Mary Clayton was involved in ob/gyn research as a data analyst/programmer and was frequently included in authorship of articles. Now that she and Jim have both retired, they plan to travel and hope some day to have grandchildren to report in MAIN EVENTS. Mary is thankful to be free from worry about keeping up with new technology.

The secretary solicits current news, please, for fresh and updated information. The following news was taken from information sheets returned prior to the 40th anniversary class reunion a year ago:

Melba Cronenberg Bassett and husband Ralph sell antiques on E-Bay from their Leesburg, Fla., home. Melba finds operating a computer an exciting process. She also enjoys travel, bridge, and reading. Daughter Mary Katherine "Kitsie" Bassett Riggall '83 lives in Atlanta with husband Chris and two children, while son Frank resides in California.

Edith Tritton White and Neal traveled to Greece, where information recalled from Classics classes at Agnes Scott added special meaning to viewing the Parthenon and Olympic Stadium in Athens. This year they will see the Oberammergau Passion Play, with a side trip to Italy. All three of Edith's children live in Georgia close to their parents, so she can have contact with her grandchildren.

After living many years in Juneau, Frances Calder Arnold and Frank find continued pleasure recreating in Alaska now that they are retired. Each winter they visit Frank's dad in Alamo, Texas, in the dry, sprawling Rio Grande Valley. Sons Rob and David both live and work in Seattle. Since its inception, Frances has been active in Juneau's Habitat for Humanity organization, having served on the board, committees and as a volunteer coordinator. Hiking, bicycling, yard work and church involvement are other favorite activities.

Claire Seaman Rogers and husband Howard, who retired from Georgia Power Company, are busy with their North Georgia lake house. Their daughter, Cathy, works for the Southern Baptist International Mission Board in Costa Rica. Son Bill is an industrial engineer, and David is pastor of the First Baptist Church in Zapata, Texas. Claire's hobbies and activities include reading, needlepoint and taking Bible study courses.

The class of '60 had a wonderful 40th reunion. The Atlanta classmates did themselves proud as they hosted and managed all the festivities for the weekend. Almost all the '60s showed up at the parties on Friday and Saturday nights.

The classmate who had everyone atwitter was Harriet Lamb O'Connor. At age 40 she returned to medical school and now has a family practice in Texas. She is also very involved in setting up services to deal with family abuse.

For Beverly Delk Trytten, besides family, it is the growing "home" business that takes up the most time.

Anne Eyler Clodfelter teaches piano and directs two choirs. In addition, she has been plying her talents as an actress in several plays.

Lucy Cole Gratton has traded in her city ways to become a mountain woman. She lives in North Carolina—way back in the woods—caring for 45 acres. When she tires of the hills, she has a second home in Atlanta with her sister.

Corky Feagin Stone will be teaching another English course in Zurich, Switzerland. As this is her second year there, she is obviously very competent. Alas, she does not have room for the whole class to visit.

The busiest of all seems to be Suzanne Hoskins Brown, snow shoeing and skiing in the winter, bicycling, hiking and llama trekking in the summers. Furthermore, she serves on the boards for Guiding Eyes for the Blind and Ski for Light. As if she did not already have a full plate, she has volunteered to be the class secretary for the next five years. Suzanne says, "Only this class could elect the one classmate who can neither see nor read to be secretary!" News to Suzanne should be sent to her e-mail address: suzanne@sfl.org.

Bessie Murphy Lee received the Order of the Palmetto earlier this year for her work with the Greenville Literacy Association. She was featured in the May 17 issue of the Greenville News. Congratulations! (By the time this is in print, Bessie will have retired from the organization.)

Rosselot '58 Paints Down Under

For Martha Davis Rosselot '58, traveling took on new dimensions last year.

Under the combined auspices of Atlanta's Friendship Force and the Foundation for Hospital Art, Rosselot traveled to Australia and New Zealand as part of a group dedicated to beautifying hospitals around the world. Founded by John Feight, a former commercial artist with Scientific Atlanta, the Foundation for Hospital Art creates large murals and interconnected picture canvases to brighten hospital waiting areas and hallways.

"The foundation started in local Atlanta hospitals," Rosselot says. "Ultimately they realized they had to let go of the art and let other people paint. The foundation now travels all over the world. The participating artist creates the basic design and volunteers—workers, visitors and patients—finish the mural by painting by color dot."

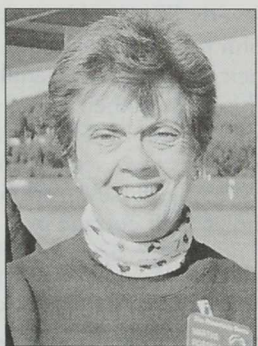

Rosselot was a philosophy major at Agnes Scott and earned a master's degree in religious education from Boston University.

During Rosselot's visit Down Under, her group painted at three hospitals—one in New Zealand and two in Australia. "My group consisted of about 30 people," Rosselot said. "In Gosford, Australia, which is along the coast about two hours north of Sydney, we had a large crowd—about 600 people. Our group would clean up the edges of the mural when the volunteers were done."

Rosselot says local artists often participate in the painting and hospitals sometimes combine the paintings with fundraising events. The process differs from hospital to hospital. "In Gosford," Rosselot notes, "the hospital brought in new ceiling tiles and we painted each of them with hopeful images—butterflies, fish, etc. In Sydney, we painted in the basement oncology area." The group also painted near Porirua in the Outer Wellington region of New Zealand.

The former director of religious education for several Presbyterian churches throughout Atlanta, Rosselot has taken several personal trips since her experiences with Friendship Force and The Foundation for Hospital Art. The mother of three and grandmother of two stays in touch with her host families from that trip and plans to repeat the experience. "This was a new experience for me," she says. "I hope it will not be my last."

Charlottesville, Va., is for sale, so they can hit the road with the possibility of encountering some ASC classmates in the coming year.

Elizabeth Hammond "Betsey" Moore has welcomed a new grandson, Daniel Jonathan Stevens, born to her son, Aaron, and his wife Edit, in Budapest, Hungary, on Dec. 2, 1999.

Judy Albergotti Hines has two grandchildren under the age of three, Daniel and Dillon. She has established a non-profit consulting firm, Hines Associates, which offers grant and policy writing, standards development, interim directorships and strategic planning. Judy is relocating to Charleston, S.C., to be nearer her 90-year-old mother, who is still driving, volunteering, etc.

Georgianne Richardson Herzog "loves to spoil" her 4-year-old granddaughter, Emma. Georgianne's youngest son, Geoff, is at Harvard Law School, preparing to be a litigator. She comments, "He got smart and decided not to try pro hockey. Thank goodness!"

With all children married and the number of grandchildren holding at nine, Ann McBride Chilcutt and husband are motoring around the United States. The latest reported trip took them the entire length of the Baja, then to Chautauqua, N.Y., for a month, over to the upper part of Michigan and down to Key West. Anne is "ready to stay home for a while."

Jean Corbett Griffin's husband, Emory, is professor of communications at Wheaton College. Their son, Jim, is a pilot with American Airlines; his wife, Jennifer, is an internist practicing in Chicago. Jim and Jennifer have two children, Alison and Kyle. Jean's daughter, Sharon, and her husband, George Schmidt, are educational journalists and teachers with the Chicago public schools.

Jennie Miller Helderman recently celebrated her 40th wedding anniversary with Frank, her Agnes Scott boyfriend. Frank publishes the local newspaper in Florence, Ala., for the New York Times. Jennie has worked with community, children and women's organizations at state and national levels. She is, moreover, an aspiring writer, having published two novelty books, Christmas Trivia and Hanukkah Trivia. A series of coincidences involving the Internet and a writer in South Africa resulted in Jennie's reconnecting with Renni Dillard Browne in time to attend the writers' conference she puts together each September, the Lost State Conference, in Greenville, Tenn. According to Jennie, "It features the top people in the business, a tribute to Renni's reputation and career in New York as an editor." Jennie says she can "highly recommend it

When Ethel Oglesby Horton's daughter was married last year in Atlanta, 1963 classmates Ellen Middlebrooks Granum, Jane Nabors Atchison and Harriet Cox Alston were present at the wedding.

After Peggy McGeachy Roberson and husband Bill retired, she went to Ethiopia in January to help teach in a women's conference for Illubabor-Bethel Synod. Both children are students at Davidson College.

Elizabeth Withers Kennedy retired last December. She plans to visit children and grandchildren on the West Coast, do antique appraisals, travel and garden.

Ever since Betty Challen Wooddy attended Boston College for a course in liturgical dance, she has taught dance at women's retreats and churches. She now has four grandchildren.

Lana Mueller Jordan's news involves her three grandchildren and her son, George, who was married last year in Florida. She was glad to see Lyn Horn George and Wane at the wedding.

Lyn Horn George and husband Wane are living in St. Augustine and renovating an old house on the water. They have three grandchildren, including a set of twins.

Sallie Boineau Freeman is on the faculty of the department of genetics at Emory University. Her daughter, Lauren, and husband Marc have a baby girl. Sallie's other daughter, Erin, is a budding conductor. She is guest-conducting the Savannah Symphony and directing the Collegium Vocale at Emory.

Doris Sanders, Pat Flythe Koonts and Carey Bowen Craig had a mini-reunion in Chattanooga, where they reportedly ate too well, saw the sights and had a marvelous time.

Milling Kinard spent last year traveling on opera trips to Italy, New York and Charleston. She also sang at the Berkshire Choral Festival in Sheffield, Mass. She enjoyed getting together with Mary Stokes Humphlett, Peggy Fredrick Smith and Betsey Jefferson Boyt at Mary's and Peggy's daughters' weddings. Milling also had a visit from Rosie Clark Stiefel in Highlands, N.C.

Carol Cowan Kussmaul welcomed a new grandson, saw her daughter graduate from the Duke School of Divinity and marry a classmate. In another celebration, Carol observed the fifth anniversary of Mini-Stitches, her quilt shop in Round Rock, Texas.

Betty Gillespie Proctor and husband Julian have moved to a smaller home. Their son, Richard, has entered Columbia Seminary and was married in June to Margaret Redman, from Seattle. Margaret graduated from FSU Law School.

Lynne Lambert Bower Andrews takes pleasure in her grandchildren and had a successful art show opening in Santa Fe, where she and husband Sandy live.

Jo Allison Smith Brown loves being in Cheyenne, Wyo., and working toward her dream of ranching. For the present she is a reading specialist in a public junior high school. She has just bought a home and now has three grandchildren. She continues to do storytelling and theater.

Katherine Davis Savage and her husband, Toby, live in Chapel Hill. There she works in the medical school at UNC, and Toby is an architect. They are fortunate enough to have three children all living within a 60-mile radius. They also have three grandchildren.

Rosemarie Traeger Sumerel's daughter, Mary Maurice, was married in May.

Libby Harshbarger Broadus' son, Toby, was married in May.

Emily Evans Robison's son, Mike, was married in July of 1999.

Carol Temple Williams Sellers' daughter, Temple, gave birth to a daughter, Sellers, last year.

The secretary, Lebby Rogers Neal, has two grandchildren and still counting.

Linda Gearreald Page writes that her film, The Healing Power of Herbs, was shown on PBS. Congratulations!

Ina Jones Hughs now has two grandchildren, 2 years and 8 months old, living in Houston. Ina's new manuscript about to be published is Lessons from Childhood. It is similar to the other two books she has in print. She teaches creative nonfiction through the University of Tennessee as well as participating in writing conferences throughout the country.

Bonnie Grace Hatfield Hairrell's daughter, English Hairrell '94, finished medical school at UAB and is doing her residency at Georgetown. Bonnie's youngest daughter, Nicky, started a doctoral program at Old Dominion University. Her husband is in the Navy.

Carolyn Lown Clark writes from League City, Texas, that she and her husband travel as much as possible. Although she no longer works, she helps out where she can with her four grandchildren (all under 4). In Canton, Ohio, her daughter and son-in-law have twin 2-year-old boys and a 4-year-old son. Her son and daughter-in-law are in Wilmington, N.C., with their 2-year-old daughter. Carolyn enjoys her book discussion group and related travel to New Orleans. Next year she will possibly go to Savannah and Charleston. Her e-mail address is clrkbc@pdq.net.

Lebby Rogers Neal '62 sent in the news that Ellen Middlebrooks Granum's three children are busy with academic studies in exciting places such as Hawaii and Fiji.

Lelia Jones Graham and Al took an exciting trip to Antarctica and Chile last December. Al has now retired, and the Grahams hope to do more traveling.

CORRECTION: Sally Rodwell Whetstone and her family live in Wilmington, N.C. When she is not busy as chair of the counseling department at New Hanover High School, she has fun traveling.

Sue Keith-Lucas Carson and George are now grandparents: Keith William Rupe was born Jan. 7 to oldest daughter Betsy and husband Allan. Sue spent 10 days in San Antonio as a hands-on grandma just after the baby arrived, and the whole family was there for Keith's baptism at the Easter Vigil. Youngest daughter Jill will enter Agnes Scott this fall in the class of '04. Sue calls it a "scary thing" to have a daughter entering college exactly 40 years after she did, but says she looks forward to sharing reunions. Sue and George have discovered Elderhostels. Obviously, those are not just for parents anymore. Sue did one at the Art Institute of Chicago in February, and they studied California wines and authors in Sonoma in June.

Now that Maria Wornom Rippe's husband, Peter, has retired from his museum work, they are traveling between two homes: one at Wintergreen Resort, just off the Blue Ridge Parkway; the other, a condo in Richmond, near the retirement home where Maria's parents are in the health care wing. They look forward to further travel around the country and the world.

Maria and Mary Lou Laird attended their 40th high school reunion in April.

Kelly Mulherin Oates and Jack traveled to Italy with a group of University of Montana students early in 1999. In September a family trip, with daughters Katie and Nancy joining Kelly and Jack to accompany Kelly's father to Ireland to visit his "roots," was diverted by a late-season hurricane and transmogrified into a tour of Austria, Switzerland and parts of Germany. Jack's church in Missoula, Mont., is growing and is in the midst of a major building campaign.

Mary Jo Beverly Limbird retired from teaching in May 1999 and trekked across country last summer with husband Glenn's sister, Anita, three cats and "Arnold, the famous Pomeranian," to join Glenn at their property in western North Carolina. Mary Jo is already involved in the church and has joined the local Friends of the Library. Son Mark will stay in California, where he is a deputy sheriff, but son Jonathan has opted for North Carolina, though not necessarily to live with Mom and Dad. Mary Jo likes being near her parents in Asheville.

Boyd Bauer Cater and husband Gene live in Greenville, S.C., and have three grown children and two grandchildren. Boyd leads an older Girl Scout troop: two members received their Gold Award this spring; three others will earn that honor next year. Boyd also serves the Greenville County Red Cross as a member of the Water Safety Committee chaired by Kacky Chambers Elliott. Not only does Boyd teach swimming, but she is involved with water in its solid form, too. She's a skilled ice dancer and teaches ice-skating to pre-schoolers. "I test as a master's (over 50)," she says; "I can clutch a partner all the way around the ice." Away from water, Boyd is active in Christian Formation programs as well as in the choir at St. James Episcopal Church.

In January the secretary, Mary Womack Cox, was officially appointed communications officer for the Diocese of Southeast Florida and has to brag a little. She returned from the national Episcopal Communicators meeting in March with six awards—five for various aspects of the diocesan newspaper, The Net, and one for her "EpiscoRat" cartoon in the monthly newsletter. (EpiscoRat can be found on the diocesan website: www.diosecf.org.)

The class of 1966 was well represented at the Alumnae Association's Millennium Retreat and Conference held at Sea Island, Ga., in February. Of the 95 participants in the conference, 17 of them were members of the class.

Mary Brown Bullock spoke in the opening session on Saturday morning.

Gail Savage Glover is the president of Glover and Associates, Inc., an investment advisory firm. She co-chaired the session on financial matters at the retreat.

Virginia Quattlebaum Lacy is principal of an elementary school in Columbia, S.C. Along with Nancy Bland Norton, she led the education session.

Nancy Bland Norton has been the assistant superintendent for the Candler County school system for the past 10 years.

Felicia Guest is a health educator and medical writer. She is currently associate director at the Southeast AIDS Education and Training Center, Emory University School of Medicine. Felicia was co-chair of the discussion on health matters at the retreat.

Class President Susan Thomas summed up the Millennium Retreat aptly, "A splendid time was had by all!"

Others in attendance were Alice Davidson, Susan Landrum, Betsy Anderson Little, Kay Roseberry McCarron, Elizabeth McGeachy Mills, Portia Owen Morrison, Jan Gaskell Ross, Martha Thompson, Anne Morse Topple and Nancy Bruce Truluck.

The class secretary, Betty Garlington Christy, has gleaned a listing of e-mail addresses for the class of 1966 and has distributed it to those on the list. It is hoped this will help fellow Madeleines stay in touch with one another. Those wishing to have their names on this list will

Carol Jensen Rychly is working on her Ph.D. in mathematics at the University of South Carolina. Her son, Matt, was married in August.

Gayle Grubb Hass (now known as Dorothy Gayle Hass) reports that Judy Dewitt Adams visited her and caught her up on all the class news from the reunion last year. Judy not only shared her class gossip, but also reorganized Gayle's kitchen. In turn, Gayle took Judy to some wonderful Northern California coastal sites. Judy's husband, Bruce, joined her at the end of the week so that they could set forth on an anniversary trip.

Pat Grant Gooding confesses that her three children are all taller than she. One is in college; the other two are still at home. Husband Bob works in the second mortgage business while Pat is the rector's secretary at an Episcopal church.

Among her many activities, Dottie Duval Nelson is a hostess to long-lost roommates.

Johnnie Martin-Carey spent a few days with her in New Orleans while taking a break from showing horses in Gulfport. Johnnie lives outside Dallas on a small farm with her husband, Brian, a dog, Molly, and about 20 horses. Brian is a telecommunications consultant whom she met while both worked at the Federal Reserve Banks of Atlanta, Boston and Chicago. Brian and Johnnie have a Web site they use to advertise their horses, www.steeleawayfarm.com.

Mary Anne Murphy Hornbuckle and Jon took a summer hiking trip in Tennessee with friends.

Chris Engelhard Meade sadly relates that she recently lost her mother, Jane, to breast cancer. Jane was undergoing chemotherapy and radiation in an effort to be able to attend granddaughter Claire's wedding in June. Claire received her master's degree in elementary education and will be teaching at a new charter school in Tampa this fall. Chris's other daughter, Elizabeth, class of 2000, was inducted into Phi Beta Kappa. She works at the CDC, getting experience in immunology/gene therapy before applying to graduate school. Chris's son, Ben, is finishing his freshman year at Furman.

Lalla Griffis Mangin and Al flew to England to visit old friends in London and then toured northern England via train and car.

Peggy Johnston Nesbit sends news about a job shift for her. She will now be the Pre-K supervisor for Cobb County Schools. The county will be adding units of Georgia Pre-K and Head Start. She will oversee the building of two new facilities, to include everything from prenatal care and counseling through Pre-K services and adult education. Son Scott is a freshman at Emory at Oxford, majoring in English. Her daughter, Heather, has completed her master's at Oklahoma State University and is teaching second grade. She is married to a Presbyterian minister and lives in Perry, Okla.

Dorothy Schrader directed the University of Oklahoma's French Study Abroad program in Paris this summer. Her husband, Richard Hartman, assisted with the tutorials and cultural excursions. Their daughter, Elizabeth, celebrated her 13th birthday in France.

Jan Cribbs joyfully reports that she graduated from East Tennessee State University with a master's in storytelling. This summer she served as adjunct faculty member at ETSU for three storytelling institutes. She attended the National Storytelling Conference and went on a storytelling cruise to Athens, Greece, the Greek Isles and Istanbul, Turkey, before returning home to Decatur. She invites anyone who wants to talk to her about storytelling to call her.

Bunny Teeple Sheffield took time off from teaching outdoor education and doing school/camp administrative work in the fall of 1999 to be with her grandmother full time in her last months. She describes the opportunity as a privilege and an enormous learning experience. Having changed routines anyway, she has not jumped back into previous schedules. Instead, Bunny traveled to Madagascar with husband John, daughter Anna and Carol Blessing Ray's son, Chris, to see her younger daughter, Perry, who has been doing environmental research and projects on a Fulbright Fellowship.

India Culpepper Dennis graduated from Princeton Theological Seminary on May 15th and has accepted a position as associate pastor at the Palma Solá Presbyterian Church in Bradenton, Fla. Because she unfortunately was in finals during the week of Alumnae Weekend, she was unable to attend.

The class extends its sympathy to Helen "D.B." DeWitt Whittaker, whose father died in December 1998. Her daughter, Elizabeth, started kindergarten last fall and loves it.

Angie Hoyt and William went to London to attend a family wedding celebration. The trip was short but wonderful. Those who attended the 25th reunion know by now that they did a beautiful job hosting the class of 1975's reunion party. Many, many thanks!

Ruthie McManus Mansfield is in Atlanta, where daughter Sarah is 17 and a junior at the Paideia School. Son Matt is 20 and a sophomore at Duke University.

Anna Case-Winters just completed a year's sabbatical during which she worked on her second book, Reconstructing a Christian Theology of Nature. She enjoyed her study at Oxford and is happy to be back teaching theology at McCormick Seminary in Chicago.

Vicki Cook Leonhardt and her sister, Sheryl '80, now own the family jewelry store, Tom Cook Jewelers, Inc., in Daytona Beach. Her son, Whittaker, is in the ninth grade; and her daughter, Ashley, the 11th. Vicki and husband Fred, an attorney, live in downtown Orlando.

Victoria Burgess Stephan proclaims this a fabulous year. For part of it, she was executive director for the Ronald McDonald House of Southwest Florida. She loved the job, but decided to use the 15 cumulative years of nonprofit experience to start her own business of consulting and training boards of directors in strategic planning and leadership retreats. For leisure she and Bruce vacationed in St. Kitts in the West Indies. They get much enjoyment boating. Son Wade is 20 and a junior at the University of Florida. High school sophomore Brad is 16. Vicki loves the teenage years.

Tammi E. DeVore has just been promoted to director of marketing for hospital information systems with McKessonHBOC. She may well be returning to Georgia after all these years.

Della McMillan works as a freelance anthropologist based in Gainesville, Fla. Last fall, she spent five weeks in Kenya, Uganda, Ethiopia and Djibouti associated with a US AID-sponsored project to promote agriculture production in arid and semi-arid zones. Her daughter, Jane, graduated from first grade.

Susan Balch Clapham celebrated the birth of twins, Charlotte Holley and Julia Street, on Dec. 11, 1998. She wrote that it has been a wild year with a teenager, a toddler and twin infants but that they have survived and are absolutely loving their girls. Husband David is now a Howard Hughes senior investigator and professor at Harvard Medical School and Children's Hospital in Boston. Susan is occupied with their busy girls. She wonders parenthetically if they might be future Scotties.

Charlotte Gillis celebrated the millennium as well as her mother's 70th birthday on a family cruise in the Mediterranean. She and Tracy met her mother and sister in Venice, Italy, and ended up in Barcelona, Spain, after visiting Greece, Turkey, Malta, Italy, Monaco and France. Charlotte is glad finally to have SEEN many of the places featured on Marie Pepe slide shows!

Sarah Charlotte Brooke Coleman's father passed away last March after a short illness. She and Lee bought a house in the south of France as a holiday home for now and a retirement home for later. It's located on a golf course, and Sarah assumes that her mother will be kept quite happy. She is hoping to tempt the Mockridges and the Mansfields over in the future.

Janey Andrews Brown just bought a Victorian house on the National Historic Register to use as a business. It will be a facility for members of her community to enjoy as a party destination, wedding and/or reception locale, but can serve as well as a destination for enrichment events, seminars and other occasions. Janey has six children: Walt, 19, at the College of Charleston; Jay, 17; David, 16, Kelly, 9; Jamie, 8; and Laura Ann, 5.

Fran Maguire Paist missed everyone at the reunion but was with her husband on a cruise that had been planned for some time. She started a business, The Write Thing, a creative writing service "for the times that matter most." Service includes original poetry or short essays written with the client's goals in mind. Fran feels that it's not just how one says it, it's what is said.

The class of 1980 had a fabulous turnout for the 20th reunion! A highlight was the class directories made by Patricia Arnzen Brookshire, giving the scoop on what most of the class members had been up to over the past 20 years. As new officers were chosen, Pat graciously volunteered to be the new class secretary. Thanks to her nose for news, these pages will always be filled with someone to read about. Class president is Cindy Dantzler Shearer, and vice president is Keller Murphy Torrey. Lee Harber Rountree will serve as fund chair. Ironically, Lee was on the class "lost list." Because of her accepted responsibilities, she won't be lost anymore.

The class is also very fortunate that Susie Ham Deiters and Peggy Somers Shepard agreed to stay on as reunion chairs. They did a spectacular job of keeping the class entertained this year. Susie and Peggy gave out awards at the end of the week-end for various achievements such as traveling the farthest to be at the reunion. Sandy Burson Hosford, who came from England, and Kathy Zarkowsky Broderick, from Germany, shared that distinction.

Youngest future alum present at the reunion was Mattie, the newly adopted daughter of Sharon Maitland Moon.

Most prompt in returning her reunion confirmation note was Jenny Spencer Osorio, with a turnabout of two days. Least prompt was Lee Harber Rountree, but classmates must remember she was "lost." The classmate who changed the least was Kathy Hollywood; the most changed was Glenda (a friend of Cindy Dantzler Shearer, whom no one else in the class knew).

Grace Haley Hamilton won the dubious honor of having the most Mrs. Designations, having had three trips to the altar.

Emily Moore was recognized for having the most likely future as a judge. Judge Judy should now move aside. Emily has been appointed to chair the elder law certification committee, which drafts and grades exams that certify attorneys in the specialty of elder law. She says this is quite a high honor. In other news, she and her mother made their annual trek to Disney World in 1999. As a lay minister Emily enjoys speaking engagements at Trinity Restoration Center in Quincy, Fla. She also sold her overabundant homestead of 25 acres for a smaller, low-maintenance townhouse.

Special recognition went to the person who traveled the least to get there. Pat Arnzen Brookshire, who lives a few blocks from campus, won easily.

In the most children category, Susan Harris Queen topped the list with nine (okay, so two of them are stepchildren, but no one splits hairs on this hands-down victory). The oldest legitimate child, now a college freshman, belongs to Mary Ann Mappus Billard.

The funniest reunion story heard by the class secretary was told by Mary Ann Hill. As she was exiting the parking deck en route to a class of '80 function, she felt young and vital and was meticulously groomed. Well, she was looking good; and she knew it until a group from the class of '70 called out to her, "Hey, aren't you one of ours?" Mary Ann could only concur that indeed, "pride cometh before the fall." The secretary emphasizes that in no way did she look 52 years old. The eyes are the second thing to go!

The class hopes to have even more friends around for the 25th

McBride '78: Environment Police

DEFINING INDUSTRIAL HYGIENE

For the past seven years, Judith Bartholomew McBride '78 has spent a lot of time explaining exactly what she does.

"Most people don't know what an industrial hygienist is," says McBride, assistant director of chemical safety at the University of Alabama at Birmingham. "We perform inspections of research labs, advise labs regarding the responsible use of chemicals and ensure compliance with regulations regarding waste disposal."

McBride, who majored in biology at Agnes Scott, spent several years after her graduation as a medical technician. "I liked the health aspect of it," she says. "I just did not want to spend the rest of my life in a lab."

McBride returned to school and earned her master of science degree in public health from UAB in 1991. Married with a daughter who was 7 at the time, McBride did not want to leave the Birmingham area. She returned to work as a medical technician for a year then joined UAB in 1993.

McBride, whose husband, Michael, is an assistant professor and the director of learning technology at UAB, is part of a research safety team. "We each have an area of concentration—environmental, chemical, biological and radiation." McBride's department also investigates any complaints regarding the university's facilities and conducts orientations for faculty, staff and students. "As a state institution," she says, "we are not directly under OSHA, but we adhere to their guidelines as a standard."

McBride calls her years at Agnes Scott "the time of [her] life" and credits the College with teaching her how to write.

"Dr. Bowden taught me to write a scientific paper," she says, "and I am so grateful."

McBride concludes that the College forever changed her attitude toward learning. "I now see it as a lifelong endeavor."

Cynthia White Tynes will go back to school to get her master's in teaching certification at Mercer, starting in the fall.

Patti Pair Martin completed her 17th year of teaching economics at Chattahoochee High School in Atlanta, where she is on the faculty with another ASC grad, Bonnie Aronin '62. Patti enjoyed the challenge of teaching an advanced placement course in microeconomics, the first to be taught in her Fulton County district since 1990.

Sheri Holmes Ward has five children and is finishing a nursing graduate program to be a nurse practitioner.

At the end of 1999 Carla Eidson Pierce resigned from her job of 15 years with the Environmental Protection Agency to become a stay-at-home mom. Carla and her husband, Jeff, are busy with their new son, Jason, who arrived safely in September after a challenging pregnancy and delivery.

Once again, Caroline Cooper Wilhelm, husband Bill and children Anna and Benjamin spent May and June in Oxford, England. Anna and Benjamin finished their academic year in English schools while Bill was teaching at Oxford. This was their fourth family excursion abroad. Back in Boston, Caroline teaches part time at Regis College, volunteers in her children's classrooms, has a Sunday school class, participates in a book club and sings with the Boston Masterworks Choral.

Susanna Michelson Goheen has completed her third year of medical school (with one more to go) and will specialize in either medicine or medicine-pediatrics.

Edna Gray Farrar was named "Volunteer of the Year" for the State of Georgia at the National SIDS Convention for her work with KIDZ BOOKZ, a program that makes books on coping with grief and loss available to children. Edna was instrumental in organizing the program and categorizing the books by age appropriateness. On the home front, she is "slow on a train to the nut house" after nursing her mother through a broken shoulder, her husband through two broken elbows and her daughter, Anna, through several illnesses.

Edna writes that Patricia Ballew Hibbard is no stranger to the broken bones department, either, having nursed her mom through a broken leg.

Cayce Callaway is associate producer of a Warner Bros. documentary film, Into the Arms of Strangers, scheduled to air on TV next year. The film focuses on the Kindertransport by which the British moved 10,000 children—mostly Jewish—to England just prior to WWII. Cayce is also working on a companion book with Bloomsbury Press that will be released with the film.

Janet Bundrick Burnley has a new position as team leader in compensation for Walt Disney World Co. Husband Rick is a manager at Disney's Animal Kingdom. Their son, Ben, is a rising third grader. Janet, Rick and Ben flew to Paris this summer to visit Rick's brother, who lives there. Janet also visited with Anne Drue Miller Anderson '83 and her daughter while they were at Disney World.

Robin Ogier Warren has completed her second year of coursework in her doctoral program in English at the University of Georgia. In March she presented a paper at the Appalachian Studies Association meeting in Knoxville, Tenn., and encountered Susan Virginia Mead '82, who was giving a paper, too.

Also at Athens, Sarah McCullough is pursuing her master's in historic preservation at the University of Georgia. She and Robin Warren get together when paper deadlines permit.

Cindy Stewart Stauffer and her husband, John, are both lieutenant colonels in the Air Force and stationed at the Pentagon. They are proud parents of John Davis Stauffer Jr., who arrived on Aug. 12, 1999, 11 months after their wedding.

Linda Soltis was a member of the committee that produced a year 2000 calendar of Buffalo Bills' football players and their pets. Linda's dog, Dixie Lee, was featured in the calendar along with Linda's mother's dog. She likes her job with Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Western New York, the corporate sponsor of the calendar.

Catherine Fleming Bruce, professor of mass communications at Claflin College, Orangeburg, S.C., was featured in The State, a newspaper in Columbia. The article discussed Catherine's work as a human rights activist, mentioning the group that Catherine formed, The Collaborative for Community Trust, made up of educators committed to social change. She and husband Arthur have a 7-year-old son, Alaric; they live in Hopkins, S.C.

After 12 years of being a fundraiser at a performing arts and educational organization, Kathryn Marie Scott jumped into a marketing/sales job in the "dot-com" realm last May. The transition from corporate relations at UC Berkeley to the promotions department at Yahoo! has been a true adventure and much fun. The new work digs come with a longer commute, more purple (everywhere) and a cube home. Other adventures that Kathryn and Melanie have shared during the past couple of years include buying a house in San Francisco, spending three weeks in Peru hiking the Inca Trail and exploring the Amazon jungle. Kathryn is now Aunt Kathy to her nephew, Jack.

Cindy McGee Hitt relocated to Illesheim, Germany, with the U.S. Army. Illesheim is a very small farming village in Bavaria. She and her husband, David, arrived in Germany in March, so they are still getting their feet wet. They have been out exploring the local area and really like it so far. David has begun his new job with the Army. Son Patrick, 4, appears to be adjusting to life in a foreign country. He is very inquisitive about what the Germans do and say and has learned "Thank you" and "Goodbye" in German. Cindy is a stay-at-home mom.

Katesy Watson has finally left Capitol Hill and is currently vice president of communications for the American Gas Association. While her tenure in politics was interesting, to say the least (starting with a stint with former Congressman Newt Gingrich and concluding as a chief of staff for an embattled freshman from the class of 1996), she decided it was time to try something else. In fact, when she could name virtually every member of Congress who popped up on C-SPAN, she knew it was time to move on. Katesy lives in Falls Church, Va., is active with several charities and rides horses in her spare time.

Laura Salter Braaten and her husband, Rick, live in a beautiful rural area in upstate New York. After five years they are still adjusting to the abundance of snow and cold weather. As a clinical psychologist in private practice, Laura specializes in women's health. Outside of work, she enjoys quilting and gardening. Since Rick was given tenure at Colgate, they feel that they really live there now, although they will never be accepted as true Northerners. They take that reality as a compliment.

Magalie Paul Boyer and her husband, Bobby, have four children: Philip, 12; Rachel, 10; Rebekah, 8; and Jonathan, 6. Magalie teaches English at Clemson University.

Marilyn Selles is still looking for Mr. Right. She moved back to San Francisco, where she is employed as a bilingual (English/Spanish) interpreter.

Edie Hsiung Krakowiak is working as a youth minister at St. Patrick's Episcopal Church in Dunwoody, Ga.

Patti Spellman married Frank Puzini at St. Thomas More Catholic Church in Decatur on Oct. 2, 1999.

Andrea Morris Kasuya formed a dance school for adults and children in Japan 13 years ago. Called Dance International, it specializes in jazz and ballet.

Angela Almgren Bakke and a group in her neighborhood started a new Friends (formerly Twigs) volunteer group for Children Healthcare of Atlanta. Angela is the treasurer.

Last summer Barbara Caulk Bell, Sandy Dell Futch, Rachel Rochman Derrico, Jan Clapp Bomar '87, Agnes Parker Wells and all their children went to St. George Island. Was it really a vacation?

Maria Gonzalez finished her third year of residency in internal medicine at Tulane University. She also helped start a singing group called DoCapella. In December Maria traveled with Noel Durham Robinson and her husband, Lewis, and baby Gabriel to Puerto Rico for a week.

After 13 years as a stockbroker, Mary Margaret Krauth McDonough left Bank of America. She took a rewarding four and one-half months' paid vacation before going to work as a compliance examiner with NASD Regulation.

Nancy Eraca-Cornish is an adjunct professor at Corning Community College, teaching civil litigation to paralegal students. In addition, she is the chief public defender for Chemung County and a partner in private practice.

Josie Gilchrist Prado is completing her master's program for TESOL, the teaching of English for speakers of other languages.

Laurel Seibels Justice went on a back-country snowshoe survival trip in the Colorado National Forest with 16 other women. She also competed in a regional amateur ballroom dancing contest, winning first place in American Smooth.

Amy Hutchinson joined the staff of Medical University of South Carolina in Charleston as an assistant professor of ophthalmology and director of residency training in pediatric ophthalmology.

Maria Mercedes "Mercy" Badia-Travis and her husband, Virgil, celebrated the birth of their first son, Gabriel Enrique. She is organizing her own law firm specializing in immigration law.

Lisa Huber Fragakis doesn't want to slow down. She has completed her first two triathlons. Julie Walls '87 competed in the second with her.

Agnes Parker Wells quit her teaching job of 10 years and is back in school getting her master's in French literature.

Laura Smith remains in San Francisco, but has left Hewlett Packard. She became the senior financial analyst for Alta Vista.

Susan Vargas Stephani, her husband, Rinos Stefani, and their new son, Orestis, are living in Cyprus, where she is working as an artist. She is helping to illustrate a book of poems for her sister, Caroline.

The secretary is sad to report the death of Julie Johnson Danner due to cancer.

Claudette Cohen is graduating from the University of North Carolina at Wilmington with an MFA in creative writing. Her thesis, a novel titled The Seasoning of Rebecca, won an outstanding thesis award from UNCW's creative writing department. It was selected, furthermore, as a finalist in the Heekin Group Foundation's writing fellowship program. Her poems published in The Southern Anthology, Earth's Daughters, Owen Wister Review, Main Street Rag, Fireweed, Bay Leaves and Aurora have won awards from the Poetry Council of North Carolina, the North Carolina Poetry Society and the Writers' Ink Guild. Claudette is working on her next two novels and a book of poetry.

Jacqueline DeCarlo spent several months traveling in Latin America, where she studied Spanish and investigated migration issues for the U.S. Committee for Refugees. She will return to Washington, D.C., in the summer.

Heather Moseley Harte hosted a few out-of-town classmates this spring. Joan Wadkins and her husband, Danny Goldberg, and son Duncan traveled to Atlanta from Minnesota. Heather entertained at an Easter lunch for Joan and her family as well as for Margaret Hamm Venable, the secretary, and their families. A few weeks later, Charlotte Hoffman was in Atlanta on business and managed to attend a tea party to end all tea parties for 5-year-old Emily Harte.

Cherie Arnette changed jobs, returning to teach at her old high school. She liked teaching world history, but is looking forward to teaching geography and taking on the sponsorship of the Scholars' Bowl team. She is down the hall from Linda Lael '66, the alumna who first brought Cherie to the College for an overnight visit when Cherie was a senior in high school.

Heidi Staven Carpenter, her husband, Paul, and her mother are members of a family band that performs in the contemporary service at the Lutheran Church of the Messiah in Decatur, Ga. Heidi's husband is the worship leader for the service, and Heidi is happy singing three-part harmony at the church where she grew up and where her mother has been the choir director/organist for over 25 years.

Kathryn Deane Chambless and her husband opened their home to visitors on the Druid Hills Tour of Homes in Atlanta. More than 2,200 went through their house, and Kathryn displayed many items of College memorabilia. Kathryn and her husband, Larry, worked very hard preparing their home and garden. Now they get to enjoy all of their work.

Rebecca Earnshaw and husband John completed the renovation of their second Victorian duplex in Savannah, Ga., and are about to tackle a quadraplex. They recently spent a week in Ireland and time in Hawaii. Their Labrador retriever, Cicero, was diagnosed with cancer, but is now in full remission, thanks to the half-body radiation treatments he received from Auburn University.

Carolyn Weaver Field and Pete traveled to the Mayan Riviera of Mexico. Their 2-year-old daughter, Rebecca, stayed with Carolyn's mother, Nancy Deal Weaver '48, for the entire week so that Carolyn and Pete could have a week alone. They snorkeled, visited some Mayan ruins and saw huge, colorful parrot fish. In all, Carolyn and Pete survived without Rebecca, who did wonderfully with her grandmother. Carolyn and Kathie White Harper '88 have agreed to serve as joint leaders for the Charlotte area alumnae group. With over 200 alumnae in the Charlotte area, they are hoping to plan exciting and well-attended functions.

Cindy Franks has been working with Sharon Tiller, now a professional photographer, taking pictures of the residents at Presbyterian Homes of Georgia, where Cindy works.

Rebecca Bradley Fretty and her husband, Steve, are enjoying their 2-year-old daughter, Elizabeth, and took her to see Blue's Clues Live at Radio City Music Hall. Rebecca is working with Unilever in marketing and is presently engaged in a campaign for Snuggle Fabric Softener. Her husband and his business partner are busy with mergers and acquisitions of billboard companies through their own business, Johnsen, Fretty and Co.

Katherine "Kate" Baird Hammond and daughter Parker moved into their new home, just around the corner from the home of Catherine "Cat" Martin Lindauer '88, and are busy decorating and unpacking. Kate often spends time with Ginger Patton-Schmitt and Kimberly Osias, Parker's godmothers.

Louisa Parker Mattozzi was awarded a Fulbright fellowship to Italy for the 2000-01 academic year. Graduate students across the country in all disciplines competed. Out of approximately 800 students from all academic fields who applied for the fellowship, only 26 award winners were selected. Consequently, Louisa is doubly excited about the opportunity. She also received the Yalden-Thomson Summer Research grant from the Society of Fellows of the University of Virginia to conduct research in Italian archives during the summer of 2000.

Dusty Hill Matthews has kept on the go with her son, Griffin, as well as with her book and investment clubs. She enjoys her new home, built by her husband, Marc, last year. In a trip to Scotland, Dusty found the weather cold but Scotland beautiful, so much so that she and her family cannot wait to return in a few years. In March, Dusty, Daphne Burt, Darlene "Dolly" Purvis and Allison Adams spent a weekend together in St. Augustine, Fla. They all were entranced with the warm weather and their time together. Dusty also met Virginia "Ginny" Rosenberg in St. Augustine in November and visited with Heather Goodall in May.

Mitrina Mogelnicki photographed the Ladies Professional Golf Tournament (LPGA), hosted by Nancy Lopez in Atlanta. Mitrina has been busy with her photography, including portraits of Georgia's governor, Roy Barnes. Sharon Tiller collaborated with Mitrina recently on a few assignments. Mitrina has been in touch with many of her classmates and reports that Caroline Lewis Stake is managing with her two boys, ages 5 and 1, as is Gwendolyn "Gwenie" Palmer Adkins, with twin boys and Shelby Threlkeld Weiss, with two of the same "persuasion." In further news, Milagros "Mila" Davila is in the final stages of finishing her town home in Vinings, Ga., and Alice Kennedy Jackson and her husband, Steve, have built another new home on the lake in Newnan, Ga. Mitrina also visited with Jill Owens and Tina Carr in Washington, D.C., helping Tina select paint colors for her new townhouse in Reston, Va. Finally, Mitrina bumped into Coach Cindy Peterson, whom she had not seen in over five years, and enjoyed catching up with her.

In April Nelathi Nanayakkara-DeSoysa and her husband, Sheanath, welcomed a little girl weighing six pounds into the world. She was born with her eyes wide open. Both grandmothers are assisting with the "nocturnal feedings," and Nela is doing well.

Mary Ruth Oliver spent a week in Chihuahua, Mexico, with a group of 26 missionaries from her church, First Baptist Church, in Glenville, Ga. They helped with a construction project and taught Bible school to over 70 orphans. Mary Ruth and her former college roommate, Kathryn Deane Chambliss, ran into each other in the Alumnae House and had a great time exchanging news. Mary Ruth is director for student programs for the Professional Association of Georgia Educators (PAGE), and is working with a task force studying teacher recruitment and retention for Georgia schools. Also on this task force are two other alumnae, Peggy Miller Torrey '76, former executive director of the Georgia Professional Standards Commissions, and Georgia state Rep. Kathy Blee Ashe '68.

Kimberly Osias, a freelance writer, reporter and producer for Turner Broadcasting, has had several stories broadcast on CNN.

Ginger Patton-Schmitt and Eleanor Dill spent a week at St. George Island, Fla., with eight members of the class of 1988. A good time was had by all, renewing memories with old friends.

During Alumnae Weekend, Dolly Purvis and Allison Adams proudly accepted the first-ever Mollie Merrick trophy. The award is beautiful—a silver bowl mounted on burl wood—and is inscribed "Class of 1989."

Elsa Newman Schaefer teaches math at Marymount University in Arlington, Va. She has been promoted to associate professor, and treasures spending time with her 5-year-old daughter, Maisie. Also, Elsa married Scott Schaefer in January. Best wishes!

Jennifer Boyens Victor and her husband, Bill, moved into a new subdivision in Avondale Estates, Ga. Jennifer's college roommate, Kim Mitchell Platnick, her husband and their little boy live next door. Jennifer and Bill are delighted with their home and are slowly unpacking boxes. She works with Ernst and Young's Legal Management Services Group, which she co-founded two years ago, and travels to see clients in New York and in Connecticut. Her husband is an IT specialist in 3D computer animation for IBM. In June, Jennifer and her family went to Boston and then toured the coast of Maine.

Afterwards, in a show of resourcefulness, they crowded 17 people into their den around the fireplace and heated up dinner over the coals.

After graduation, Evren Dagdelen moved to Vienna to continue her studies and to receive a graduate degree from the Diplomatic Academy. In 1993, she entered the Turkish Foreign Ministry and in 1996 received a master's in European politics from the College of Europe in Brugge, Belgium. Then she was posted to the Turkish Delegation at the European Union in Brussels. She next moved to Tashkent, Uzbekistan, to work at the Turkish Embassy there. As of Sept. 15 she will be returning to the MFA in Ankara. Evren would love to hear from her classmates and can be contacted at leeselfeb@yahoo.com

In July, Elizabeth Huber Sorensen moved to Fort Leavenworth, Kan. Making an important step in his career as an officer, her husband is attending the Army's Command and General Staff College for one year. Elizabeth does not have any children, so she is concentrating on meeting different people and becoming involved in as many activities as she can handle. After Fort Leavenworth, she and her husband will continue to move around the country and possibly go to Germany or Hawaii for future assignments. She likes seeing the country and learning about the history and different cultures through her travels. Already Elizabeth has found out a great deal about the government and military (from an Army perspective, of course).

On May 13, Michelle Moses Lackey married Craig Allison Lackey. Craig is a graduate of St. Louis and Washington Universities, employed as first vice president and senior counsel of Bank One in Phoenix, Ariz. The couple resides in Phoenix.

Amy Lovell is coming to Decatur to join the Agnes Scott College faculty as assistant professor of physics and astronomy. She starts in August and will be working out of the Bradley Observatory. This summer she will travel to Arecibo, Puerto Rico, home of the earth's largest telescope, to observe a new comet.

Kim Lamkin Drew, Rus and Anna Katherine spent a week at St. Simons Island with Kim's parents. Kim is pleased to report that Anna Katherine was potty-trained in the first week of May.

Teresa Ramirez Dore and her family are now in Alpharetta. She plays tennis, teaches religious education and is a full-time mother and wife. For a Mothers' Day present, she received a trip to Grand Haven, Mich.

After working in the Agnes Scott Development Office for nine years, Andrea Johnson Swilley left to become the director of development for Public Broadcasting Atlanta (WABE 90.1 FM and WPBA 30). She and Britt remain in Decatur and are quite occupied chasing John, 8, and Thomas, 5. Britt and Andrea volunteer through their church and with the Decatur Business Association. She chaired this June's Decatur beach party.

Marsha Michie is in her second year of graduate school in anthropology at UNC, Chapel Hill. She is working toward a Ph.D. She has been married for three and a half years to Joseph Smith, whom she started dating during her senior year at ASC.

Because she was at orientation for the Educator Exchange program, Mary Ann Athens was unable to attend the reunion. This summer she will travel on scholarship to Ottawa and Montreal to participate in a program called "Exploring the Canadian Mosaic." Mary Ann and her students received grants this year allowing them to create two beautiful ceramic tile murals. She and husband Clay love Asheville and welcome having guests visit them in the mountains.

Laura Perry Bates and her husband, Brandon, vacationed in Rome, Venice and the South of Italy. They visited Brandon's relatives in Italy and also spent a night in Paris. In community affairs Laura and her sisters volunteered for the Avon walk for Breast Cancer. She will have to walk 20 miles each day for three days and must raise $1,800 to participate during the weekend of Sept. 22. She presented a paper titled "Awareness and Utilization of Community Arts Outreach Programs Within General Music Curricula: A Survey of Elementary Music Teachers In Metropolitan Atlanta" for a music educators' leadership conference at Georgia State, then again in January for the Georgia Music Educators Association Convention in Savannah. Jennifer was commissioned in May to become the Artistic Director/Conductor for the Metropolitan Atlanta Young Singers (MAYS). The MAYS are a prestigious choral group for unchanged voices and have produced a compact disk and toured in Austria and Hungary. Jennifer is still performing in main stage productions with the Atlanta Opera Chorus and doing leading roles with the Capitol City Opera Company. Most recently, she was Cinderella in a light opera called Meanwhile Back at Cinderella's at the 14th Street Playhouse. As if these accomplishments were not enough, Jennifer assists her husband, Nathan, in Langley and Associates, their new manufacturers' representatives firm.

Lovell '90 Returns to ASC

When Amy Lovell '90 first arrived on the Agnes Scott College campus, she planned to major in music. Now, 10 years after earning her degree in physics and astronomy, she returns to the College this fall as an assistant professor.

Lovell, who earned her doctorate in astronomy from the University of Massachusetts in 1999, took her first astronomy class as her science requirement. "I liked it well enough to take a second class that spring. By then I was hooked." She credits the nurturing atmosphere of Agnes Scott with fostering her ability to experiment and try something new. "The non-competitive environment made me realize that science is cool."

Lovell had not even taken calculus in high school and admits that changing her goals was a daunting task. "I was ill-prepared to take science," she says. "I had a lot of catching up to do to take classes in my major."

The 10 years since her graduation have been busy ones. Shortly after graduation, she married David Smith. They have two children, a 6-year-old daughter and 3-year-old son. Lovell admits that earning a Ph. D. with two young children was not easy. "It seemed the right thing to do at the time. A student schedule is more flexible and more able to accommodate the needs of a family."

The couple also earned their pilot's licenses during that time. "David made a comment one day that he always thought it would be neat to learn to fly. By that afternoon I had lessons arranged."

In addition to her studies at Massachusetts, Lovell has traveled a great deal. Last year she journeyed to Munich to view a total solar eclipse. "It is something I always wanted to see," she says. "I was lucky it was in mainland Europe—an easily accessible area." Despite the overcast, Lovell was able to view the eclipse through a break in the clouds.

Lovell also has an asteroid, number 9274, named after her. "Objects in space are named in different ways," says Lovell. "Asteroids are named by the people who discover them." Called Amylovell, the asteroid and its companion, which was named for Lovell's Ph.D. advisor, were discovered by an astronomer in Sweden who has identified more than 75 such objects.

For the past two years, Lovell has served as a science education fellow at Amherst College. Returning to the Agnes Scott campus has not exactly been what she expected. "I thought it would be weird," she says. "But it has been great. It's strange to be teaching alongside those people who taught me, but the vibes have been great."

Lovell is especially excited about the renovations to the College's observatory. "It's gorgeous," she says. "Out of this world. State of the art. Mary Brown Bullock is such a visionary. For a program this size it's incredible." Lovell hopes the new facilities will bring more students to the physics and astronomy program. "Maybe it will attract students like me—students who do not know they are interested."

Laura Andrews graduated last year with a master's degree in agriculture from the University of Florida. After graduation, she moved back to Winter Haven to help her mother take care of her grandmother. Sadly, her grandmother passed away in September 1999. During that time she took a job doing citrus research/data analysis for a professor at a UF research and education center. In December, Laura got another job with UF in Palm Beach County as an agricultural extension agent and feels good to be considered faculty. She lives in the West Palm Beach area working in Belle Glade. Her office is 32 miles from her apartment. Her responsibilities with the agriculture community in the county are specifically in the areas of agricultural safety, regulatory compliance and awareness, along with restricted-use pesticide training and testing. Thus far Laura has really taken to teaching, planning and organizing programs.

Anne Bearden Gunn started graduate school this summer at Georgia State University and is working toward a master's in education degree in science. She plans to teach high school science when she graduates in August 2001. She and husband Michael traveled to Europe in May and had a great time. Back at home, they and their four cats and three dogs take advantage of the latest addition to their house in Chamblee, a deck finished just in time for summer.

Ruth Blackwood expects to complete her master's in biology from Southern Connecticut State University in August. She teaches at West Haven High School in West Haven, Conn., and loves it. She says that her students this year are really wonderful and she's having a blast.

Jessica Carey has moved from Virginia to Alaska. Her parents are in Alaska until September, as her father, John Carey, is interim minister at Immanuel Presbyterian in Anchorage. She works for a law firm based in Seattle called Perkins Coie and is quite happy there. In her free time, she fishes for salmon, camps, hikes, skis cross-country and goes ski-joring (an Alaskan sport that is half cross-country skiing and half dog-mushing).

According to Juliet Carney Ruhl, "Things in Louisville are nuts; children are wonderful; we remodeled our kitchen and are content being back." Juliet started selling Pampered Chef products as a hobby and is having a good time with it. Other than that, she takes care of her daughter, Quin, and son, Charlie.

Juliet also talks regularly with Becca Boone Thompson, who, along with husband John and daughter Caroline, sounds extremely happy.

In May, Jenessa DeFrees Burney married Brad Burney in St. Thomas, U.S. Virgin Island, aboard Royal Caribbean's Enchantment. They had a reception in Atlanta this summer to celebrate their marriage. Brad runs a family business in Waco and Brownwood, Texas. Jenessa got a new position at Scott and White Hospital in Temple, Texas, working for 12 doctors in the Community Internal Medicine Clinic, monitoring their patients via authorizing their prescription refills. The job is cutting-edge and exactly the kind she dreamed about in pharmacy school. She invites classmates to e-mail her at Pilchick@aol.com.

Staci Dixon is the manager of Volunteer Services at Jerusalem House, a nonprofit organization that provides apartments and supportive services for people with AIDS who were homeless before moving to Atlanta. Since there are only two full-time employees (including Staci) at the Family Program, she is also involved in case management, advocacy, program development and research. For a leisure break, she took a two-weeks' vacation to Costa Rica in May and had a fabulous time in the rain forests and at the beach.

In May Rhina Fernandes earned a master's in education at Mercer University. She has been accepted in Emory University's doctoral program in educational studies. Classes start in the fall, and Rhina is very excited about being a full-time student there.

Rhina also was a bridesmaid in Katy Keller Scott's wedding on April 8 to Glen Scott in the Ruthledge College Chapel at the University of South Carolina. Glen and Katy live in Albany, Ga., where she works as an occupational therapist.

After seven years, Elizabeth Fraser Washburn continues working with homebuyers financing mortgages. Outside of work, she has enrolled in evening classes at Emory in tennis and children's book writing. She is also taking horseback riding lessons for the first time in her life and finds it a great deal of fun. Her instructor keeps telling her to loosen her grip on the saddle, but Elizabeth wonders how it would be possible to do that and stay on the horse!

Amanda King Humphreys bought a Jacksonville, Fla., condo, which she loves, because she spends the weekends having fun and not doing yard work. Her daughter, Adair, 2, amazes her more and more every day. So far, the second year has been far from terrible. Adair is having fun living near the beach with her grandparents close at hand. Amanda grew up in Jacksonville, but was away for about 10 years. She has enjoyed reconnecting with some old friends and has become active in the community. In May, she organized a silent auction for St. Vincent's Foundation (a children's hospital charity). Besides being a mom and volunteering, she is satisfied with her career as a district manager in sales for ADT TotalSource.

Amanda can be contacted at akhumphreys@earthlink.net.

When she moved to Miami five years ago, Claudia "Christie" Miller started doing freelance writing for local publications. This led to a post as managing editor of a magazine called Miamigo. She left Miamigo about a year ago to work as the managing editor of a Web site for Outonthenet, Inc. She still does some freelancing with a monthly column in WHERE, a Miami magazine, was featured in the June issue of Girlfriends and had an article in Manhattan File. Claudia cherishes living in South Beach, one block away from the ocean, with her two chihuahuas, Miranda and Chanel. Anyone wishing to get in touch with Claudia (she's switched back to her first name) can e-mail her at cmiller@ootn.com.

Ellie Morgan works full time in the technical services department of the library at ASC, where she does acquisitions. She is in the fourth year of the doctoral program in religion at Vanderbilt. She says that she has done things a little backwards: Her exams are next spring, but her dissertation is already partly written.

In January, Donna Perkins Balding earned a Ph.D. in microbiology and molecular genetics at Emory University. Now she is in a post-doctoral position at Emory studying the iron uptake mechanisms of pathogenic Neisseria. Her husband, Luke, is a database administrator at HomeCome Communications. They have been married for seven years and have a 3-year-old daughter, Erin. Donna was able to get back to Agnes Scott in the spring of 1999 when she taught cell biology/cell physiology laboratory for Sandra Bowden while Sandra planned the science building. One of Donna's students that semester, Jamie Chilton '00, did a laboratory rotation with Donna at Emory.

Brooke Price graduated from the University of Georgia in April with a master's (and a 4.0 GPA) in instructional technology. After graduation, she took an extended and much needed holiday in Italy. Brooke can be reached via e-mail at cbprice@hotmail.com.

Alanna Register Holley has checked in with news of her busy life. She received a master's in special education from Florida State University in December 1994. She married Kevin Holley in March 1996. They lived in his hometown of Birmingham, Ala., until May 1999, when they moved to Mobile. Their first son, Campbell Paul, was born on Oct. 31, 1997; and his brother, Christian Alexander, followed on Sept. 20, 1999. Currently, Alanna is taking a sabbatical from teaching and has opened her own party-planning business called Sweet Teas. Her e-mail address is amholley@mindspring.com.

Dawn Sloan Downes has much to celebrate these days. On April 8, she married Scott Jehle Downes, a 1992 graduate of Duke University. Alumnae celebrating with the couple included maid of honor Courtney Alison, Staci Dixon, Ellie Porter Ivey '93, Lucia Howard Sizemore '65 and Margaret Shirley '81. After the wedding, the newlyweds spent two weeks honeymooning in England and Ireland, with a brief stay in Cregg Castle, the last fortified castle built west of the Shannon River. Upon the couple's return to Tucker, Ga., Dawn resumed her new role as director of marketing for KeyTrak, Inc. During her first week at home, she spoke to other alumnae and friends during Alumnae Weekend. She participated in the Authors' Roundtable, discussing Come to My Sunland, written by Julia Moseley '40. The book recounts the true story of Julia's grandmother's life as a pioneer in rural Florida during the late 1800s. Anyone wishing to e-mail Dawn may do so at dsdownes@bellsouth.net.

Tara Somerville graduated with a J.D. from Ohio Northern University on May 14. At the time of this writing, her post-graduation plans were undecided.

Christina Wood-Firth has been through a number of changes but is doing well. She divorced in 1994 and, after working at CNN for several years, switched to a job as a paralegal for John C. Mayoue, Esq., at Warner, Mayoue and Bates, P.C. The firm specializes in high-asset divorce cases. She loves the work and is still contemplating law school. She and her boyfriend bought a house in the Vinings area, which they share with their dogs, Cody and Shadow. Christina keeps in touch with Samantha Goldfarb Julienne and travels to Paris once a year to visit her, her husband and their children (Christina's godchildren), Quentin and Abigail.

With Melissa Anne Elebash Creed '91, Barbara Stitt Allen hosted a bridal shower for Ellie

Porter Ivey '93. It was a beautiful day, and Melissa Anne's deck was filled with Scotties: Kristin Lemmerman, Courtney Alison, Sandi Fogle '93 and Elizabeth Seward '91. In addition to those mentioned above, a lively bachelorette party brought out Dawn Sloan Downes, Christina Holloway '91 and Claire Lemme '93. In work-related news, after six and a half years in drinking water, Barbara was promoted in April to GIS (Geographic Information Systems) as branch coordinator for the Georgia Environment Protection Division (EPD) Water Protection Branch.

Lauren Fowler recently received her Ph.D. and is beginning her second year as an assistant professor of psychology at Weber State University in Ogden, Utah.

Since ASC has turned the secretary's home of five years, Avery Glen Apartments, into student housing, her new address is listed above. Also, the secretary received all of this news via e-mail and solicits the e-mail addresses of any whose address she does not have. For those without e-mail, she would love to hear from them the old-fashioned way!

Ginger Guice has been promoted to assistant director of development at the Holy Innocents Episcopal School in Atlanta. In her new duty she is director of the annual fund.

Vicky McGee received her master's in clinical psychology and is currently working on her doctorate in psychology at the Georgia School of Professional Psychology. She is also serving as a psychology consultant in the emergency room of Northside Hospital. Vicky has a new grandson, Luke Harrison Stovall, born March 25.

Vanessa Johnston moved to Denver, Colo., in June of 1998 and teaches ninth grade honors at Douglas County High School. She spends her time mountain biking, hiking, camping and "Phishing."

After Teresa Harrison received her master's of science in economics from the University of Texas at Austin in May 1999, she continued her studies in the program. In addition, she was a summer intern in Washington, D.C., at the Center on Nonprofit and Philanthropy in the Urban Institute.

Sterling Elliot finished working for the Peace Corps in Bolivia in August 1998. She returned to the U.S. to earn certification in teaching English as a foreign language. She has since moved to Santiago, Chile, where she teaches English. Sterling will continue to roam the Southern Hemisphere until her money runs out or she starts a revolution.

Catherine Gurry works for the Census Bureau and lives in Simpsonville, S.C. She is attending Greenville Technical College for certification in graphic and web design.

Emily Scott is working on her master's degree in information technology at American Intercontinental University. Although Heather Harshman is busy with her medical studies at Louisiana State University, she did find time to visit her brother in Japan. Her favorite part of the trip was seeing a Japanese "Beatles" band that by her account really looked and sounded like the Beatles.

Brandi Nance is employed in the department of social work at the University of North Carolina at Greensboro. She resides in Randleman and writes books in her spare time. Except for a few articles and editorials in the Asheboro Courier-Tribune, however, Brandi has no publications to date.

Having completed the class work for her doctorate in pharmacy at Virginia Commonwealth University, Melinda Wilson is doing rotations in Richmond, Va., and plans to graduate in May 2001.

Chance Claar-Kilgore and her partner, Amy, bought a house in Atlanta last May. Through the non-profit organization, Charis Circle, she facilitates a program for girls ages 9 to 15, called "Girls Speaking Out." The program is designed to increase girls' self-esteem and to promote conscious thinking and choices.

Jennie Albritton is working on a bachelor's degree in music education at Murray State University and hopes to move to Atlanta or Nashville after graduation.

Andrea Riba attends the University of Pittsburgh pursuing a master's in public and international affairs.

Lucien Lockhart is at Georgia State University in a master's program for education in the sciences called TEEMScience.

Audra Brecher has started a master's of fine arts program in historic preservation at Savannah College of Art and Design.

Sunny Snaith is traveling the globe, or, at least, the southeastern U.S. Friends can learn about her adventures online at <http://come.to/sunnys-world>.

Becky Rafter works at the Art Institute of Atlanta and remains very active with the Feminist Women's Health Center. In September 1999, Becky headed a promotion for the center that raised over $5,000 for professional lobbyists and the Chrysalis Project, a workshop for lesbian, bisexual, transgendered and questioning women.

Deanna Turner lives in Louisville, Ky., working as the community relations manager at Barnes and Noble.

In November 1999, Nicole Sikora opened Corridor Communications, a public relations and marketing office for technology firms and progressive companies, in Johnson City, Tenn. She is also employed as the first executive director of the Southwestern Virginia Technology Council as well as founder and president of the Coalition for Young Professionals, a group encouraging young professionals to remain in the rural areas of Northeast Tennessee and Southwest Virginia. In her little spare time, Nicole is writing a nonfiction book about an abused woman.

Betsy Bilbro has been welcomed on the Agnes Scott campus as a development officer in the Office of Development.

Becky Willard Sanders married Dudley Sanders on Aug. 8, 1998. The couple now lives in Tucker, Ga.

At Ursuline Academy in Wilmington, Del., Chelsy Parks Hooper teaches French and coaches girls' soccer and swimming. Over spring break she and her husband chaperoned a school trip to Spain. In addition, Becky is working on her master's in education.

Susan Vincent Molinaro escaped from the boredom of Atlanta in April and visited Michelle Frost on Epi, a small rural island in the island group Vanuatu in the South Pacific. Michelle teaches social science and mathematics at the local boarding school. She began this Peace Corps experience in November 1998 and expects to return to the U.S. in 2001.

Hillary Spencer now lives in Los Angeles, where she works at the Gallery of Contemporary Photography.

Jennie Albritton has accepted a position as music teacher at Frank Long Elementary School in Hinesville, Ga. She earned her teacher's certification at Murray State University, Murray, Ky., in the spring.

Amanda Swafford has been elected to public office in California. With 100 percent of the vote (216), during the so called "Super Tuesday" primaries, she won representation in District 3 as a Libertarian on the Sacramento County Central Committee. Amanda's official duties are to serve on the six-member Central Committee Board and to set policy as well as vote on endorsements on behalf of the Libertarian Party of Sacramento County. She starts her second year of full-time legal studies this August at the University of the Pacific McGeorge School of Law in Sacramento. Amanda encourages all Agnes Scott students, past and present, making a visit to the area to drop her an e-mail at Swaff@mindspring.com.

Lauren Wheeler was featured in The Atlanta Journal-Constitution concerning her family's participation in the March of Dimes WalkAmerica. The article describes Lauren's struggle with being handicapped as well as her parents' efforts to keep their family together when she was sick. Jessica Crawford was cited in the article as saying, "Seeing what she had to go through—the intensive, stupid things people would say and the embarrassing and difficult challenges she had to face, like going into the back of a room to get in [it], gave me and her other classmates a new understanding of people with physical differences."

Czarina Ahmad's computer services business just hired its seventh employee. She started the business right after leaving ASC and states that these have been the best 12 months yet!

Patricia (Trish) Anderson spent the past year and a half with Atlanta Outward Bound's Americorps Program. She did over 2,400 hours of community service and led a team of young adults in 1,000 hours of environmental service, education and training. She now works as an advocate for the homeless with the Georgia Law Center on Homelessness and Poverty. Trish is also a rider for Girls on the Move, a cross-country bike ride to raise awareness about the issues facing girls and young women. Classmates can e-mail her at trishanderson@aol.com.

Valerie Park recently started working for the YMCA in Monroe, Wash., as the site director at an elementary school before and after school care program.

Amanda L. Ptacek has been with Merrill Lynch for several years and plans to remain with the company for another year. She moved to Cumming, Ga., this summer.

Margie Weir fulfilled her commitment to Teach for America, for which she taught Spanish in rural Louisiana.

Dinah M. Conti finished her second year at Mercer University School of Medicine and began her clinical rotations in July. She expects to graduate in June 2002. Her cat, Buddy, celebrated his first birthday on April 4.

Vicki Couch completed the second year of her master's at Emory's Candler School of Theology. She will graduate in May 2001 and is attending a program to become a chaplain. Vicki's ordination process will culminate in June 2001. She says Emory has been a great adventure.

Christine Cox Jude began the BSN/MSN program at the University of Pennsylvania in Philadelphia in the fall of 1999. By December 2003 she will be a registered nurse and certified nurse midwife.

Having successfully survived her comprehensive exams, Laura Croft will begin her second year in Eastern Virginia Medical School's Art Therapy Program this August. On a lighter but heartwarming note, Laura recently rescued a Bichon Frise puppy, Lila, who invites everyone to play with her.

In May, Jennifer King finished her second year at Indiana University School of Law in Bloomington. Her focus is on public interest law, in particular, serving Native Americans and immigrants. Last summer she worked as a legal intern with the Cheyenne River Sioux Tribe in Eagle Butte, S.D. This summer Jennifer was a legal intern with the Office of Tribal Justice, Department of Justice, in Washington, D.C. Her e-mail address is jlk75@juno.com, and she would love to hear from other ASC alumnae.

Tegra Rosera graduated May 12 from the University of Southern California with a master's in occupational therapy. She has fieldwork to do and a national certification exam to pass. It will, therefore, be next spring before Tegra can look forward to working. At that time she intends to return to Atlanta.

In May, Bonnie Page Cochran graduated from the Boston Conservatory with a master's in flute performance.

Kimberly L. Walker received her master's in social work from the University of Georgia on May 13.

Valerie Joy Case married Chris Bayham on March 4, in Atlanta, Ga. Sarah Thieling served as maid of honor; Alexa Wood was a bridesmaid; and Margie Weir was a reader. The many wonder women in attendance enjoyed singing class songs during the reception. After a honeymoon cruise, the couple took up residence in Chicago, Ill. Chris is a senior web developer with DRINKS.com, an Internet start-up; Valerie works downtown as a docket clerk/litigation paralegal for Much, Shelist, Freed, Denenberg, Ament and Rubenstein.

Another classmate, Jennifer M. Odom, has whittled away the second year of her graduate program in Rochester, N.Y. She also enjoyed attending Valerie Case Bayham's wedding in March and visiting Ami Joy Rop in June.

Christine Cox married Kevin Jude in May of this year. After a honeymoon in Alaska, the couple settled in Philadelphia, Pa. Both attend the University of Pennsylvania.

On April 8, Jessica Owens Sanfilippo married Andy Sanfilippo in Atlanta. They now are in San Francisco; Jessica is a student at Stanford University.

Tiffany Prather married Leonard "Lenny" McAneny on May 6 in Jacksonville, Fla. Meredith Fields '99 was the maid of honor; Kim McSwain '99, Amrita Dhamoon '99 and Jessica Ulack Carothers '99 were bridesmaids. The couple lives in Jacksonville.

ADVANCED DEGREES

• Tegra Rosera, Master's in occupational therapy, University of Southern California, May 2000.

• Bonnie Page Cochran, Master's in flute performance, Boston Conservatory, May 2000.

• Kimberly L. Walker, Master's in social work, University of Georgia, May 2000.

'Thank You' from Institutional Advancement

The Office of Institutional Advancement would like to thank all of the Agnes Scott alumnae who volunteered during the 1999-2000 year. Because of their motivation and assistance, the offices of Alumnae Relations, Communications, and Development all experienced outstanding years. We are also extremely grateful to all, alumnae and friends, who participate through their gifts to the College. We had a record-breaking year in money raised, and alumnae giving reached its highest point in Agnes Scott history. This feat would not have occurred without the hard work of the following alumnae volunteers:

AGNES

Trustees Announce $60 Million Campaign

COMPREHENSIVE CAMPAIGN MOST AMBITIOUS IN COLLEGE'S HISTORY

Agnes Scott's Board of Trustees has announced a $60 million campaign, the largest comprehensive campaign in the history of the College.

To a gathering of volunteers from Georgia, California, Texas, New York, Connecticut and Massachusetts, Board Chairperson Joseph R. Gladden Jr. noted that "this campaign will be the most ambitious in the history of the College. It will value the generosity of every individual and charitable organization that loves learning, believes in the education of women at the highest levels of excellence and shares our mission, dedication and bold aspirations for this College."

The campaign will be launched publicly on Founder's Day weekend, Feb. 23-24, and will conclude June 2004. Celebration will be the theme of the launch weekend in February, with tours and dedications of new and renovated buildings and a celebration party at the Egyptian Ballroom of the Fox Theater in Atlanta.

The campaign announcement coincided with the November dedication of the renovated Bradley Observatory and new Delafield Planetarium, which are part of an unprecedented $120 million building and capital improvement program. Last winter, the College completed a major renovation of its 50-year-old Letitia Pate Evans Dining Hall and opened a new parking facility with adjacent public safety headquarters. At the campaign launch in February, the College will dedicate its new 58,000-square-foot Alston Campus Center and the renovated and expanded 70,000-square-foot McCain Library.

Gladden chairs the campaign steering committee, and alumnae Frances B. Graves '63 of Atlanta and JoAnn Sawyer Delafield '58 of New York are national campaign co-chairs.

With a goal of 75 percent alumnae participation, the campaign will be comprehensive, focusing on a variety of avenues of support for faculty, students and buildings.

"We hope this campaign will find the Col. George Washington Scotts and Frances Winship Walters of the 21st century—the truly exceptional individuals who can make institutionally transforming gifts," said President Mary Brown Bullock '66. "But this campaign is primarily about creating a new culture of giving at Agnes Scott. It is a quest to commit all alumnae to the future of academic strength of their alma mater."

ACCOLADES

- Margot McCoy Gayle '31 was presented the New York State Commissioner's Annual Lifetime Achievement Award for her longtime commitment to preserving cast-iron architecture.
- Gay Currie Fox '42 was honored with the Order of the Long Leaf Pine, one of North Carolina's most distinguished awards.
- Constance Currie '55 has published a new book, Deep in Our Hearts (University of Georgia Press), documenting the experiences of nine white women in the freedom movement.
- Jean Hoefer Toal '65, first female chief justice of the South Carolina Supreme Court, received an honorary degree from the University of South Carolina and delivered the university's commencement address.
- Kathleen Voss '94 is a weather anchor at The Weather Channel, Latin America. She is known as Katrina on the air.

CAMPAIGN CO-CHAIR CONTRIBUTES $500,000 TO OBSERVATORY

Dennis and Joie Delafield '58

JoAnn Sawyer Delafield '58, her husband, Dennis, and the Delafield Fund of The New York Community Trust have awarded the College a $500,000 gift toward the new planetarium at Bradley Observatory.

"Agnes Scott is thrilled to receive this generous gift from our dear friends," said President Mary Brown Bullock '66. "Joie Delafield is a strong advocate of academic excellence in general and science and astronomy in particular."

Delafield, trustee of the College as well as an alumna, also served on the search committee that selected Bullock, the first alumna president of the College. She serves as co-chair of The Campaign for Agnes Scott College.

The 70-seat Delafield Planetarium boasts a 10-meter Astro-Tek dome and a computer-controlled projector built by Zeiss Instruments, maker of the world's finest planetarium projectors. Only nine other sites in the country and 23 others in the world house such projectors.

"This building will help Agnes Scott women learn about astronomy and astrophysics, about the heavens and also about our position in the universe," Bullock said. "But it will also position Agnes Scott as a leader in this field of study among Atlanta schools and liberal arts colleges."

Bradley Observatory reopened in November after extensive renovation and the addition of the planetarium.

A WORD FROM GUÉ HUDSON

The Wallace M. Alston Campus Center will be dedicated formally in February, but it is already easy to see how it will unite the residential, co-curricular and academic parts of our campus and transform our shared life. At long last, we have a wonderful building that will be a magnet, drawing all members of the campus together for discussion, service, programs, fun, friendship, relaxation and enrichment. A student working in the library on an essay will be able to finish her composition, if she chooses, in the Alston Center's first floor Cyber Café. A professor may choose the relaxed atmosphere of the Alston Center for a conference with a student and then continue the meeting in the library stacks for a look together at research materials. Commuting students will finally have sufficient space of their own in the heart of the campus. These are just a few of the opportunities the Alston Center brings.

As I have watched the Alston Center take shape over the last few months, I have thought often of the man for whom it is named and the legacy he left Agnes Scott. He was president during my years as a student at the College and for myself, as well as many alumnae, staff and faculty, he was a formative presence on campus. Realizing there are fewer here now who remember this remarkable man, I thought I would try to capture his profound influence and convey how fitting it is that this particular building is named in his honor.

Wallace McPherson Alston served as the third president of the college from 1951 to 1973 and his ties to Agnes Scott were many. He was born on July 16, 1906, in a house still standing on South Candler Street and played as a small boy on the campus. His mother had attended Agnes Scott Institute. He married an Agnes Scott alumna, Madelaine Dunseith '28.

He earned bachelor's and master's degrees from Emory. Dr. Alston held five earned degrees, including a doctorate in theology from Union Theological Seminary. Ordained by the Atlanta Presbytery in 1932, he served with distinction as a Presbyterian minister in churches in Kentucky and West Virginia before returning to Druid Hills Presbyterian Church in Atlanta. He was a talented leader, administrator, pastor, scholar and teacher. He was, in fact, the male equivalent of the "whole woman" he set as the standard for students. All of his considerable gifts were bestowed on the College he loved and led. However, perhaps his most important bequest was the palpable sense of community that pervaded the campus during his years.

Just as we have built the building that bears his name, Dr. Alston carefully constructed this pervasive sense of community through small and large acts, for he believed wholeheartedly in its importance. His personal interest in students was legendary. He spent the month of August reading the admission files of all new students. He met with them in the fall to talk about their interests and goals at Agnes Scott and remembered their name forever. Some alumnae still may have one of the birthday letters he sent to all students with his wishes on their special day. Many alumnae asked him to perform their marriage ceremonies and always found him a welcoming presence when they returned to the College.

I am sorry Dr. Alston is not here to see this marvelous building and its potential for binding us closer together. However, I am reassured by the knowledge that he knew it would come. Just before his retirement, the Board of Trustees passed a resolution stating a campus center would be named for him when a new one was built. I know I will feel his presence in its spaces each time I enter.

Myrna Goode Young Dies

Myrna Goode Young, professor emerita of classical languages and literatures, died at 86 on Oct. 11 in Decatur. Young taught full time at Agnes Scott from 1957 to 1979 and part time until 1985. She also taught courses at Emory University.

Young was known for bringing the distant past to life in her classroom. She studied classics at Eureka College in Illinois and received her doctorate in classics from the University of Illinois.

Myrna Goode Young

Young is survived by her husband, James Harvey Young, and two sons, Harvey Galen Young of Atlanta and James Walter Young of Phoenix.

STUDENT LEADER PROFILE

ERIKA PEÑA '01

President of Hispanic Awareness Society

Major: Political Science and Spanish

Hometown: San Antonio, Texas

Q: What is the Hispanic Awareness Society?

A: Hispanic Awareness Society is an organization on campus that was created to help raise awareness about Hispanic culture. Unfortunately, not too many people make it a point to learn about other cultures. We try to educate others about who we are as a people, what struggles we have overcome, what struggles we are constantly undergoing, and the importance of being active in the community—not only the Latino community, but the community as a whole. We are also a place that provides a forum for the few Latinas on campus who can come and feel a connection to their heritage and fellow Latinas.

Q: What are some ways in which you raise awareness?

A: We are active not only on campus, but off campus as well. We are very involved in teaching others about our culture. Examples of activities aimed at raising awareness would be our yearly Cinco de Mayo event, our sponsorship of Grupo Cultura, movie nights at the High Museum of Art and our Latin American dinner. The purpose of all these activities is to introduce the Hispanic culture to those who may not be very familiar with it.

Q: Why do you think it is important?

A: I think it is important because if we, the Latino population, do not make our voices heard, then who will speak for us? It is our responsibility to make our presence known, and to be proud of who we are and where we come from.

Q: What does your leadership role involve?

A: As the new president of Hispanic Awareness Society, it is my responsibility to ensure the smooth running of our organization. This involves things like calling and officiating meetings, making contacts and deciding to which events we will dedicate our time.

Q: What have you learned from being part of this organization?

A: I have learned that there are many individuals out there who appreciate and love the Hispanic culture and traditions as much as I do and who are willing to get involved. I have learned the importance of working with others toward a common goal and how great it feels to see others taking an interest in what we stand for as an organization and as a people.

Q: Do you plan to continue your involvement in Hispanic awareness after college?

A: As a Latina, raising Hispanic awareness is something that will be a part of me for the rest of my life. I love who I am and do my best every day to show others what a beautiful culture I and my fellow Latino brothers and sisters have been blessed with.

RTC Program Celebrates 25 Years

PROGRAM RENAMED TO HONOR IRENE K. WOODRUFF

Agnes Scott's return to college program celebrated its 25th anniversary in October and was renamed the Irene K. Woodruff Return to College (RTC) Program in honor of Woodruff and her 1982 gift of $1 million to the College. Woodruff's gift provides financial aid for RTC students.

The Woodruff Program, one of the oldest of its kind in the country, offers opportunities for non-traditional-age women students to complete their degrees. More than 300 RTC students have graduated from Agnes Scott since the program's inception.

According to a recent study by Fern Marx, senior research scientist at Wellesley College Center for Research on Women, Agnes Scott's RTC graduates are achieving success in terms of career mobility and completion of advanced degrees. Almost half (48 percent) went on to complete graduate degrees. Twenty-six percent report incomes greater than $50,000 and 7 percent more than $100,000. Almost all (98 percent) would recommend the program to other women.

Woodruff's mother, Clara Belle Rushton King, attended Agnes Scott Institute from 1892 to 1894. Woodruff herself graduated from National Park Seminary in Forest Glenn, Md., where she studied science, English and music. In 1918, she married George Woodruff, who served as a member, vice chairperson and interim chairperson of the Agnes Scott Board of Trustees from 1939 to 1974. During her life, Woodruff was active in many worthwhile causes, particularly children's health and education. In 1985, Agnes Scott named the main quadrangle on campus the George Waldo and Irene King Woodruff Quadrangle to honor them and their service to the College.

New Science Building to Aid Collaboration

TECHNOLOGY-RICH FACILITY WILL CREATE 'COMMUNITY OF SCIENTISTS'

As Agnes Scott's master plan catapults the College into the 21st century, another key element of that plan is taking shape—the development of an enhanced science curriculum and a new $36.5 million building to house the College's science departments. The approval of the new building by the Board of Trustees in November coincided with the completion of another element of the science program—the reopening of the Bradley Observatory and dedication of the Delafield Planetarium.

The new developments in the natural sciences will focus on interdisciplinary connections, collaborative learning through classes and research, and an integration of the experimental and theoretical sides of the disciplines.

"The new facility will provide 'villages' of specialized facilities for chemistry, biology, physics and psychology as well as many shared facilities where we will regularly come together for interdisciplinary teaching and research," said Sandra Bowden, Dana professor of biology and shepherd of the science building project. For example, a neuroscience track will bring together biology, psychology and chemistry. "We want to be truly interdisciplinary in the way we think about theories and questions in the sciences, not just share a speaker or teach in each other's classes," Bowden said.

Among the features of the new building will be a microscopy suite with electron and light microscopes; a greenhouse attached to the building for ecology, environmental science and plant science; learning centers on two floors where students can gather informally around computers and comfortable seating; a central atrium open to the top of the building; and multiple gathering spaces where research results can be displayed and discussed.

A "racetrack" design will place shared resources (instrumentation and prep rooms, light- and temperature-controlled environments, etc.) in the center of each floor's wings with labs and classrooms around the outer periphery of each corridor. The building will be "technology-rich," says Bowden. "It is laid out to serve a community of scientists, all together, interacting programmatically."

Campbell Hall has served Agnes Scott's science programs for nearly 50 years, but the building could not be renovated to allow configurations required for modern lab facilities. In addition, all four science departments in Campbell currently share 600 square feet of dedicated faculty research space, whereas the new building will provide 400 square feet of dedicated faculty-student research lab space per faculty member. These new labs will allow for ongoing year-round research that was formerly based in laboratories regularly scheduled for courses in the afternoons.

The new facility, to be located on the site of the current tennis courts (which will be moved at another site), will be approximately 115,000 square feet. It will have one garden level, visible from the south side of the building, and three floors above that level. Construction is scheduled to begin this year with a March groundbreaking and be completed by the end of 2002.

"One of my hopes and dreams is that the visibility of the sciences will increase," Bowden says. "It is already increasing with a new second-semester science requirement, participation in first-year seminars and planned changes (like the new environmental studies and neuroscience programs). But two new buildings, with Bradley Observatory reopening and this one in a couple of years—that's increased visibility."

A MESSAGE FROM ANNE

I got married several months ago, about the time I took office as president of the Alumnae Association. Don, my husband, has gotten a quick introduction to Agnes Scott and the role the College plays in my life. I've been to an Alumnae Board retreat, comprehensive campaign meetings and events, Leadership Conference, committee meetings, trustee meetings and other assorted events. Don has accompanied me to some of these events.

One night he asked, "Sometime I want you to tell me why Agnes Scott is so important to you." He attended a university for his undergraduate and graduate degrees and has had little association with the school since his graduation. I'm sure that friends, even Agnes Scott classmates, have wondered the same thing. I'd like to answer that question and encourage you to think about your relationship with the College.

Agnes Scott is my number one commitment outside my family and my career. During my four years as a student, I received a world-expanding education and developed friendships that I hope will continue throughout my life. I learned what it means to live in a society where honor and ethics are the expected minimum. Since graduation, the College has continued to provide me opportunities for growth, new friendships and connections, a place that always feels like home. I work to make sure others know what an outstanding place Agnes Scott is, to make sure other talented young women have the opportunity to define themselves here and to make sure the College continues to be a relevant part of the lives of its alumnae.

Why is my participation needed? We have a wonderful president and talented faculty and staff members guiding the day-to-day activities and developing a vision for the future. Agnes Scott is growing: more students, more faculty members, new and expanded buildings. We have a new alumnae director and staff members who work hard to offer new and interesting programs for alumnae.

These things alone will not ensure our success. A larger college, while essential for future viability, will require more resources. The curriculum will need to be continuously updated and expanded to meet the changing needs of today's students. A single type of program will not meet the needs of all alumnae.

I could say the situation is under control. I could decide that others are paid to make these changes happen. I could say Agnes Scott is a part of my past. I don't say any of those things. As long as I believe in Agnes Scott, I must support it with my words, my talents, my money. I will be a leader. I will be a part of the team.

What does Agnes Scott mean to you? How can you support the College? Some ideas: volunteer, attend a chapter event, make a contribution or increase your gift to the Annual Fund, call or write a classmate you have not spoken to in a while. Be a part of Agnes Scott today.

In Retrospect

THE NEWS HAS MOVED, BUT STILL INSPIRES

When I graduated from Agnes Scott College in 1938, I was elected class secretary. That meant that for the next few years I'd be reporting news of classmates to the alumnae magazine. When the first quarterly issue arrived, I turned its pages rapidly to read my thoroughly researched gossip printed on the last page. News of older graduates always appeared on front pages, but what possible interest might we have in those women who had graduated back in 1906? Nothing had happened as exciting as engagements, weddings, careers, new homes, travels and graduate schools.

As decades passed, others were recording new beginnings and current changes. For me, that was marriage in the '40s . . . children starting school in the '50s . . . one graduating and marrying in the '60s . . . grandchildren arriving and husband dying in the '70s . . . out of the blue came a happy second marriage to brighten the '80s . . . then in the '90s too many heartbreaks and names listed in obits. By now our class news has inched up the front of the quarterly. Is doom and gloom all we can anticipate? Maybe not.

Think about the one who took her two daughters to see the Passion Play in Oberammergau recently. When they returned home, she was off on a cruise to Alaska with her cousin, another widowed alumna. And don't we all secretly smile in remembering our well-preserved classmate who at 80-something, arrived at the 60th reunion on the arm of a charming "significant other"? I'd call that "Life in the Fast Lane!"

Guidelines For Submitting Class News

Class news is published in MAIN EVENTS in January, March, June and September. Please submit news to your class secretary according to the following deadlines:

■ August 20 for January publication

■ November 20 for March publication

■ February 20 for June publication

■ May 20 for September publication

Class news may also be submitted directly to the Office of Alumnae Relations. Whether submitting news to your secretary or the Alumnae office, be sure to include your full name (first, maiden, last) and class year.

When reporting births, deaths and advanced degrees, please include as much detailed information as possible. In all cases, exact dates and full names are needed.

Please report weddings and other planned events (vacations, visits with alumnae and friends) only after the fact.

Agnes Scott has nearly 10,000 living alumnae. We want to keep in touch with all of you and keep you in touch with each other.

Contact your class secretary with your news today!

DC Alumnae Launch 'ASC Connections'

On Oct. 19, 30 Agnes Scott alumnae from Washington, D.C., Baltimore and northern Virginia gathered at the Omni Shoreham Hotel for ASC Connections: DC. This was the first of what organizers hope will be a series of networking events across the country. These events allow ASC women to become resources for each other in everything from business and career development to finding the best people to do what needs to be done in everyday life.

The idea for ASC Connections was conceived by W. Burlette Carter '82, trustee; Tina Carr '89, president of the Washington, D.C., alumnae chapter; and Marilyn Hammond '68, director of alumnae relations. At the event, women whose graduation years spanned almost 40 years exchanged information about what they needed from networking partners and what they could give to others in the network.

"The connections that women made in just one evening were amazing," said Hammond. "Women wondering whether careers in law or medicine were right for them found attorneys and physicians eager to share their experiences. And a woman looking for a babysitter discovered that an alumna with a 14-year-old daughter lived in her neighborhood."

For more information about hosting an ASC Connections networking event in your area, contact Marilyn Hammond at mhammond@agnesscott.edu or call 1-800-868-8602, ext. 6325.

Smith '51 Establishes Romanian Connection with House-Church

For Majorie Stukes Smith '51, the latest chapter in her active life could easily be titled "Sudden Decisions." That is how Smith, daughter of former Agnes Scott Dean of the Faculty Samuel Guerry Stukes and Frances Gilliland Stukes '24, says she established a connection with Romania in the spring of 1999.

"On Good Friday, I first heard about a house in Romania from friends who had adopted a Romanian orphan," she says. The house was being considered as a Christian center for children. "I thought, 'I can help with that.' I wanted to honor my mother in some small way, so I purchased the house for $5,000 and named it the Frances House."

Smith and her husband, David, traveled from their home in Wales to Romania last March for a dedication ceremony—a 1,500-mile round trip journey by car to Galgau, where the house is located. "The Frances House looked sturdy but had no plumbing. A well out front was reliable, even used by other villagers. An outhouse, sizable barn, and a few smaller sheds—all surrounded by a wooden fence—completed the picture. Inside there was a gas stove and a big ceramic furnace in the center of the room."

The group appreciated the warmth from the stove and furnace, as March in Romania can be grim, Smith says. "The ground is frozen with much standing water on top."

Despite the weather, the welcome the group received in Romania still brings tears to Smith's eyes. "We had a dedication service on a Sunday afternoon. We had no idea who would come. To my utter amazement, the middle room was so filled with people that the door was lifted off so more could stand in the entry way."

Ministers from three denominations participated in the service. "We had a simple communion service," recalls Smith. "I had to stand and give a 'testimonial,' a new experience for me, especially since my words were being translated into Romanian."

The warmth Smith felt from her Romanian friends continued to flow when she and her husband returned to Galgau in September. "David and I flew to Budapest, where we were met by two Romanians, one of whom we trusted completely. Ten hours later we arrived in Galgau to a dinner served at 3:30 a.m."

The Frances House

The next morning, the Smiths walked up the road to the Frances House and received a tremendous surprise. "No roof," says Smith, "only rafters with the sky showing through. One of our Romanian friends said we would have it back on by the next night. We started passing tiles with a small group of volunteers led by one builder. Sure enough, the 2000 or more tiles were all back on by Saturday night—no work is done on Sunday."

A Romanian congregation now uses the house, which was used during Romania's Communist era as a secret meeting place for Christians. "It is theirs now. There is a Sunday service each week and children come to the house all through the summer for Bible school," Smith says.

Smith's involvement with Romania did not end with the Frances House. "I am in touch, albeit infrequently, with two families in Romania by e-mail and phone. I am also now involved with a hospital in Zalau, the center of the 'county' where Galgau is located, in Transylvania." The Smiths are planning a third trip this summer.

Jan Cribbs '69

A New Story for Cribbs '69

While Jan Cribbs '69 is honored by all the attention her recent career change to professional storytelling has earned her, she can't help but be bemused as well. "I could have continued with an illustrious career in public relations and would have received no real recognition for it."

After earning her degree in English from Agnes Scott in 1969, Cribbs completed a master of arts in English at the University of Washington. She then worked in admission for the College for three years before returning to school to earn a master's in early childhood education from Georgia State University. A stint in public relations with Atlanta's famous Alliance Theatre led to Cribbs going to work for the state of Georgia, eventually overseeing a staff of eight in the public relations department.

After nearly 20 years with the state, the situation became too stressful. "My body began to give me signals," she says. "I developed an ulcer."

Cribbs took time off to examine her life. She had been attending the National Storytelling Festival in Jonesboro, Tenn., since 1988 and had enjoyed it tremendously. "I have had a love of language and stories all of my life. After I left my job, I was working part time for an attorney. People began to encourage me to be a storyteller. As 'out there' as it seemed, it is what I wanted to do."

Cribbs visited a friend who was enrolled in the storytelling program at East Tennessee State University. "I sat in on a few classes, including one taught by Flora Joy, who was then director of the program. She offered me a graduate assistantship. Within three weeks, doors began swinging open. I looked heavenward and said, 'I get the message.'"

In 1998, Cribbs moved to Johnson City, Tenn., to pursue a master of arts in storytelling at ETSU.

Now back in Decatur and building her business, Story Connections, Cribbs writes some of her own stories and uses traditional folktales and other sources as inspiration for others. Among numerous other events, she participated in Telebrations at The Carter Center, "a worldwide event that emphasizes the history and craft of storytelling and involves many stories being told in different places around the world."

In addition to participating in storytelling festivals, Cribbs has been developing workshops to teach the use of storytelling in coaching and to help churches go deeper into the scriptures. She sees a wide variety of uses for her art. "Many people from many professions other than educators have now obtained the degree, including ministers, priests, psychologists and a variety of other health care providers, attorneys, actors, and folks like me who are changing directions and following their hearts! I trusted, walked out on faith, and followed my dream."

Livingston MAT '97 Finds Fulfillment in New Directions

Gail Livingston, MAT '97

For Gail Livingston MAT '97, the decision to return to school marked a profound change in the direction of her life. An employee of BellSouth since 1972, she had a chance to take a sabbatical from BellSouth, and she made the most of it.

"I entered the MAT program merely to enjoy the study of literature again and to learn more about education theory and practice," Livingston says. "I had two daughters and wanted to ensure they had a good education. I remember walking across the green in front of the gazebo, just feeling happy because I wasn't in a hermetically sealed office tower anymore—and I could hear the birds and smell the fresh air. I found myself thoroughly invigorated and inspired by the program—but I had to return to BellSouth at the end of my time off. Then, about two years later, I took an early buyout and left the company."

For her last assignment with BellSouth, Livingston requested that the company "loan" her to the United Way, where she worked as part of the agency's annual fundraising campaign. "I really enjoyed it. The thrill of working the United Way campaign and bringing in lots of dollars for wonderful charities has brought me back for five campaigns, and Agnes Scott is now one of my best institutions to work with."

At the end of the first campaign, I returned to ASC to do my practice teaching and complete my MAT, which I did in 1997."

A loaned executive from BellSouth to United Way for her first four campaigns, Livingston was sponsored by the company as a retiree for her fifth.

She clearly finds her work with the United Way fulfilling work because she can "do so much to improve the lives of others, not just by nurturing them directly, but by influencing so many to give to support the work."

This year alone, she has had a hand in raising more than $500,000 for DeKalb County funded agencies and small innovative programs. Though she thought asking for money would be difficult, she says she doesn't mind now. "I know where it goes. This is what I can do to help the community."

Spring Events

MLK CELEBRATION, WRITERS' FESTIVAL HEADLINE ONGOING SERIES

Agnes Scott's three-year celebration of the millennium continues into the spring with more opportunities to commemorate the College's heritage, renew one's spirit and challenge one's mind. Spring events include:

"Realizing the Dream," Martin Luther King Celebration featuring Ossie Davis and Ruby Dee. The husband and wife team of Hollywood entertainers Davis and Dee celebrate the life and legacy of Martin Luther King with the performance of a one-act play. Tuesday, Jan. 23, 8 p.m. Presser Hall.

"Civil Rights: Who Needs It," Martin Luther King Convocation featuring Ossie Davis. Wednesday, Jan. 24, 10 a.m. Presser Hall.

Ko-Thi Dance Company. The third oldest African dance company in America makes its Atlanta debut with this performance. Saturday, Feb. 10, 8 p.m. Presser Hall.

"The American Vocalist," The Boston Camerata, Joel Cohen, director. This skillful blending of Northern hymn traditions and Southern spiritual melodies makes this performance an authentically American musical experience. Performing with The Boston Camerata will be Sotto Voce, Agnes Scott's chamber choir. Saturday, Feb. 24, 8 p.m. Presser Hall.

This performance is sponsored in part by a grant from the National Endowment for the Arts in partnership with the Southern Arts Federation and the State Arts Agency of Georgia.

Global Perspectives: "Are Wartime Rapes 'Local' or 'Global'? — Some Feminist Clues," Cynthia Enloe. Enloe, professor of government at Massachusetts' Clark University and author of numerous books, brings a fresh perspective to the role of women and gender in foreign policy and international relations. This lecture, part of ASC's observance of Women's History Month, is one of a series of Millennium Lectures on issues surrounding globalization. Thursday, March 1, 8 p.m. Presser Hall.

Writers' Festival, featuring Marsha Norman '69, John Updike, Sharon Olds and Anjail Rashida Ahmad '92. For 29 years, Agnes Scott has held an annual Writers' Festival, hosting authors such as Eudora Welty, James Dickey, Alfred Uhry, Joyce Carol Oates and numerous others. Thursday and Friday, March 22-23. Winter Theatre and Gaines Chapel.

Book Unbound Panel Discussion. In celebration of the renovated McCain Library, a panel of noted authorities on the world of books will delve into the future of books. Tuesday, March 27, 8 p.m. Presser Hall.

Piano Book Concert, Ursula

Oppens. Oppens, professor of music at Northwestern University and renowned interpreter of both established repertoire and contemporary music, presents the 10 pieces from the Millennium Piano Book, a work commissioned by Carnegie Hall to provide contemporary music at the intermediate level. Oppens' performances with major orchestras throughout the United States and Europe have been marked by a powerful grasp of the composer's musical intentions and an equally powerful command of the keyboard's resources. Thursday, March 29, 8 p.m. Presser Hall.

"An Evening with Madame F," Claudia Stevens. For Holocaust Remembrance Week, Stevens, the daughter of Holocaust survivors, conveys the struggle and ethical dilemma of camp inmates through a musical performance based on factual experiences at Auschwitz and Bergen Belsen concentration camps. Stevens performs at the piano and drum and with electrical sound to convey this story of spiritual survival through the act of expression. Saturday, April 21, 8 p.m. Winter Theatre.

Class of 2004

LARGEST ASC CLASS EVER

Agnes Scott's class of 2004—257 students strong—arrived on campus this fall as the College's largest class ever. The first-years bring the total student enrollment to 901, the largest enrollment in the College's history.

Thirty-three percent of the first-year class was ranked in the top 5 percent of their high school class, and 55 percent were ranked in the top 10 percent of their high school class. The middle 50 percent range of their SAT scores was 1090-1300, their median ACT score was 27, and the average grade point average among them was 3.69.

The most popular interests among members of the incoming class are biology, English, international relations, political science, pre-medicine and psychology.

The class is 57 percent Caucasian, 21 percent African American, 5 percent Asian American or Pacific Islander, 5 percent Hispanic American or Latina, 4 percent international and 8 percent bicultural or other, according to information reported by students on their applications for admission.

The class is also geographically diverse, with students representing 28 states and 6 foreign countries.

ALUMNAE GUESTROOM NETWORK ENDOWING SCHOLARSHIPS

Need lodging in Atlanta, Boston, Charlotte, Houston or Washington, D.C.? Want to help sustain a scholarship at ASC? You can do both. Through the Alumnae Guestroom Network Endowing Scholarships (A.G.N.E.S.) program, the ASC Alumnae Association will secure affordable lodging for alumnae, students, faculty and administrative staff at the homes of alumnae in a growing number of cities. Revenue earned through the room charges endows a scholarship. For more information about adding your city to the guestroom list or for reservations, call 1-800-868-8602, ext. 6323.

ARTS

Anne Beidler, associate professor of art, has received the Southeastern College Art Conference award for Outstanding Artistic Achievement presented at the SECAC annual meeting at the University of Louisville in October.

Marylin Darling, professor of dance, presented a paper titled "Umbrellas in Dance" on Agnes Scott's collaborative efforts with the Dancers Collective of Atlanta at the International Council of Fine Arts Deans in Miami, Fla., in October. Darling was elected chair of the collaborations committee for the council. In addition, as director of nonprofit agency Abused Women and Children, Darling has been selected to receive a DeKalb County award for outstanding community service and to be presented a proclamation by the Georgia Legislature on behalf of the agency.

Kel Keller, instructor of photography, had one of his images selected for the poster of the second annual "Atlanta Celebrates Photography" program.

Tracey E.W. Laird, assistant professor of music, presented a paper, "Like Hen's Teeth: Sleepy Brown, Country Trumpet, and the Hybrid Culture of Western Swing," in November at Musical Intersections, a conference in Toronto.

Terry McGehee, professor of art, and Chris De Pree, assistant professor of astronomy, collaborated to produce "Celestial Spheres," a 30-foot diameter multi-colored granite terrace based on planetary orbits and other patterns of the solar system. The work was included in the Agnes Scott art opening "A Matter of Scale" and the Nov. 3 reopening of Bradley Observatory, and was reviewed in the Atlanta Journal-Constitution and the Decatur Community Review.

Artist affiliates Kay Paulsen, soprano, and David D'Ambrosio, piano, performed a recital at Nazareth College (N.Y.) with Nazareth faculty members Laura Enslin (Paulsen's daughter) and Kevin Nitsche. Paulsen was also given an Extra Mile Award by the Edwards-Miller Foundation in November in recognition of her work with a visually impaired student.

Donna L. Sadler, associate professor of art, presented by invitation of the International Society of Majestas a paper titled, "Images of Medieval Kingship," at the 19th International Congress of Historical Studies in August in Oslo, Norway.

David S. Thompson, associate professor of theatre, was elected vice president of membership at the 36th annual convention of the Georgia Theatre Conference in October.

HUMANITIES

Christine Cozzens, associate professor of English, led a seminar titled "Making Writing Assignments Work" to the faculty at Brenau University.

Julia K. De Pree, assistant professor of French, presented a paper titled "Writing Transference, Reading Rousseau" at the South Atlantic Modern Language Association in Birmingham, Ala., in November.

Michael R. Lynn, assistant professor of history, presented a paper titled "Electricity in the Air: the Geography of Popular Science in Eighteenth-Century Paris" at the October conference of the Northeast American Society for Eighteenth-Century Studies in Portland, Maine.

Rafael Ocasio, associate professor of Spanish and Spanish program coordinator, published a paper, "Autobiographical Writing and the 'Out of the Closet' Literature by Gay Latino Writers," in Antipodas: Revista de Estudios Hispánicos. He also presented "Indoctrination in Cuban Juvenile Publications: Newest Trends in Revolutionary Ideology" at the 70th annual South Atlantic Modern Language Association (SAML A) conference in November; and "Apropiación del Discurso Femenino: el 'Cross-Dresser' en el Teatro del Siglo de Oro y Sab de Gertrudis Gómez de Avellaneda" at the 50th annual Mountain Interstate Foreign Language Conference in October at Radford University (Va).

Tina Pippin, associated professor of religious studies, published "Fantasy" in the Handbook of Postmodern Biblical Interpretation (AKM Adam, ed.), Chalice Press, 2000; and "Whore of Babylon" and "Jezebel" in Women in Scripture (Myers, Craven and Kraemer, eds.), Houghton Mifflin, 2000.

Nicholas Radel, visiting professor of English, was co-editor of The Puritan Origins of American Sex: Religion, Sexuality, and National Identity in American Literature, Routledge, 2000. He also published "Queer Romeo and Juliet: Teaching Early Modern 'Sexuality' in Shakespeare's 'Heterosexual' Tragedy" in Approaches to Teaching Shakespeare's Romeo and Juliet (Maurice Hunt, ed.), Modern Language Association of America, 2000; and a review of Unspeakable Shaxxxespeare's: Queer Theory and American Kiddie Culture by Richard Burt, in Medieval and Renaissance Drama in England XIII, 2000.

Régine Reynolds-Cornell, professor emerita of French, wrote two book reviews for Bibliothèque d'Humanisme et Renaissance on Blaise de Vigenère: La Renaissance du Regard by Richard Crescenzo and on an edition of Le Chevalier Délibéré by Olivier de La Marche (Carleton W. Carroll, ed.; Carroll and Lois Hawley Wilson, translators). Reynolds-Cornell also presented a program on "Van Gogh: From Lost Faith to Lost Hope" at the High Museum of Art in Atlanta in September.

Michael Schlig, assistant professor of Spanish, published an article, "Spain as Orient in Juan Pablo Forner's Los Gramáticos: Historia Chinesca" in the Fall issue of Dieciocho: Hispanic Enlightenment.

Zrinka Stahuljak, visiting instructor of French, received her Ph.D. in French from Emory University in December.

SCIENCE AND MATHEMATICS

Linda Hodges, Kenan professor of chemistry, and Lilia Harvey, associate professor of chemistry, co-authored "Approaches to Promote 'Deep Learning' in Organic Chemistry" at the 16th biennial Conference on Chemical Education in August at the University of Michigan. Hodges also conducted an invited workshop titled "Promoting and Evaluating Deep Learning" at the University System of Georgia Conference on Impacting Student Learning in October.

Amy J. Lovell, assistant professor of astronomy, presented a paper titled "Collisional Excitation of HCN by Electrons in Comets Hyakutake and Hale-Bopp" at the 32nd annual meeting of the Division of Planetary Sciences, American Astronomical Society, in Pasadena, Calif., in October.

Larry Riddle, professor of mathematics, gave two presentations on the results of the 2000 Advanced Placement Calculus examination to the Georgia Association of Advanced Placement Mathematics Teachers and to the College Board National Forum in New York City.

ASC NEWS BRIEFS

FORMER HISTORY CHAIR DAVIDSON DIES
Philip Grant Davidson Jr., chair of Agnes Scott's history department from 1928 to 1942, died in October. He was 98.

Davidson left Agnes Scott in 1942 to be dean of Vanderbilt University's graduate school and became the university's provost in 1948. He was president of the University of Louisville from 1951 to Philip Grant Davidson Jr.

1967, where he has been credited with integrating the institution and helping convert the school to public status. He left Louisville to become an education adviser for the Ford Foundation in Southeast Asia.

"He was a wonderful person, a great teacher," said Rosalyn C. Robinson '35, who did research for Davidson after her graduation. "His students all thought the world of him."

Davidson died of natural causes at his home in Nashville.

EMERITUS TRUSTEE NEIL DAVIS DIES

Emeritus trustee Neil O. Davis died in June at 85. Davis was longtime editor and publisher of the Auburn Bulletin (Ala.), a Nieman Fellow at Harvard University, a member of the national Advisory Commission on Rural Poverty and chair of the Alabama Ethics Commission. He served the College as a trustee from 1966 to 1985. Agnes Scott's Board of Trustees adopted a resolution of appreciation for his life at the Board's November meeting. Davis is the father of Katherine Davis Savage '62 and Lee Davis Blackman '68.

DIRECTOR OF INTERNATIONAL EDUCATION NAMED
Jennifer Lund has been named director of Agnes Scott's Office of International Education. Lund has most recently served as associate director of the Office of International Education of the Board of Regents of the University System of Georgia. She has also directed the Office of International Services and Programs at Georgia State University and has worked with international programs at the University of Florida. Lund received her bachelor's degree from the University of Tennessee, her master's from Vanderbilt University and her doctorate from the University of Florida.

EVANS HALL EARNS DESIGN AWARD

Decatur's Historic Preservation Commission presented a design award to the College for its renovation of Letitia Pate Evans Hall. The dining hall was one of eight new or renovated buildings in Decatur to receive the award.

DEPOT PHOTOGRAPHS NEEDED

The City of Decatur is planning renovation of the old railroad train depot across the tracks from the College and is in need of old photographs of the depot. The city asks alumnae to search their scrapbooks for any photos that might help in the restoration of this building, and contact Julia Levy at (404) 377-5142 with information.

SOCIAL SCIENCES

Feng Xu, assistant professor of political science and director of the international relations program, published Women Migrant Workers in China's Economic Reform (St. Martin's Press, 2000).

STAFF AND ADMINISTRATION

Tim Hussey, director of interactive communications, gave a presentation at the Georgia Education Advancement Council (GEAC) in November on recent research technology initiatives Agnes Scott has done with its alumnae and potential students. He was also selected to serve on the GEAC board of directors.

PARTING WORDS

The Intestinal Power of Learning

ON STENDHAL SYNDROME AND PENTIMENTI OF LIFE

Following are excerpts from Associate Professor of Art Donna Sadler's address to the class of 2001 at Senior Investiture.

The first time I saw the Nike of Samothrace at the Louvre Museum, I felt a complex wave of beauty, nausea and lightheadedness that sent me careening down two flights of marble stairs in a dead faint. My right leg and left arm have mended, the humiliation has paled since most of the museum guards from that regime have retired, and I am extremely careful around breathtaking works of art. Was this a case of Stendhal Syndrome? The condition was identified in 1982 in Florence after 107 victims sought help in the psychiatric wing of Santa Maria Novella after being dramatically affected by the city's great works of art. It was dubbed the Stendhal Syndrome after the French writer who recorded a similar emotional experience on his first visit to the Tuscan city in 1817.

It was years later, when (Callaway Professor of Philosophy) Richard Parry and I were leading students on a Global Connections trip to Greece, that I saw the familiar signs of "art sickness" in an Agnes Scott student. We had stopped to pay homage to the Charioteer of Delphi and remark on his astounding beauty, much of which would have been shrouded from the original classical viewer. The chariot he wielded would have hidden the lower two thirds of his body and the vantage point of the statue would have concealed the windswept chiton and sweaty locks of hair clinging to his neck. As I began to wax poetic on the charioteer's correctly rendered inner maleolus and Mortan's toe, I recognized the liquid look in Audra's eyes, the strange lack of gravity playing around the lower two thirds of her body as she succumbed to the bronze statue's unflinching gaze.

Lack of breakfast? Perhaps. But why not swoon in front of a red figure vase? Her symptoms were classic. But I am not advocating Stendhal Syndrome as a way of life—it's far too drastic on the bone structure. What I urge you to heed is the poignancy of those classroom moments, when one is struck by the passion your professor has for his or her work. Somehow, despite the barometric pressure, the hangover, or the jaded je ne sais quoi, one is mesmerized:

learning happens. It seems that college is the perfect arena for finding the subject that makes one's gums ache with curiosity, one's heart pound a little faster.

Let us turn to an out of the way chapel in Tuscany where an Annunciation, painted c. 1342 and attributed to Ambrogio Lorenzetti, risked destruction in 1966 from rising waters. It was discovered that if one reversed the process of painting on wet plaster, one could actually remove the pigment that had bonded with the wall. By dampening the painting with a layer of glue, water and linen, the fresco could be rolled off the wall and reapplied to another wall. Beneath the rather prosaic treatment of this scene was a remarkable underdrawing of a Virgin who grasps a column and swoons at Gabriel's glad, but surely unexpected, tidings. Judging from the existing fresco, the patron disliked the originality of Lorenzetti's work and a different painter was summoned to complete the fresco. The existence of this pentimento offers an extraordinary glimpse of an artist working within a tradition-bound era, when iconographic and stylistic change occurred slowly, yet with the impact of a thunderbolt. Though the word pentimento, which refers to the underpainting that is ultimately discarded, comes from the Latin word to regret, I would argue that it is here that life is lived.

What makes college such an extraordinary time are, as with extraordinary works of art, the layers and layers of first drafts that constitute one's journey through a liberal arts education. In college you have the daunting opportunity to sample a varied palette, paint exclusively in cadmium red, or eschew lines for a semester, knowing that these sketches may be tossed the minute you are accepted to law school. It is not the college transcript that provides the palimpsest of one's path, but the overlay of experiences that define one. Find something that makes you weak in the knees, that brings you joy, aesthetic or otherwise. And revel in your pentimenti, for the sum of these unpolished drawings is what forges the handprint one leaves.

Gifts and Contributions, 1999-2000

Special names are etched across the landscape of Agnes Scott memories, names of founders, donors, beloved faculty, cherished classmates, and honored parents. When gifts are given to the College in honor or to memorialize, these names become a living legacy, a dynamic representation of the values, hopes, wisdom, and integrity of those whose lives they evoke. The contributions given in their names ensure a living memory, providing ongoing support to the educational mission of Agnes Scott College.

But special Agnes Scott names are not limited to those who are specially honored: each and every donor to the College is recognized individually in this annual "Donor's List." Your name, your class year, the amount of your gift, your relationship to the College as a friend, parent, student, staff or faculty member is listed herein. This simple list stands as a tribute to the thousands of individuals who take time each year to respond to a call from a student or a classmate, to a solicitation letter in the mail. It is our way of saying a heartfelt thank you, a public thank you to all who make possible the present and future Agnes Scott College.

As I read this list this year I realize that in this sixth year of my presidency I now have met many of you. I am personally grateful for your friendships, for the many different ways in which you assist in the work of the College, and for our shared commitment to strengthening Agnes Scott College for the century that has just begun. I look forward to seeing you again, and I know I can count on your support as together we launch "The Campaign for Agnes Scott College."

Ellen Davis Laws is in Columbus, Ind. She moved to Four Seasons Retirement Center two years ago to join several of her friends. Sadly, Ellen lost her daughter to cancer this year.

Though her 90th birthday is approaching, she still drives in town. She sends greetings to all '31 survivors.

Wonderful news came from Margot McCoy Gayle of New York City. She has just received the New York State Commissioner's Annual Lifetime Achievement Award "for her long and distinguished commitment to preserving cast-iron architecture in America." The commendation read, "Margot Gayle is the only reason we have a Soho." Congratulations, Margot!

Elizabeth Heath Singletary writes from Dalton, Ga., that at 89 she lives with her daughter and her daughter's husband in Dalton, where she enjoys cross-stitching and watching the Braves play baseball.

Octavia Howard Smith celebrated her 90th birthday in Fayetteville, N.C., with a memorable party given by her niece, Katherine Wolfe Webb, her family and relatives from many states. She is blessed with good health, plays bridge, drives and has had several of her musical compositions sung by the choir of her church.

Clara Nunnally Williamson and her husband, Captain Williamson, are looking forward to hosting their annual dance group at The Cloister in Sea Island, Ga., in January. Some new members and many regulars will be there. Their fifth great-grandchild arrived in September.

Helen Duke Ingram is in James Town, a retirement home in Fort Valley, Ga. Her sister-in-law, Lena Kay Duke, writes that Helen cannot see or walk and has to have help around the clock. Her brother is in Fort Valley, however, and goes to see her every other day.

According to Ruth Etheredge Griffin's daughter, Susan Griffin Condon, her mother is 92 and does not get out too much because of health problems. Nevertheless, Ruth sends greetings to her classmates.

Anne Hudson Hankins plays tennis, walks or goes sailing daily. She also is occupied with her church, choir, visiting children, grandchildren and great grandchildren.

Carolyn Heyman Goodstein in Charleston, S.C., says that all is well. Her granddaughter is engaged, a grandson just graduated from law school, and another granddaughter, 12, will go to Ashley Hall this year.

Helen Friedman Blackshear continues her poetry. Her latest book is titled These We Will Keep: Alabama's Poet Laureates. Helen will visit 10 cities or towns in the state to do readings. She drives everywhere, plays bridge and reads. Helen greets all her classmates, asking that they keep in touch.

Lillian Herring Rosas is thankful that reasonably good health allows her to live in her home of many years. Her daughter, Ellen, and husband, Bob Fisher, are in the vicinity. Their two sons, Jamison, 14, and Cameron, 7, are "both great kids." Scouts for the People to People Sports Ambassador Program chose Jamison as the outstanding student athlete and soccer player to represent his country, school and community in the Gothia Cup Games, played in Sweden in July. Only three students were selected from California. More than 6,000 from around the world participated. The competition was conceived by President Eisenhower to promote better understanding among young people. This was a great honor and opportunity for Jamison.

SECRETARY

Betty Lou Houck Smith
6391 Glenridge Drive, NE
Glenridge Commons Unit 200
Atlanta, GA 30328

Betty Lou Houck Smith received pictures from Rosalyn Crispin Robinson of her presence at the "Kiowa Powwow" in Apache, Okla. In one picture, Rosalyn is garbed in an elegant shawl, which had been made for her by the great-great-granddaughter of the tribe's chief, Satanta. Rosalyn goes to book signings with her author son, whose books on Western and Indian folklore are selling like hot cakes. On her own, she pursues civic projects that she initiated. Rosalyn also attended the M.D. Anderson Network's Living Fully with Cancer Conference in Houston, Texas. In addition, Rosalyn is, as usual, seeing that the needs of the elderly in her home town of Harlingen, Texas, are being tended to by the town fathers. She is also continuing to lead the cancer support group.

Fidesah Edwards Alexander's daughter Ina Ruth Peele, from Charlotte, N.C., spent a week with her, helping toss junk mail and other things. They joined a reunion at Fort London and toured Williams Island for their Indian and River Gorge Trust tour. Her older daughter, Doris, and husband are collecting shells in the former New Hebrides. Fidesah lost her older brother to diabetes in August.

Dorothy "Grace" Robinson Hanson has spent the last two months recovering from a broken hip. She had a fall while out watering her flowers early one morning. She is expecting her third great-grandchild next May.

Sarah "Lib" Thrasher

Baldwin broke a foot (cast up to her knee) and spent six weeks with her daughter and son-in-law while she was recuperating. She says she is almost a recluse because of arthritis. Six of her grandchildren are married—two still in college. She has three great-grandchildren—two more expected in the months ahead.

Marian Calhoun Murray is happy in her new abode, a retirement home with all amenities for comfortable living. She is close enough to home that visits to and from family members are easily accomplished. Marian has already welcomed daughters and grandchildren.

Elizabeth "Lib" Heaton

Mullino remains busy with her civic activities in the arts, symphony and ballet. She considers her Agnes Scott education one of the best things that ever happened to her. Her daughter, Mary Elizabeth Moore, is a professor at Emory University.

Betty Lou Houck Smith's eight years in Tennessee were delightful as far as her relationship with her daughter and her husband was concerned. She lived in the boondocks, 10 miles east of Chattanooga, and simply got bored, being away from her longtime friends and interests in the Atlanta area. So, when her former townhouse came back on the market, she bought it back and returned to her old familiar surroundings on June 29. Although it was a smart move with 20 boxes of books to be unpacked, moving was quite an activity. The Georgian Devereux Treatment Center and Agnes Scott College remain her main interests.

Betty Lou attended the Alumnae Leadership Conference luncheon and collected much information about events, construction, refurbishing, expansion and future plans involving the campus.

Helen Derrick Gardner pulled the same stunt as Betty Lou. She moved back to Augusta on the same day that Betty Lou moved back to Atlanta! She sold her house in Savannah and is glad to be home again.

Vella Marie Behm Cowan, the class's fund chair, will be contacting fellow alumnae in regard to planned giving in 2001.

Pensacola, FL 32514-1629

Enid "Dean" McKoin Bushong drove to Mobile and Baton Rouge (2,300 miles round trip) to visit her three older sisters.

Lita Goss Conrad and Bill have given up high-rise living to move into a "grandparents' apartment" built for them by their daughter and son-in-law.

Francis James Donohue has recovered from eye surgery.

Frances Miller Felts is in an assisted-living home in Myrtle Beach, S.C.

Mary Walker Fox has moved to a condominium complex,

Clairmont Place.

Sarah "Tay" Spencer

Gramling was in Montreat, N.C., for two months, part of the time visiting her daughter who is a counselor at the rehab center in Black Mountain, N.C. While in Montreat, Sarah attended a pleasant tea party gathering for ASC alumnae and students at the Assembly Inn. She saw Douschka "Sweets" Ackerman '33, now a great-grandmother, and said Douschka looked splendid. Not to be outdone, Tay is also a great-grandmother of a girl and a boy.

Sarah Nichols Judge prefers being in her own home, although many friends are urging her to join them in retirement facilities. She had fun at a family reunion at Bodega Bay, Calif. The family plans another reunion at Christmas. Sarah also took a fall foliage cruise from Montreal to Boston with her son, Tommy.

In July, Shirley Christian Ledgerwood and John visited their children, three grandchildren and two great-grandchildren on Orcas Island, Wash.

They were thrilled by the awesome fireworks over the sound. Shirley and John have the knack and luck of keeping busy, always grateful for good health.

Meriel Bull Mitchell could not go to the reunion in Montreat because her husband had suffered a fall shortly before that event.

Jane Blair Roberson wrote that her sister, Corrie Blair McPeake, died in August at 84. Corrie had practiced medicine for 54 years in her hometown, Loudon, Tenn. She left four children, two of whom are doctors, and one is married to a doctor. Other survivors are 10 grandchildren (one, a doctor in Memphis, Tenn.) and eight great-grandchildren. Among Corrie's many honors was being named "First Lady of Loudon." Jane's 86th birthday was in September.

Miriam Talmage Vann and her sister, Mabel Talmage '34, are content in their next-door apartments in a retirement village. Lovely people surround them. Unfortunately, Miriam has had further loss of sight and is now legally blind, but is helped by the use of a telesensory magnification machine. She participates in church activities and is a member of an exercise class, a garden club and a walking group. Her daughter and three teenage grandchildren live in Spanish Fort, Ala., not too far away. Since she no longer can drive, she feels fortunate that Mabel can furnish transportation.

Ruby Hutton Barron is at her home in Eufaula, Ala.

DEATHS

- Corrie Blair McPeake, Aug. 14.
- John H. Morse, husband of Helen Handte Morse, Aug. 31.

have been the only classmate on campus for Alumnae Weekend. During the summer she visited in the home of Jane Estes and her sister, Sara, in Gay, Ga.

In June, Fannie Harris Jones was on the campus of Dartmouth College in Hanover, N. H., to see a granddaughter graduate and be inducted into Phi Beta Kappa.

Decatur, GA 30030-4936

Tamiko Okamura, now 86, writes that her life's work has centered on interpreting the canon of the Bible. Her books will be published as The Works of Tamiko Okamura.

Elsie West Duval's granddaughter, Kathy Elgar, was married in Atlanta, Sept. 23, to Mark Wisneski. Joining her for the wedding was a mini-reunion of her classmates, Ellen Little Lesesne and Joyce Roper McKey.

Ellen Little Lesesne took her daughters to the Passion Play in Oberammergau this summer. She also went on a cruise to Alaska with her cousin Frances Abbot Burns '40.

Alice Reins Boyd spends her time enjoying small-town life and being with her grandchildren. Alice had two cataract surgeries this summer, both successful. She can now see wrinkles that did not show up in the mirror before.

Bertha Merrill Holt and husband Clary have returned from a California Wine Conference in San Jose and had a fine visit with their eldest son and his family in San Francisco during August. In September, they went to Williamsburg, Va., with senior lawyers. In November they will travel through the Panama Canal. "B" regrets missing the alumnae meeting in Greensboro, having been busy with politics and the campaign.

Mildred Davis Harding has been feasting on all the books she ordinarily has little time for: poetry, history, philosophy and religion. She especially admired Barzun's From Dawn to Decadence: 1500 to the Present. Since May she has been teaching a Saturday morning class in creative writing at a retirement community. She loves working with her contemporaries. Mildred also teaches ESL at St. Petersburg Junior College, an assignment she prefers. In September, she promoted her memoir, Waking up in Egypt, in signings at workshops in Borders, Barnes and Noble and other bookstores. Mildred's daughter, Branwen, is happy in Istanbul, and her son, Brayton, spends about half a year abroad. At present he is in Thailand. Husband Robert is well and remains the light of her life.

Anne Thompson Rose announces the arrival of her new great-grandson, born July 24. He is the grandson of Anne Nancy Rose Vosler '63. At the end of June, she entertained 15 members of her family for a week at Virginia Beach. Anne teaches Sunday school occasionally, volunteers at Westminster Canterbury Presbyterian Church and reminds classmates that life is good.

Elizabeth Blackshear Flinn reports using Lucy A. Rose's collection of devotionals as a guide for her daily devotions. The book, Speak, Lord, I'm Listening, was put together by Lucy's mother and father, Anne Thompson Rose and Ben, after their daughter's untimely death from cancer. Lib comments on the wonderful legacy Lucy has left and on the privilege of knowing that her ASC roommate mothered such a fantastic daughter. She urges sister Scotties to read and be blessed by the words of faith and love in Lucy's book.

Jane Guthrie Rhodes is ecstatic because her organist and choirmaster at Decatur Presbyterian have favorably received her folk opera, Mary and Joseph. A solo from the work was premiered at the Decatur Presbyterian's Annual Arts Festival in September. The church celebrated its 175th anniversary in October. Professors from ASC are lecturing at Jane's Bible and Arts Class on Sunday mornings, with Mary "Mardia" Hopper Brown '43 and Tommy Brown (beloved parents of Mary Brown Bullock '66) teaching right across the hall. The Annual Arts Festival will feature works of Rev. Martha Jane Peterson, retired Presbyterian minister, whose expertise in fabric painting is widely acclaimed.

In August, Nell Allison Sheldon attended the wedding of her niece in Oregon. On the way she enjoyed an excursion into Canada. Nell is an elder at Columbia Presbyterian and a board member of Villa International. She and Jane Guthrie Rhodes attended operas at the Fox, the Leadership Conference, and the celebration of the renovation of Bradley Observatory with an "Evening under the Stars."

Elizabeth Warden Marshall was amused, but also upset over the last class reports; "Her sole worry after 62 years of living alone . . ." She graduated 62 years ago. She was married and lived with her husband. She has lived alone with her dogs for 36 years, and wonders about her present four-legged companion's future when she can no longer care for her. She says it has been a good life with marriage, 40 years in her chosen profession, and her dogs. Also, Elizabeth stays well and happy with her work at the church, the DeKalb Humane Society and the Presbyterian Mission Clothes Closet. She keeps in touch with Mary Hudson Irby, who is recovering from chemotherapy, and with a favorite professor, Mary Virginia Allen '35.

Louise Young Garrett and Blake have built and moved into a one-story home next to the house where they lived for 50 years. A granddaughter and her family are moving into their former home. They are looking forward to lively activities there. Louise sends her best wishes for all her classmates' health and happiness.

Sarah Cunningham Carpenter's only grandchild, Jessie Elizabeth Carpenter, is 2 and a half years old. Sarah's son, Bob, and wife Jan flew to China to get Jessie. They now live in Chicago and Sarah enjoys the time spent with Jessie. Bob is with a new organization, having previously served as Alumni Director at Emory for several years. Sarah's daughter is with NASA in Houston. Sarah also gave news about the death of Cora "Corky" Hutchins Blackwelder's husband. Fae Blackwelder will be remembered well. He was always generous in hauling the girls around during reunions at ASC. The class will miss him and "Corky" at the 60th. "Corky" and children are in the hearts of classmates during this time.

DEATHS

- D. Fae Blackwelder, husband of Cora "Corky" Hutchins Blackwelder, Aug. 30.
- Louise Sams Hardy '41, sister of Betty Sams Daniel and sister-in-law of Hayden Sanford Sams, Oct. 14.

Montreat, NC 28757
CO-SECRETARY
Sophie Earle Montgomery Crane
P.O. Box 426
Black Mountain, NC 28711-0426

Mary Evelyn Francis Ault and Sophie Montgomery Crane agree that the 60th reunion of the class of '40 was a glorious affair! An amazing 30 were able to attend, along with husbands, daughters and assorted friends, making an impressive group. The class was awarded two silver bowls: one for having the best attendance and the other for contributing the most money to the Alumnae Fund. In the words of Vice President Elizabeth "Dibba" Davis Johnston, "We are a most unusual class, with none like us in love, friendship and loyalty to each other and to the College." Classmates have aged, of course (mellowed may be a kinder word), and although acutely aware of missing members at the reunion, clearly had a good time. Special thanks are due to "Dibba," "Hat," Edith and Sara Lee for all they did to make it a huge success.

In September Marian Franklin Anderson and Paul welcomed their second great-grandchild.

Hazel Solomon Beazley's husband, Jon, marked his 85th birthday with festivities lasting two days, July 11 and 12. Joining in the celebration were family, former office personnel and friends from all over Florida.

Katherine Patton Carsow reports that she and Bill stayed close to home this summer as they braved the record heat and drought of Texas.

In August, Evelyn Baty

Christman set forth on a riverboat cruise in the Northwest on the Columbia and Snake rivers.

Kathryn Maddux, granddaughter of Grace Anderson Cooper and daughter of Martha Cooper Maddux '69, is a first-year student at Emory this year. Grace is looking forward to the mini-reunion in Myrtle Beach this fall.

Sophie Montgomery Crane was the recipient of one of the 2000 Outstanding Alumnae Awards, that of Service to the Community. She also took part in the Alumnae Authors' Roundtable for her book, A Legacy Remembered.

Although she stays busy with PEO, a 100-year-old book club, DAR and church, Mary "Boots" Moore Culpepper and Fred found time to tour Syria, Jordan and Lebanon. "Boots" took an icy dip in the Dead Sea on a freezing January day. In August, a family reunion in Tennessee saw most of their 22-member family gathered, including three great-granddaughters. Daughter Dorothy, a teacher of the hearing impaired, received her doctorate in May; and grandson Pepper Culpepper is a faculty member at Harvard.

Harriet "Hat" Stimson Davis, the new class president, welcomed a second great-granddaughter in August. They live close enough that Hat can visit often.

Ernestine Cass Dickerson and Ralph enjoyed a seven-day, inside-passage cruise of Alaska with grandson Tyler McGee. When their grandchildren and great-grandchildren reach the age of 10, Ernestine and Ralph have taken them on trips. So far, they have been to Hawaii, Scotland, California, Mexico, the Canadian Rockies, Key West, Arizona and the Bahamas.

In June, Mary "Polly" Ware Duncan journeyed to England, Wales and Scotland with her daughter, son-in-law and three granddaughters. In spite of lost luggage, delayed flights and a computer failure in Heathrow, Polly insists they all had a great time.

Betty Jean O'Brien Jackson calls this year the "Year of the Eyes." Both she and Charlie had cataract surgery on both eyes. She, for one, can now "see" (particularly, to drive). Her advice: never fail to get a second opinion!

While illness prevented Julie Moseley from attending the reunion, her book, Come to My Sunland, was presented at the Authors' Roundtable.

Marguerite Baum Muhlenfeld and Ed celebrated their wedding anniversary at the Naval Academy, where they were married 53 years ago. In June, they attended Ed's 60-year Naval Academy reunion (85 of his classmates were there).

Mary Lang Gill Olson went to Salisbury in September for her 64th high school reunion and then to the Grand Strand for a mini-reunion of the class of '40.

In August, Mary Lib Chalmers Orsborn and Harry attended a family reunion in Pennsylvania. On their way home, they stopped in Nashville for a delightful lunch celebrating the birthday of Violet Jane "VJ." Watkins and their grandson's completion of his doctoral requirements at Vanderbilt.

Elizabeth "Gary" Horne Petrey and Donald celebrated their 60th wedding anniversary. Their children took them to Savannah, the site of their honeymoon. Out of 24 family members, 21 were there.

Violet Jane "VJ." Watkins reports that Philip Davidson, before his death in October, lived about a mile from her and was pleased to hear that eight out of nine members of the class named him their favorite professor.

Martha Zellner Webb suffered a "small stroke" in May, but it has not stopped her from traveling. In July, her husband, George, took her on a river barge trip on the Cumberland, Ohio and Mississippi rivers. Then they drove from Memphis to Cashiers, N.C., and finally home to Orange Park, Fla.

Henrietta Thompson Wilkinson had a wonderful visit with her son in Maine last summer. While she was there, they traveled to Canada. Henri continues to enjoy the retirement home where she has many friends.

DEATHS

- George Knox Brown, husband of Mary Mac Templeton Brown and father of Mary Brown Diehl '78, May 11.
- Dr. Eric Cotter, husband of the late Lutie Moore Cotter and father of Martha Cotter Oldham '70, July 11.
- Edward Sture Olson, husband of Mary Lang Gill Olson, May 27.
- Smith L. Johnston, Jr., husband of Elizabeth "Dibba" Davis Johnston, Oct. 12.
- Charles Mayer, husband of Elizabeth Warren Mayer.

Class President Mary Madison Wisdom, has sold her home in Dunwoody, Ga., and is now a resident of Lenbrook Square on Peachtree Road, where several other alumnae reside. Mary looks forward to seeing many classmates at the 60th reunion in April.

Mary Stuart Arbuckle Osteen spent most of the summer in Columbus, Ohio, with her son, James, and his family. When she returned to Florida, her granddaughter, Emily, left for Nassa, Tanzania, for two years to teach grades four, five and six to the children of missionaries at the Sudan Interior Mission.

DEATHS

Jane Stillwell Espy
2 Downshire Circle
Decatur, Ga. 30033-1419

Jeanne Osborne Shaw was the featured poet at a Georgia Poetry Society reading. She is the author of some 500 published poems, including three books of poetry, a history book and a scrapbook of DeKalb medical history. She was recently named an artistic director of the Georgia Poetry Society and is also a member of the Arts and Humanities Committee of Learning for Life, Boy Scouts of America.

Nancy Ballengee Brown celebrated her 80th birthday in June with a gala brunch for 150 guests at the Halifax Yacht Club in Daytona Beach. The event was hosted by her son, Dr. B. Thomas Brown, his wife, Dr. Kimlee Brown, and two grandchildren, Brook and Schyler.

Betty Robertson Schear called to say that she and her husband, Bob, had a wonderful time at Nancy Ballengee Brown's party. Betty and Nancy were roommates at ASC 61 years ago.

Also celebrating her 80th birthday was Irma "Polly" Frink Bunnell. A thousand orchids fashioned into leis, crown and scepter, plus balloons and other gala decorations made for a truly memorable occasion at Fernandina Beach. Attending were all of her children, grandchildren, great-grandchildren and her sisters, Alice and Barbara Frink Allen '45, from California.

In August, Margaret Sheftall Chester's daughter, Laura Chester, published a book titled Kingdom Come. Another follows soon: Holy Personnel, dealing with chapels on private land. After a trip with a group from the Milwaukee Art Museum to Berlin, Dresden and Weimar, Margaret returned to her home in Scottsdale, Ariz., for the winter. She announces the arrival of another grandchild, Benjamin Chester.

Dan Johnson, son of Dorothy Garland Johnson, was sworn in as United States ambassador to Suriname in South America. The ceremony was held in Jacksonville and attended by his family of 23 adults, four children and friends.

Myree Wells Maas and husband Joe are proud to announce that their son, Steven Wells Maas, has been promoted to rear admiral in the U.S. Navy. Myree says it is interesting that a graduate from a liberal arts college, Furman, can do so well, considering that most admirals went to Annapolis. She and Joe attended the "frocking" ceremony in Athens.

Mary Sue Heldmann Mercer sent an updated family report. Two great-grandchildren arrived in 2000. A granddaughter, Jamie Peoples Stovall, graduated with a master's degree in accounting from Georgia Southern University. Another granddaughter, Joella Potts, received a master's in early childhood education from the State University of West Georgia. Her grandson, Phillip E. Mercer, enlisted in the Navy in 1999 and is assigned to the USS Benjamin Franklin, an aircraft carrier.

Additional news of college graduations came from Mary "Beckie" Andrews McNeil. One grandson completed his baccalaureate at Texas Christian University and another at the College of William and Mary, the alma mater of both parents. "Beckie" attended the impressive graduation in Williamsburg, Va., and embarked on a Caribbean cruise in September with both daughters.

Ila Levie Bagwell enjoyed a short visit from Sabre Louise Pruitt Jones in June. Ila keeps busy with multiple church duties, her bridge and book clubs and her grandchildren: Betsy, 12, and Landrum Earle "Buck" Bagwell IV, 14. Her son, Landrum, was recently transferred from Atlanta to Charlotte, N.C., to become the southern sales manager for the supply division of Boy Scouts of America. Ila's daughter, Fran, has a state job and is very active in First Presbyterian Church, Spartanburg, where she is a deacon, Stephen minister, wedding director and member of both the chancel and the hand bell choirs. She is also president of the Alumni Association of Limestone College, as well as a trustee of that institution.

Sabre Louise Pruitt Jones was happy having her son, his wife and new baby girl, Avery Jones, live with her for three months until they were relocated in their new home in Dacula, Ga.

Lillian Gish Alfriend describes her last two and a half years as an extended medical emergency because of a multiplicity of medical problems with husband Bill. She refers to him now as her "precious bionic husband." Bill has had two knee replacements, total hip replacement, two angioplasties, gall bladder surgery and prostate surgery. Lillian says she has been blessed with super strength and is ready to celebrate her 80th birthday in February with their children, grandchildren and great-grandchildren all present.

Susanna McWhorter Reckard celebrates life in an interesting retirement community in Claremont, Calif. During May, she participated in a tour of Australia and New Zealand, made possible, she says, because of two hip replacements. In addition, she joined Mary Stuart Arbuckle Osteen '41 for the fun at their high school reunion. She stayed on in West Virginia afterward, visiting relatives and friends. Her five sons are flourishing, and she has two grandchildren.

Elise Nance Bridges writes devotional materials for two publications. Her husband, Fred, received the District Governor's Appreciation Medal for his work with the Lions' Club. Her oldest grandson graduated in June from George Mason University.

Elizabeth "Betty" Clarkson Shearer has moved to Lexington, Va., from her former home in Marietta, Ga. She now has happily settled at Kendal at Lexington, a retirement complex. She has a comfortable apartment with a view of the beautiful Shenandoah Valley. Betty has become interested in the area's history.

Julia Ann Patch Diehl is very active at her condo, with church, bridge and three dance classes a week. One of her daughters lives near her with her husband and their two boys. Her other daughter is in Los Angeles, Calif., and her son, in Atlanta, Ga. Julia Ann thinks Atlanta today is unbelievable.

When Gay Currie Fox celebrated her 80th birthday on July 24, she was thrilled as 500 friends, family and a number of ASC buddies showed up for a magnificently organized and produced "Gayla for Gay." The party was held at the Black Mountain Center for Arts and presented the story of Gay's life in prose and pictures. It was clear that she has been a person of strong determination and lofty dreams, with the strength to combine the two characteristics to make for a better reality. The deputy director of the North Carolina governor's western office honored Gay with the Order of the Long Leaf Pine, one of the most distinguished awards in the state. The editor of Black Mountain News expressed great admiration for Gay, who serves on the editorial board of the newspaper and has always brought good ideas to the meetings.

Jane Stillwell Espy's husband, Robert, recently spent a week in the ICU at Emory University hospital. After a heart catheterization and a pacemaker implant, he is recuperating nicely at home.

In August, Maryann Cochran Abbott and husband Forrest boarded an expedition ship, The Explorer, to begin a fabulous cruise to northern Norway and the remote Arctic Islands farther to the north. Among the ice floes they spotted seals, walrus, polar bears and thousands of nesting sea birds. Their trip climaxed at NyAlesund, the world's northernmost permanent settlement.

After being secretary at her church in Stockbridge, Ga., for 33 years, Hester Chafin Martin is presently enjoying her retirement.

Ann Flowers Price fell and broke her hip in November. At present she is receiving therapy and assisted living at the Southminster Retirement Center, Charlotte, N.C. Her husband, Porter, comes to visit each day and eats some meals with her. At other times they go for short trips. The experience has been difficult, but Ann is making progress.

The Agnes Scott Alumnae Club in St. Louis has been very active. Bennye Linzy Sadler hosted a dinner for prospective Agnes Scott students in January, and the Club had a party for all students leaving for ASC in August. Also, Flora Campbell McLain, who keeps in touch with Bennye, reported that Bennye and Dale Drennan Hicks '42 get together several times a week to "pump iron"!

Mardia Hopper Brown and Tommy had a delightful trip to Long Beach, Calif., in June. They spent two days at the Presbyterian General Assembly and received an award for missionary service from Presbyterians for Renewal. It was a thrill to attend the reception for the new moderator, Syngman Rhee, on board the historic ship Queen Mary.

Ruth Farrior counted about 30 alumnae at the annual Montreat Agnes Scott reunion in July. Since she lives in Montreat, she always treasures this get-together. Bobbie Powell Flowers and Aurie Montgomery Miller were among the class of '44 present. Ruth's niece, Ruthie, and her family—two boys, 4 and 1—were visiting, too, and keeping things very lively.

Aurie Montgomery Miller and John like their new home at Highland Farms Retirement Community, Black Mountain, N.C. She says a number of Agnes Scott alumnae reside there. Aurie and John also have a mountain cabin near Little Switzerland, N.C., and plan to get together with Ruth Kolthoff Kirkman and Tom, who have a summer home nearby. Aurie was thrilled at Alumnae Weekend when her sister Sophie Montgomery Crane '40, received an award from the College for Outstanding Service to the Community. One of Sophie's accomplishments has been her book, A Legacy Remembered.

Leila Holmes reports that her summer in Highlands couldn't be more delightful. In her "wee little house" that she found in 1995, she enjoys the escape from Thomasville. Her many friends come to visit her at "Over the Hill"—appropriately named, she says, because both the house and she are at that point!

Liz Carpenter Bardin and her husband spent a wonderful summer in Michigan, and at various times all their children and 10 of 12 grandchildren joined them. Liz is trying to interest one of her granddaughters, an AAU swimmer, in ASC. Liz has just completed her two-year term as president of the Russell Island Property Owners' Association.

Eugenia Jones Reese's husband passed away on April 18. In June, she had an excellent few days in Lynchburg with Ceevah Rosenthal Blatman. They "never stopped talking, having much to tell after 55 years"! Eugenia recalls they had fun but no success teaching their dogs to become friends.

Martha Mack Simons loved the 55th reunion. She thinks that being the only total wartime class must have made their friendship unique. Martha spent most of her summer having a good time on family trips.

Since the reunion, Joyce "Joo

Froo" Freeman Marting has enjoyed photos and has renewed acquaintances with classmates. Summer brought home repairs to Joyce, including a new roof and digging up drains.

Hansell Cousar Reardon and John have been in Harrisonburg, Va., for one and a half years and find it great to be in the South again. Hansell and John celebrated their five-year anniversary on Sept. 22. They plan two trips in the near future: one to Montana (if they aren't burned out) to visit her youngest daughter, Nancy, and another to Hawaii in October to swim in the beautiful water. Hansell would love to hear from any other alumnae in the Harrisonburg area.

Ginny Carter Caldwell moved a year ago to an apartment in Bentley Village, a retirement community in Naples, Fla., administered by Hyatt.

Marion Leathers Kuntz's husband, Paul, died on Jan. 28, 2000, after a long illness following a stroke. She is still teaching at Georgia State and has just completed two new books on Venetian history: Venice, Myth and Utopian Thought in the Sixteenth Century and The Anointment of Dionysius, Prophecy and Politics of Renaissance Italy.

When Margaret "Molly" Milam Inserni visited her daughter, Margarita, in San Diego, she called Elaine Kuniansky Gutstadt and Joe. They were off to Tuscany that very day with one of their daughters and her family. Elaine and Joe were also going to the Amalfi Coast and to the south of France to see the French exchange student who stayed in their home 28 years ago. Elaine's daughter, Lynn, is back in Marin, Calif.

Mary Cumming Fitzhugh had an impressive but exhausting trip to Europe and is pleased with her house in Highlands when she is not in the dentist's chair. Elizabeth "Betty" Glenn Stow and the Highlands Flingers will attest to the house's charm and to Mary's hospitality.

Martha Mack Simons, Jean Hood Booth, Adele Dieckmann McKee '48, and Margaret "Molly" Milam Inserni join in confirming Betty's Highlands hospitality. That group missed Elizabeth "Betty" Davis Shingler and Julia Slack Hunter, who had shingles.

Carolyn Fuller Nelson reports a fun-filled summer that just went by too fast. She traveled to Germany for a riverboat trip in August on the Rhine and Moselle, culminating in Vienna. While in Vienna, she took in the opera. Classmates should call Carolyn if they are in the bay area.

Barbara Frink Allen was sorry to miss the reunion because of Lew's sickness but says that he is recovering very well. Their grandchild, Fenton, is the first to be married. His wedding was held in Virginia over Labor Day weekend. She and Lew will spend Christmas in England with their youngest son and his family. They also plan to move to Virginia into an Air Force Retirement Community as soon as a vacancy occurs. The expected wait is three years.

Mary Louise "Bitsy" Law McPherson lost her childhood home in July because of a lightning strike. She has relocated in Atria Assisted Living of Atlanta.

Betty Jane Hancock Moore thought the reunion was exciting and had fun seeing old friends. She lives in Williamsburg, a seniors' retirement community in Decatur, Ga. She enjoys seeing June Lanier Wagner '44, who lives in the same complex. In June, she and her daughter visited Jane Everett Knox for another reunion. This year, two of her grandchildren graduated from college: a granddaughter, from Georgia Tech, and a grandson, cum laude from Auburn. He has entered Mercer Law School. Betty Jane finds that her grandchildren's graduations from college really age her, and so in August she escaped to relax in beautiful Callaway Gardens.

Jane Everett Knox's husband, Lee, died in February of bone cancer. She will stay on Frapp Island, where she has many friends as she does at St. Helena's Episcopal Church, and says: "Only here could I walk the beach every morning."

Inge Probst reports that all of her minor troubles (allergy, backache and insomnia) vanished, as always, in Italy. Specifically, she was in Verona and Venice. In news of her classmates, Inge says that Wendy Whittle Hoge is still in Milton, Mass., visiting her daughter and young Nicholas, and that Virginia Bowie planned a Canadian Rockies' jaunt in the summer.

Louise McLain Cantrell was attending an Elderhostel in England at reunion time.

Betty Glenn Stow went to Italy in June with an Emory group and then to Cambridge, England, with Julia Slack Hunter and Hugh. They spent two weeks at Cambridge taking classes.

Pattie Dean Curry and Jim celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary in June at a reception in their church's social hall in Anderson, S.C. Their daughter, son-in-law and granddaughter came from Massachusetts for the occasion. Son Dean played the same music on the violin that Pattie's Agnes Scott roommate, Mary Quigley Hague, had played at the wedding. Pattie was happy that Gloria Gaines Klugh and Arthur, Jimmie Ann McGee Collings '51 and Tom and Mary Hague attended the celebration.

Elisabeth "Libby" Woodward Ellis' tragic news concerns her son-in-law, Bill, husband of Mary Ellis McBride '78. Bill died unexpectedly of a brain aneurysm while they were all vacationing during Easter. The class extends its heartfelt sympathy to "Libby" and to Mary.

Lura Johnston Watkins is thrilled that her son, Rick, has been made vice president of Cartoon Network and has moved his family to Marietta, Ga. Lura feels that she will get to the campus more often now that she has family in the area.

1999 marked the 50th year of practicing law for Elizabeth "Lib" Osborne Rollins. She was the only woman at a luncheon hosted by the North Carolina Bar Association honoring a group of "49ers" that year. She wrote, "I am telling it as I would like to be told by my classmates so I could begin to envision their lives after 54 years." She and Clyde have moved their office to the guesthouse and continue to enjoy their legal work on a smaller scale. Having done considerable traveling abroad through the years, the Rollins duo are now exploring the United States.

During a weekend in Montreat last summer, Eleanor Reynolds Verdery had a visit with Stratton Lee Peacock.

Ellen Marie Hayes moved in May to Barclay Friends, a Quaker retirement community in West Chester, Pa. Her ancestors had settled in the area in 1709. Ellen retired after teaching in elementary schools in Atlanta, Philadelphia and Framingham, Mass. Her sister, Anne Hayes Berry '48, and husband Sid, together with their brother, Henry, and his wife, Louise "Twig" Hertwig Hayes '51, assisted in the move.

Edwina Bell Davis spent several hours in August in Greensboro, Ga., with Betty Howell Traver at her home, built for Edwina's grandparents in 1849. Betty and her husband, Daniel, bought the house in 1970 and have extensively remodeled and restored it. Edwina's father, the youngest of nine children, was born there. The Davis family occupied the house until 1874.

Boisfeuillet Jones Jr., son of Anne Register Jones and Bo, was named the publisher and CEO of the Washington Post in September.

The last time that Marianna Kirkpatrick Reeves was in Atlanta she visited Ruth Limbert Adams.

C.G. and Conradine "Connie" Fraser Riddle welcomed the arrival of great-granddaughter, Elizabeth Lauren Mitchell, on Sept. 11.

Martha Baker Wilkins is planning to come to the reunion. She enjoys her family, friends, volunteer work and some traveling.

DEATHS

- Vance Cathey, husband of Margaret Scott Cathey, July 2000.

They are looking forward to more visits with Nancy Geer Alexander and Don and other alumnae nearby or passing through.

Mary Sheeley Little Miller is recovering from breast cancer.

Harriet Gregory Heriot and Harriet Reid went to Oxford this August, participating in a Smithsonian program on Shakespeare.

While visiting a niece in Amherst, Mass., Dabney Adams Hart enjoyed a lovely day with Mary Alice "Mac" Compton Osgood.

Beth Jones Crabill and Bill accompanied their daughter, Betsy Crabill Shirk '74, on a recent trip to France.

Margaret Yancey Kirkman and Neil spread their 50th wedding anniversary over several months, beginning with a cruise to Tahiti. Back in Chapel Hill, the festivities continued with a dinner at the Siena Hotel. Marian Yancey Carroll, who had served as maid of honor, and all of her children and newest grandchildren celebrated with the Kirkman clan. Completing the celebration, the Kirkmans, accompanied by Marian, planned a trip to Waldron, Wash., to visit Lida Walker Askew and husband Gene, who had performed their wedding ceremony.

For Memorial Day weekend, Julianne Cook Ashmead and her husband were in Savannah, where Louise "Poochy" Gehrken Howie was one of the hostesses. Julianne and Poochy had a fine visit together. In June, Julianne's granddaughters from Alaska spent time at Big Canoe for the first time by themselves.

Georgia Powell Lemmon and Frank have moved to a retirement community in Davidson, N.C.

Rachael "Binky" Stubbs Farris and Duncan were in Italy for two weeks in May, as was Betty Jean "B.J." Ellison Candler.

Mary "Jo" Heinz Langston's encaustic monotypes-calendar series was on exhibit in Sante Fe in August and September. Jo continues to show regularly at art galleries in Tucson and Tubac, Ariz.

Henrietta Johnson divides her time between homes in Columbia, S.C., and Asheville, N.C. During the summer she attended the Agnes Scott tea in Montreat. She added a pleasant visit with Nancy Parks Donnan, who is quite occupied with six children and eight grandchildren as well as all kinds of church and community work.

Edryce Reynolds lives in Tacoma, Wash., teaching and giving papers in psychohistory and criminal justice. In June, she presented a paper in New York City titled "Can 'Corrections' Really Correct?" In February 2001, Edryce will travel to China to teach for nine months at the University of Beijing. Having wanted to do something like this for years, she is very excited. She plans to keep a journal about her experiences and hopes to get it published.

Elizabeth Williams Henry and her grandson traveled during the summer to Oberammergau and the Middle East, the only U.S. citizens in a Canadian tour group.

During the summer, Betsy Deal Smith enjoyed a happy family reunion at Bar Harbor, Maine, after which she and Gil explored Nova Scotia and Prince Edward's Island.

Mary "Butch" Hays Babcock and Charlie gathered with their family this summer in Idaho, with 16 of them taking a tour that went up the Snake River on a jet boat and down the Salmon River on a raft, leaving them with a raging appreciation for Lewis and Clark.

Charlotte Lea Robinson's son and his wife recently welcomed twin daughters. This arrival makes eight grandchildren. Charlotte recently had to undergo chemotherapy and radiation, but she is hopeful for full recovery.

Several classmates recently noted their 50th wedding anniversaries. Dorothy Quillian Reeves and Harrison enjoyed being with 95 friends and relatives at a daughter's home. Among the guests was Pat McGowan Evans from Chattanooga, one of Dot's bridesmaids of 50 years ago. All seven of her bridesmaids were ASC graduates.

In June, Edith Stowe Barkley and Brock's children gave them a semi-formal luncheon and afternoon reception in northern Virginia, where Edie and Brock were presented a special memory book made up of pictures and notes from relatives and friends. Later the group spent a week at the beach together, 16 people in one house!

Celebrating their golden anniversary in July, Lee Cousar Tubbs and Jim joined their children and grandchildren for a cruise from New York to St. John, New Brunswick, and Halifax, Nova Scotia. In addition, long-time friends were asked to contribute to a memory book given to the couple during their cruise.

Speaking for the class of 1950, Annette Ward Moore would like to thank President Mary Brown Bullock, the Alumnae Association, Agnes Scott staff and students for a first-class reunion. The class appreciates all the hard work and effort put into the weekend. They are grateful to all the girls who drove them around the campus for being so gracious, to the dining room and kitchen staff for the delicious meals and to the shuttle drivers for their service. Also, Annette sends a special thanks to the gardeners for the beautiful campus. It was a weekend the class will never forget.

Jane Sharkey Cobb and her husband, John, celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary with their three children and their spouses on a cruise to Spain and Portugal. They had an unforgettable time.

Dorothy Davis Yarbrough and her husband, Thomas, were the recipients of a surprise dinner for their 50th anniversary after the graduation of their daughter, Shannon, from Virginia Tech. Their two sons, along with their spouses, were there. Col. Stan Yarbrough is stationed on Okinawa, and their other son, Wade, lives in Raleigh, N.C. Dot and Thomas spent a week in June in Pigeon Forge.

Frances Howerton Lucas was in West Palm Beach Gardens attending the North American Butterfly Association Convention. While there she visited Mildred Flournoy de Marcellus and her husband, Robert. Frances will spend two weeks studying art with an Elderhostel in northwest France and Paris.

Jessie Hodges Kryder and Bill went on a cruise on the St. Lawrence Seaway, starting in Quebec City and ending in Toronto. Jessie reports that Vippi's husband had heart surgery.

Paula "Polly" Harris Nettles' daughter, Paula, was married in June in the chapel at Woodward Academy. The reception was held in the amphitheater in front of the Fine Arts Building.

Faye Tynes Dick has been visiting with her family in Montreat and Black Mountain.

Sally Thompson Aycock and Catherine "Cathie" Armfield enjoyed a few days with John and Jo McCall Cobb in Easley.

Sarah Hancock White and husband Marlin spent seven weeks in the Middle East this summer. They returned to the same archaeological site, Khirbet Iskander, in Jordan, with which they been associated for almost 20 years. The group lived in the ancient, biblical town of Madaba near Mt. Nebo. Marlin managed the dig houses and served as treasurer. Sarah was artifact registrar and artist. She had the privilege of cleaning, registering and drawing 67 artifacts. At the end of the dig she presented her drawings and the artifacts to the Jordanian Department of Antiquities. Among these was a small ceramic bull's head, a rare find for an Early Bronze Age site. Also, the Whites took advantage of a mid-dig break to visit Israel. They will share their travel slides and dig experiences with their church forums and with other local groups.

The following people attended the 50th reunion: Jo-Anne Christopher Cochrane and Warren, Dorothy "Dot" Davis Yarbrough, Annette Ward Moore, Marion "Elizabeth" Flowers Ashworth and Bob, Sally Thompson Aycock and Marvin, Catherine "Cathie" Davis Armfield, Betty Crowther Beall, Joann Plastre Britt, Ann Pitts Cobb and John, Jo McCall Cobb and John, Mildred Flournoy de Marcellus and Robert, Gretta Moll Dewald and Charles, Mary Carolyn Schwab Drakes, Elizabeth Ann Griggs Foster and Asa, Joanne Peterson Floyd and Waldo, Marjorie "Margie" Major Franklin and Ted, Polly A. Philips Harris and David, Mary Ann Hachtel Hartman, Margaret Haden Howe and her daughter, Barbara McArthur, Mabel Burchfiel Hudson and Doug, Virginia Skinner Jones, Jessie Hodges Kryder and Bill, Rosellen Gillam Potter, Patricia "Pat" Buie McKinney, Claire Foster Moore and Jimmy, Elizabeth "Betty" Cole Van Houten, Margaret "Louise" Arant Rice and Hobby, Helen Edwards Propst and Charles, Ann Irwin Smith and Henry, Alline Marshall, Nancy "Jean" Osborn Sawyer and Gordon, Genie Paschal Harvey and Ray, Barbara Lawson Mansfield and Eston, Emily Reid Williams and David, Martha Stowell Rhodes and Erroll, Sarah Tucker Miller and Tim, Leila Walker Vinson and Nelson, Mary Warlick Niblock and Frank, Paula "Polly" Harris Nettles, Barbara "Babs" Young Reiland and Bob, Betty Jean Combs Moore and Park and Jean Niven Morris.

Genie Paschal Harvey writes in complimentary fashion about the reunion in April. She thought it was great to be with college friends and to meet new ones and found the College even prettier than ever. In June, Genie and her husband, Ray, celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary with a trip to The Cloisters and Edisto Island with their three daughters.

In August Joann Peterson Floyd and Waldo celebrated their golden wedding anniversary along with their children and grandchildren, a family of 18, at the Idle Hour Country Club.

A very special thank you to Agnes Scott College for hosting the Class of 1950's reunion, the Fifty Year Club's elegant banquet, the Anna Young Club pins; to Margaret "Louise" Arant Rice and the reunion committee for thoughtful planning; to Mable Burchfiel Hudson for the lovely dogwood pendants; to Libby D. McAliley for celebrating the lives of deceased classmates with a candlelight service; to the 55 classmates who contributed information for the reunion directory and to the 45 who were able to attend.

Dorothy "Dot" Medlock-Bond Irvine writes from Turkey. She's spending time with her children: Cathryn, in Ankara, and Robin, in Golden, Colo. She states, "Right now I still have my apartment in Aiken, but will probably be moving to Turkey this year. I am so sorry to miss the 50th reunion in April, but don't cry for me. We just got back to Ankara after a skiing vacation in Austria, Switzerland and Germany. I didn't ski, but I was glad my family wanted me there to welcome them off the slopes and reminisce about the old skiing days at Mammoth Mountain when we lived in California."

Mildred "Milly" Flournoy de Marcellus, who lives in Palm Beach, Fla., retired after serving as associate mathematician with The Johns Hopkins Applied Physics Laboratory in Silver Spring, Md. In addition to her husband, Robert, her family includes six children: four boys and two girls, ages ranging from 26 to 37. Milly's current activities include duties as an elder in the Presbyterian Church and as a volunteer in a homeless shelter, combined with travel and other innumerable projects.

Eleven classmates came to the third annual mini-reunion June 16-18. We met, and some of us lived, at the Alumnae House on campus to make plans for the 50-year reunion, April 27-29, 2001. Present were Jeanne Kline Brown, Sarah McKee Burnside, Anna DaVault Haley, Louise "Twig" Hertwig Hayes, Dorothy Adams Knight, Mary Caroline "M. C." Lindsay, Barbara Caldwell Perrow, Ann Marie Woods Shannon, Jenelle Spear, Martha Ann Stegar and Gail Akers Thompson. Anna reported that the class's Vision Fund, which will be the 50-year gift to the College, already totals more than $89,000. Barbara enticed five of her classmates into the College's swimming pool to learn her program of deepwater conditioning using inflatable wrist and ankle cuffs. It was fun and invigorating, too.

Marjorie Stukes Smith and Charlotte Key Marrow had their own mini-reunion at Marjorie's home in Presteigne, England. On her way home from an Elderhostel situated in Dalkeith, about eight miles south of Edinburgh, Charlotte stopped to see Marjorie and David. The Smiths were excellent tour guides for the area. Marjorie took Charlotte over the Welsh border to see Margaret Andes Okarma '52, whom Charlotte had known in the First Presbyterian Church youth group in Knoxville before Agnes Scott.

In May, Ed and Mary Hayes Barber Holmes introduced Wade and Sarah McKee Burnside to their first Elderhostel in Tuscany. They extended their trip to Bellagio on Lake Como for four days. Sarah pronounced it fabulous.

Jimmie McGee Collings and Tom went to Tom's 50th class reunion at Clemson University in May. In June, they attended the 50th wedding anniversary of an Agnes Scott friend in Anderson, S.C., Pattie Dean Curry '46 and her husband, Jim. Pattie and Jim have two children, Dean and Pattie, and one grandchild. About 16 years ago, Jimmie Ann and Tom moved from Anderson to Greenville, Tenn., where Tom served as pediatric consultant with the state.

Katharine Loemker Kokomoor was back home in Vermont for the summer after an eight-week trip around the country in an RV with her husband, Don, two dogs and a cat, for a total of 10,000 miles of marvelous sights. In October, they returned to Palm Harbor, Fla., and to Captiva Island. There Don will complete his third and final season as minister at the Chapel-by-the-Sea.

Betty "B.J." Foster Deadwyler broke her hip in May, and Martha Ann Stegar had a total hip replacement in July. Both are recovering nicely.

In August, Su Boney Davis and Jim went on a 12-day singing tour of Romania and Hungary with the minister, chorale director and 45 singers from their Unitarian Universalist congregation. Their church has had a partner relationship with a Unitarian Church in a small ethnic Hungarian village in Transylvania since 1992. They gave a total of five concerts in Romania, highlighted by a concert at the Unitarian World Gathering at Szejkefurdo. Arriving in Budapest, Hungary, they sang at an evening concert at the First Unitarian Church. Su went to Warren, Ark., for a high school reunion in October.

Nell Floyd Hall is busy with work at her church and at the Fernbank Museum of Natural History. She is on Fernbank's Board of Directors, of which Jesse was formerly chair. Nell, a childhood friend, and Shirley Ford Baskin '52, toured Europe by train during May and June. They started in Prague and ended in Rome. While in Germany, they witnessed the Passion Play at Oberammergau. In December, Nell plans a trip to Williamsburg, Va. She recently met for lunch with Betty Foster Deadwyler, Saradean Merritt, sister of Caronelle Smith Landiss, and Shirley Ford Baskin. Nell's daughter and son-in-law live in Greenville, S.C., with her two grandsons, ages 16 and 17. Her son is in California. He has completed work on his master's degrees in divinity and theology and has written several study course books.

Joan Coart Johnson and Henry have traveled extensively following Henry's retirement as radiologist at Piedmont Hospital. After Joan injured her back and had to give up tennis, she joined two investment clubs, which she greatly enjoys, proving the existence, she says, of life after tennis. Joan's daughter, Carol, felt called to leave the corporate world to start a bread ministry out of her kitchen in Atlanta. Carol's goal is to open a Christian coffeehouse in the Buckhead section of Atlanta, offering young people an alternative place to hang out. Joan will be happy to talk to anyone interested in learning more about the ministry. Joan's oldest grandson graduated last year from Furman University. Another grandson is a senior at the University of Georgia. Three younger grandchildren live in Atlanta.

Sarah Levy completed her senior year at Centenary College in Shreveport, La. She received her master's degree at Louisiana State University and went to Japan, where she worked with the Army for two years as a librarian. After returning to the United States, Sarah worked at Georgia Tech, married Alvin and raised three children. Then she enrolled at Oglethorpe University and received her teacher's certificate. She was an elementary school librarian for 18 years. In family news, Sarah's bachelor son, Jerry, lives in California. Her son, Ben, is married and located in Suwanee, Ga. He and his wife have two little girls. Sarah lost her daughter, Carolyn, in an automobile accident near the end of Carolyn's senior year at the University of Georgia.

Betty Foster Deadwyler collided in her home with Goldie, her golden retriever, and suffered a broken hip resulting in a partial hip replacement. She expects a full recovery. Betty Jane is fortunate to have her children living nearby. Betty Jane has three grandsons: Tommy, who serves in the Marines; David, at the University of Georgia; and Jimmy, the golfer of the family, who is in middle school.

Cornelia "Nena" Hale Bryans presented a lecture and exhibit on Visible Image and Invisible Faith, October 20-21, at The Carl Howie Center for Science, Art and Theology.

Clairelis Eaton Baxter continues volunteer work at The Ark in Athens. She hosted Sara "Sally" Veale Daniel, who attended the Methodist Conference in Athens in June.

Mary Jane "Jinnie" Brewer Murkett and Phil visited Tanglewood with their Symphony Association and "finally got to see Boston." They enjoyed the John Singer Sargent art exhibit. Through the A.G.N.E.S. program they stayed three nights with Sally Pockel Harper '65. Future plans include a trip with the Friendship Force in September. LaWahna Rigdon Smisson and Hugh are planning to accompany them on the trip to several cities in South America.

Shirley Heath Roberts and Lamar embarked on a sentimental journey to New Orleans, site of their honeymoon, to celebrate their 42nd anniversary.

Cecelia Schor Hall and Andrew have four daughters and six grandsons.

Barbara Yowell Schwind

heads the volunteers for the medical clinic her church sponsors in a very small town. A widow since 1981, she says she feels like the Earth Mother, always nurturing someone. The special one of the moment is a 21-year-old grandson who has had brain surgery. She and her second husband had four children in addition to his children by a previous marriage. Now they can count 18 grandchildren (including steps) and some step-great-grandchildren. Barbara keeps a large notebook filled with vital statistics such as clothes sizes and social security numbers. For fun she travels.

Julia Grier Storey was elected as an alternate delegate to the Republican National Convention in Philadelphia; Bob went along just to have a good time with no responsibilities.

Kathleen Stout Mainland spent June in Great Britain, no doubt seeing many old friends and relatives.

Charlotte "Carolyn" Randolph DeLay and Randy had a great time with a Tauck Tour of Ireland in 1999 and plan to do another. She keeps moving doing volunteer work, working out at the Atlanta Athletic Club and trying to finish library books before they become overdue.

Virginia "Bo" Hancock Abernathy has eight grandchildren now, three boys and five girls.

Nancy Lee-Riffe has had meaningful visits with her sisters, Sara Lee Mackay '41, near New Salem, Ga., and Ann Stratton Lee Peacock '46, in Montreat, N.C. Although enjoying retirement, Nancy works overtime in volunteer activities with The Ark as an advocate at local and state levels for the mentally retarded. She is also involved with her local Quaker meeting and with the Friends' Committee on National Legislation. Lobbying is a sport that especially attracts her.

Margaret Joen Fagan reports from last year's trip around the world and many foreign climes.

Though retired, Ellen Griffin Corbett gives private music lessons and does substitute teaching of reading in the public schools. She's apt to take off for France very soon, however, since her younger daughter and two grandchildren now live in Clairmont, France, where her husband works for Michelin Tires. Ellen has a French language tape in her car now! Older daughter Paula has a baby boy, Trevor, her first.

Betty Stein Melaver is enjoying having son Martin, his wife and children, ages 7 and 5, in Savannah for the next two years before they return to Israel. Like their parents, the children are already bilingual. Betty's time and enthusiasm are largely focused these days on building an art museum, the first ever to be built as a museum in Savannah.

Judith "Judy" Promnitz Marine was recognized in the Westminster Magazine Spring/Summer 2000 edition as "A Leader of Leaders." She is a gifted educator who has touched the lives of thousands of elementary students since 1954. Judy has been working on a manuscript with friends, hoping to complete it before a very exciting trip to Kenya in November.

Kathleen Stout Mainland spent last June back home in Britain, touring with relatives and friends. She assembled 13 members of the '49 class of Dunferlin High School for a reunion lunch and altogether had a fine time. She feels, however, like a foreigner over there now. In August, she went to Boulder to visit her grandson.

In June, Mitzi Kiser Law and Ted flew to Madrid and the ancient town of Ubela in Spain for a wedding. Then they traveled to Brussels and Bruges, Bristol, Bath and London. Mitzi said it was a wonderful trip and particularly recommends two plays they saw in London: Stones in His Pockets and The Lady in the Van.

Louise Hill Reaves likes taking short trips to see friends and participates in many volunteer activities.

Chizuko Yoshimura Kojima and her husband, Duncan Stuart, are recovering splendidly from several serious illnesses over the last year.

Caroline Lester Haynes and Jack went to Turkey in September.

Celia Carolyn Alford Beaty and Roy traveled to Scandinavia, Seattle, Yellowstone and the Grand Teton this summer.

Trudy Awbrey Wahle is remodeling and redecorating much of her house. She retired from real estate to see more of her grandchildren and concentrate on travel. A trip to Italy a year ago inspired her.

Constance "Connie" Ballas Stratigos ventured forth on her big trip to Greece this fall. Here at home, she is very active in hard-of-hearing support groups.

Julia Beeman sends profound thanks to all who contributed to the annual fund (or other); the class achieved 68 percent participation! Four of Julia's photos won ribbons at a spring show. In travel, she and her daughter took Julia's long-awaited Mediterranean cruise.

Margaret "Peggy" Bridges Maxwell's oldest daughter, Marie, was married on June 27; and Peggy's husband, Sidney, officiated.

Catherine Blondeau Echaliere writes from Paris that she has three children and six grandchildren. She is retired and is president of the historical archaeological association La Montagne Sainte Geneviève et ses abords.

Nancy Clark Bonne's husband, Hans, retired; but she continues as full-time children's librarian at the Beverly Public Library in Beverly, Mass. Two of her five grandsons have moved from Colorado to Maine and therefore, closer to Nancy.

Susanna Byrd Wells spent the summer in the mountains.

Carolyn Crawford Thorsen's oldest son, John Chesnutt, was promoted to regional vice president of Cox Communications.

As a result, he left Omaha, Neb., for Atlanta, along with his two children, Dara and Jeff, delighting Carolyn.

In July, Martha Crowell Stewart and seven of her family visited her daughter and her family in London, where Tom has an assignment with Coca-Cola.

Constance "Connie" Curry's new book, Deep in Our Hearts, documents the experiences of nine white women in the freedom movement.

In June, Helen Fokes Farmer and Russell went on their third trip to Scotland.

During the last week of August, Marjorie Fordham Trask rented a large oceanfront house at Fripp Island, S.C., for her family of 15. In September, she traveled to Sweden, Finland and St. Petersburg, Russia, for 12 days.

Jane Gaines Johnson's husband, Ralph, had prostate cancer surgery in April, but the cancer had not spread. In August, they flew to southwest Africa to visit two deserts: the Namib and the Kalahari.

Janet Greene Thompson had a spinal fusion. This fall she took a two-week garden tour of Italy. In November, she spent a week in Sedona, Ariz. Next spring, Provence!

Lucile Brookshaw went to Georgia State after ASC. After working for the state, she retired in 1998. She is an active member of Grace United Methodist Church.

Ann Evans Manchester received a master's degree in library science at Emory, worked as a librarian at Georgia Tech and is now retired. Her current activities include bridge, tennis, biking, library volunteering, Sunday School teaching and volunteering at Bethesda Home for Boys.

Sammie Frierson Mills earned a bachelor's degree in English and had graduate hours toward a master's in education. She taught high school English and later substituted. Next Sammie became a private pilot. Now she breeds and races thoroughbred horses, especially in Kentucky.

Tillie Galanti Tenenbaum earned a B.S. in education from the University of Georgia in 1954, taught a few years, then worked with her husband in their retail store. They have three children and five grandchildren.

After 35 years with BellSouth, Jacqueline Harper retired in 1987. This summer she saw a number of Atlanta Braves' games and also vacationed in New York. Jacqueline lives with her mother in Tucker and is active with Telephone Pioneers.

Gracie Greer Phillips and husband Barry enjoyed taking their two granddaughters (11 and 7) to London for a week. In the fall, Gracie and Barry toured the Middle East with a group from Fernbank Museum.

Patty Hamilton Lee and her husband, Bill, were delighted with an art and music tour of Spain along with five other relatives and the tour group. Patty is again leading Spiritual Journey groups in Tallahassee. Bill has become parish associate of a Presbyterian church there. They are enjoying their grandchildren

This summer, Ann Hanson

Merklein and husband Ernest spent two memorable weeks in England with an ASC group led by Mike Brown. Ann and Ernest have two new grandchildren this year!

Jeanne Heisley Adams's granddaughter celebrated her 16th birthday in August; and her daughter, Ginger, bought an 1890s restored house in University City, Philadelphia. Jeanne continues to work part time as a therapist.

Jane Henegar Loudermilk, husband Larry, both girls and their families vacationed on the beach on Amelia Island. Since Larry retired 10 years ago, their hobbies have been golf, gardening and grandchildren.

From April through June, Helen Jo Hinchey Williams and her husband, Roy, visited Greece, Egypt and Turkey. She is chair of the Sarasota-Manatee Chapter of the United Nations Association of the USA Adopt-A-Minefield Committee. They are trying to raise $30,000 to clear a minefield in Croatia.

Dorothy "Dottie" Holcomb Buchanan and husband Andy led a prayer retreat on the Columbia River Gorge in Oregon. They spent a whole week on the Outer Banks in North Carolina with their whole family (17 in all).

Mary Hood Gibson is captivated by her two lively grandsons and working out with a trainer a couple of times a week. After the reunion Elizabeth "Betty Ann" Jacks Miller and Ralph visited Pauline Waller Hoch and Walter at their beach cottage in Florida. In June, they went to Charleston, S.C., and then to Mackinac Island, Mich.

Hannah Jackson Alnutt bought a new boat and cruised as far as Martha's Vineyard this summer. She retired from her job as a high school guidance counselor in the largest high school in Virginia.

This summer's five weeks with her grandchildren provided an "exhausting blessing" for Mary Alice Henning Kemp. Her recovery plans are to find a job and to continue in a spiritual formation certificate program at Columbia Seminary.

Mary Evelyn Knight Swezey attended a family reunion (35 Knights) with her children in early June at Montreat. In July, she and her husband, Charley, had a wonderful getaway in Vail, Colo. They also traveled to Massachusetts with all of their children for a family wedding. In August, M.E. spent two weeks in Montreat with her sister and her family. While there, she had two splendid visits: first, with Ann Hanson Merklein and her sister, Libby, and second, with Jane Frist '56.

Sallie Lambert Jackson's three children have given her six grandchildren.

Catherine "Cathy" Lewis Callaway's son, Gene, will continue to serve in the Georgia House of Representatives, as he had no opposition. She now gets to work again in his office during the session.

Genevieve "Genny" Lucchese Stephens is treasurer of the Savoyards Musical Theater, doing Broadway plays this season.

Sara McIntyre Bahner attended a garden party given by the queen at Buckingham Palace as well as a reception at 10 Downing Street with the Board of Governors of the American Bar Association. The wedding of Sara's friend's children was beautiful; she missed not being at the reunion. Her husband, Max, had a knee replacement in August and is doing well.

Margaret "Peggy" McMillan White had to leave the reunion early because of her mother-in-law's illness. Bill's over-90 parents are now in a nursing home, a skilled-care facility in Knoxville, Tenn. Margaret recently had a delicious luncheon in Chattanooga with Sara Dudney and Sara McIntyre Bahner. Bill and she are enjoying retirement and their condo in Florida.

Grace Olert Dailey served on jury duty, bought a baby grand piano and had a welcome visit with Dave and Bertha "Tunsky" Kwilecki Ausband. Grace will teach 3-year-olds next year at a church preschool three days a week.

Patricia "Pat" Paden Matsen spent three weeks in Hampshire, U.K., with her friend Avril and made day trips to Southampton, Brighton, Portsmouth, Winchester, the Castle and D-Day Museum at Southsea and London to see the new Tate Modern.

Mary "Molly" Prichard Curry and Leonard met Ann Allred Jackson, Kent and Pat Paden Matsen at Peaks of Otter on the Blue Ridge Parkway for a reunion. Son Justin received his Ph.D. in psychology. Molly is retired but does periodic research.

Betty Reiney Henley is competing in ballroom dancing and is scheduled to do a solo cha-cha and a spectacular swing dance with two partners. She just returned from a competition in Knoxville, where she entered 30 heats, receiving 15 blue and 14 red ribbons.

Louise Robinson Singleton was coordinator for an international conference held at Denver University during the first week of August. The Millennium Connection focused on social change, with about 700 people from 30 nations attending. Louise planned to go back to Africa in November.

Margaret Rogers Lee's summer included numerous short, exciting trips. One highlight was whitewater rafting on the Nolichucky River in Tennessee with daughter Lisa and her family.

In June, Agnes Mickey Scott Willoch and husband Ray spent a week in London. They also took a trip to Northern Italy, the lakes, for two weeks in September. They welcomed a new grandson, Karsten, born to daughter Lisa in May. This makes nine grandchildren for them.

Harriet Stovall Kelley's husband, Chuck, had liver surgery that encompassed three operations in two weeks. Harriet became a nurse this summer.

Sue Walker Goddard and her husband, Bill, joined 24 Atlanta friends for two weeks in Bavaria (to see the Passion Play in Oberammergau and King Ludwig's castles), then Italy, staying in Venice, Florence and Rome. Her youngest son, Alan, and family (missionaries in China) were treated to a month in America, most of it with Sue and Bill.

Pauline Waller Hoch reports two more grandchildren. David and Shannon had a son, Harrison Walter Hoch, May 25; Madeline and Paul's daughter, Sarah Jennings Marsden, arrived Aug. 25. They enjoy having their daughter Paula, with her husband and two boys, back in town.

After 21 years, Edith "Edie" MacKinnon Sloan and her husband, Charlie, have sold their bookstore in Waynesville, N.C. They anticipate biking, travel, reading and visits with their children and grandson.

Frances B. Sattes is working hard in Chesapeake, Va. She serves on the membership and legislative committees of the local human resources organization, is fund-raising chair for the women's project of Habitat (The House that Jill Built) and will be program chair for the local training organization.

Hazel Ellis retired in June 1999 from her position as head of counseling at a high school in Bakersfield. She is now working part time as a guidance consultant. Hazel reports that Margaret Woolfolk Webb and her husband, Glenn, traveled to Eastern Europe in September.

The marriage of Jeanette Clark Sparks's daughter, Holly, to Richard Prior took Nancy Alexander Johnson and Pierce to Melbourne, Fla., and then to Pensacola to visit her daughter, Cathy, and her family. In July she and Pierce spent 10 days on Keuka Lake and in Massachusetts and 10 days in the great northwest in August.

Eileen Graham McWhorter and Penn revel in their eight grandchildren and spend as much weekend time as they can at their mountain house. Penn is thinking about retiring, but hasn't done it yet.

Marion "Pinky" McCall Bass has been part of a show called Voices Rising at the National Museum for Women in the Arts in Washington, D.C. This show closed in September, and she will travel around Alabama for the next two years. Pinky's sister has moved to Fairhope. They spent three weeks in Mexico getting alternative medical treatment for her sister's cancer. The latest X-rays indicate that some small spots on her lungs are no longer present, so they assume the treatment is helping. With two pianos in one room, they are working toward a concert some time in the future. Marion's nine grandkids visit from time to time, and her mother and father celebrated their 87th birthdays in August.

Mary Norton Kratt recently published her new chapbook, The Sow's Ear Press.

Anne McWhorter Butler and her sister took 88 at-risk kids, ages 10-18 years, to camp this summer at Kids Across America Kamp. They are now preparing for the beginning of the tutoring program for these young people, covering the school year. Anne's nephew was George W. Bush's national finance director, so she has been very interested in the presidential campaign. Class news should go to her new e-mail address: ambutler1@juno.com.

The word is Ramona Cartwright Burdell has taken up motorcycle riding. The Class of '58 continues its tradition!

Jane Kraemer Scott enjoyed attending the Agnes Scott College Millennium Conference in February at Sea Island, Ga. Other classmates in attendance were Margaret Ward "Wardie" Abernethy Martin, Mary Dunn Evans, Jane King Allen, Lila McGeachy Ray, Ann Rivers Payne Hutcheson and Lillian Shannonhouse Weller. Jane and her husband, Bodie, went with a group of 25 from their church on an intergenerational mission trip in July. Adults and youth traveled to Nuevo Laredo, Mexico, to participate in a Presbyterian border ministry.

Caroline Pruitt Hayes, India Clark Benton, Sara Persinger Snyder and Barbara Lake Finch had a reunion in Charleston, S.C., in June. This group all lived on the second floor of Inman Hall as freshmen at ASC. They were enthusiastic about many of the musical events featured during the Spoleto Festival and about some of Charleston's wonderful restaurants.

Donalyn Moore Elich and John moved from southwest Florida to north of Atlanta (address above) in early December. Three married children and five grandchildren nearby make this a joyous change. Donalyn is happy to return to the beauty of four seasons as well as that of the North Georgia mountains. Classmates should send their latest happenings to her periodically for inclusion in the class news section of MAIN EVENTS. Meanwhile, here are more excerpts from the 40th anniversary reunion information sheets.

Carolyn Hazard Jones and Bob live in Virginia Beach, Va., where she takes pride in her flower garden and her granddaughter, Mary Randell. Son Griffith lives with Mary Randell and her mother, Peggy, in Virginia Beach. Son Chester and wife Jenny are in Tampa. Carolyn takes pleasure in reading, bridge, teaching Sunday School, learning mahjong, garden club and babysitting. She says the most valuable thing about her Agnes Scott experience is "that women were respected, valued and encouraged to use all their talents over the entire course of their lives."

Maria Harris Markwalter and Richard divide their time between their homes in Huntsville, Ala., and Satellite Beach, Fla. Maria opened a small tennis shop and watched it grow into a nice sports specialty Serve and Volley Shop, now owned by son Roland. She continues to assist him with the buying and to enjoy tennis actively, play duplicate bridge and travel. Maria is blessed with "four wonderful children and five special grandchildren." She asks, "What else could anyone want?" She believes that "grandchildren are the payback for old age." Both of Maria's daughters graduated from Agnes Scott. Teace Markwalter Sanders '82 and Richard live in Birmingham and have three children, while Marianna Markwalter '94 is a Tauck Tour Director. Son Richard works as a mechanical engineer with Boeing and is the father of two.

Blanche "Boogie" Helm Nichols salutes the relaxation of retirement and not needing an alarm clock. Previously, she taught world geography to high school and university students in Jacksonville, N.C. Now she spends more time with travel, desktop publishing, rubber stamping, reading, church and ADK (an educational sorority) activities. Son Bobby also lives in North Carolina and is employed by the Research Triangle Institute.

Anita Sheldon Barton is executive director of the Cobb County Youth Museum in Marietta, Ga., where she plans museum programs. Her daughter, Anne, resides in Cincinnati with her husband and two sons. Daughter Ginny works at Scientific Atlanta, having completed her master's in fine arts at Florida State. Travel, bridge and a book club are among Anita's hobbies. Agnes Scott helped her "develop the ability to handle more effectively the 'ups and downs' of life."

Mary Morris Hurlbutt writes about her life in Oahu. She thoroughly endorses being semi-retired, working only a day or two a week at Barnes and Noble in Honolulu. While at home on Oahu, she and her friends travel about the island, lunching at the beautiful beachfront hotels or seeing the scenery of the drives up the hills and around the shore. This year was fortunate for Mary because she had two trips to her home state, Pennsylvania, as well as one to Maine. She says fall on the mainland is a glorious sight.

Mary Gillespie Braeunig happy-

ly reports that her sister, Margaret Gillespie Sewell, is recovering from extensive cancer surgery she had in January. Despite reconstructive surgery on her mouth and jawbone, she is not disfigured and has regained the ability to talk, eat and drink. Mary and Margaret express their gratitude to all their Agnes Scott College friends, especially those from Hardeman Cottage, for their prayers, flowers, cards, e-mails, care and concern.

Patricia "Patsy" May Touw writes that Kenneth is now working for Medco, a branch of King Pharmaceuticals. As he pursues a degree, their son, Adam, is in Chicago at the Art Institute in the computer department. Daughter Kate spent the summer in Washington as an intern at the Air and Space Museum while living with her sister, Anduin, and husband Brian in Virginia and commuting.

Ann "Bunny" Teeple Sheffield updates her last report with news that her family's trip to Madagascar to see daughter Perry, who was there on a Fulbright Fellowship, was a success and a whole new educational experience. Her husband, John, heads the South Carolina Tennis Association based in Columbia, S.C. They are splitting their time between Columbia (living aboard a boat on Lake Murray) and their home in Roswell, Ga. Their music-theater daughter, Anna, survives in New York City, and Perry has started medical school in Augusta.

Mary Chapman is in her third and last year in a master's program in landscape architecture at the University of Georgia. She spent most of the summer in Cortona, Italy, taking classes in photography, illustration and art with the university's art department program.

Continuing her adventures in corporate America, Eliza Stockman has left the restaurant business to become the paralegal for the general counsel of Milliken and Company. She finished an extensive leadership training program, including the "from dirt to shirt" study of the textile industry. Now Eliza is trying to convince her boss that she's indispensable and should be a part of any upcoming European travel.

Dorothy Schrader reports having re-entry problems after seven weeks of typing on a French keyboard (where key vowels are switched and all numbers are upper case). Her stint directing the University of Oklahoma's Summer School in Paris went well. She and her family found living in an apartment right across from the Sorbonne a charming experience. Her daughter, Elizabeth, enters eighth grade this year. Dorothy's husband, Richard, continues to teach Spanish at Oklahoma Baptist University, and she remains at Oklahoma State.

Patricia Grant Gooding is celebrating having finally gotten all her children into high school and beyond. Paige is a sophomore at University of Georgia and a real Bulldog fan (husband Bob, a Georgia Tech graduate, is trying to cope). Carter is a junior and Grant a freshman at Riverwood High School. Pat sees Sharon Dixon regularly and says she is well and happy working at the Atlanta Regional Commission.

Carol Blessing Ray and Bill are beginning to live the retired life. Bill left BellSouth in June, and they are now at home near Sarasota, Fla., with plans to spend summers in Highlands, N.C. Their son, Chris, graduated from the University of Puget Sound and trekked through Madagascar with Ann "Bunny" Teeple Sheffield's whole crew this summer. Carol visited daughter Calli, who is in France for a semester.

Jo Freiler Van Vliet and her husband John are beaming grandparents. Their daughter, Jackie, and husband Dave welcomed a baby boy, John David Codevilla.

Margaret Tara Swartsel Boyter has discovered her niece, Alex, is a roommate at Wellesley of Sally Wood Rogers' daughter, Anne. Tara caught up with Sally via e-mail and had a good visit.

Christine Engelhard Meade was surprised to see her ASC roommate, Margaret Tara Swartsel Boyter, at daughter Claire's wedding in June. Tara just happened to be visiting her mother over that weekend and invited herself to the wedding. Chris was delighted to see her. Tara reports that the mother of the bride was elegant, as was the bride, of course! Chris' daughter, Elizabeth, graduated from Agnes Scott College this spring, and Chris had to give Marsha Williams Norman a big hug at the ceremony. Her son, Ben, spent the summer studying German at the Goethe Institute in Rothenburg, Germany, and afterward did the backpack and Eurail pass experience with friends. He headed back to Furman in September.

Sandra Earley will spend her fall/winter researching high schools for her eighth-grade son, Bradshaw. He is finishing at a small Friends' school in Pennsylvania. Sandra has a plea. She desperately needs to hire a television producer to help her do editorials on cable television. She wants to know if someone knows anyone who might be interested or if a classmate might want a new career in television.

Ruth Hayes Bruner's son, Marshall, was married in May to Katie Neal. Katie is a social work student at Georgia State University. Marshall is a Methodist minister in Lawrenceville, Ga. Ruth's son, David, will spend this semester in Valencia, Spain, through a Florida State University program.

Melanie Moreland Yulman and her husband are now empty nesters. Both children, Nick and Kait, are at Wesleyan University in Middletown, Conn. Melanie teaches pre-kindergarten at Friends' Central School and works summers at the Philadelphia Museum of Art writing grant requests and applications.

Minnie Bob Mothes Campbell has joyfully relinquished her interim job as director of alumnae relations at Agnes Scott College. She and Mike celebrated with a wonderful trip to Scotland and Ireland in the fall.

The class extends its thanks to John and Laura Watson Keys for hosting the wonderful 30th reunion party at their home in April. A special treat was the impromptu bagpipe serenade by Ruth Goeller Chandler's husband, Walker, who has been playing the bagpipe for two years. He is a criminal defense attorney in Zebulon. The Chandlers have two sons; the older is a sophomore at the University of Georgia.

Mary Hatfield LeCroy and Tom spent two weeks traveling in England and Scotland during the summer. They met their two daughters, MaryBeth and Kemper, in Edinburgh. Mary Wills says it was a wonderful trip, especially since they don't see their daughters often now that they are "grown."

Sally Tucker Lee also met her son, Bronson, in Europe this summer. He was studying at Oxford for several months, and Sally was able to travel in England and Scotland with him. In Wales she visited with a friend and did some shopping there for her antique business in Parrott.

Another traveler to England in June was Caroline Mitchell Smith, who went with her sister and aunt. She caught up with son Charles, who was studying and traveling in Europe at the same time. Caroline's daughter, Emily, is finishing her master's degree in accounting at Auburn.

Janet Pfohl Brooks's oldest son, Chuck, graduated from West Point in May and has been training at Fort Benning, Ga., for most of this year. Next he will be stationed in Alaska for three to four years. Their daughter, Elaine, is a junior at Cornell University with a pre-med/biology major. Youngest son Steve, a high school senior, hopes to major in marine biology somewhere in a warm climate. They actually had all three children home for a while this summer, something that hadn't happened in four years. As a result, the whole family spent some time rock climbing near New Paltz, N.Y. Chuck was on the mountaineering team at West Point. In a final get-together, they had fun sightseeing and taking in a few Broadway plays in New York City.

Lily Comer Keyes' step-daughter, Emily Keyes, was married in Bryant Pond, Maine, in August. Lily's husband, Bob, and their 6-year-old daughter, Sidney, vacationed there for two weeks after the wedding. Sidney is a first-grader. Lily works as a senior organizational development consultant at Blue Cross and Blue Shield of North Carolina.

Nancy Rhodes McCrummen, husband Norman and daughter Meg enjoyed taking a group of 24 to the Passion Play in Oberammergau, Germany. They traveled to Austria and Italy as well.

The class extends its sympathy to Martha Cotter Oldham in the loss of her father and to Sandra Wilson Harris in the loss of her mother.

Frances Maguire Paist has recently accepted a job as a writer with an ad agency in Gwinnett County in metro Atlanta. Fran's daughter, Jessica, is in sixth grade; Katherine is in fourth.

After a 25-year hiatus, Tammi DeVore has returned to the Atlanta area and has bought a house in the Windward neighborhood of Alpharetta. Tammi will be with the Director of Product Development in the information technology unit of McKessonHBOC. Her younger son is a freshman at the University of Washington; the older is a junior at William and Mary.

Mary Anne "M.A." Bleker is the class's newest mom with the adoption of a truly beautiful baby girl named Ella.

Classmates were treated to photos at the reunion.

Susan Gamble Smathers brings more clout to the class of '75 with her recent appointment to the Agnes Scott Board of Trustees. It is a well-deserved honor, with none better class member to hold the position.

Ruth McManus Mansfield, Mary Jones Underwood and Susan Gamble Smathers were on a vacation get-together this past summer in Ponte Vedra, where Ruth, Susan and Susan's son, Bruce, had fun scuba diving.

Nancy White Morris teaches school in Gwinnett County and has twin boys attending Georgia Tech.

Allyn Fine Linas reports a "trinity" of news: a new house, a new husband and a new master's degree in special education.

Rebecca "Becky" Thompson continues her practice of law with the court of appeals for the D.C. area.

Allison Grigsby Spears represents portrait artists throughout the Southeast. Her children, a boy and a girl, are now 16 and 13.

Sarah Worman works as a surgical nurse and is the mother of a teenage girl, 15, and boy, 16.

Victoria "Vicki" Burgess Stephan serves as executive director working with strategic planning for Ronald McDonald Houses. Her children are 16 and 20.

Della McMillan continues to do research and consulting in anthropology.

Catherine Pugh Cuneo, a paralegal in the Greenville, S.C., area, has children ages 19 and 22.

Mary Pender Derck manages many retail enterprises, including an art gallery in Grayton Beach, Fla.

Beth Wickenberg Ely is a minister in an Episcopal church in Spartanburg, S.C.

Ruth McAliley Harper is the envy of the class of '75. This summer she played hostess, as it were, not only to Mel Gibson but also to Heath Ledger (as in the recent cover of Vanity Fair) while major parts of the film The Patriot were shot on Ruth and Dickie's farm in South Carolina.

Lily Chan came literally halfway around the world from her home in Singapore for the 25th reunion. Married for 23 years, with a 16-year-old, Lily manages a venture capital fund.

Janey Andrews Brown has three adopted girls and has recently opened a banquet facility in an old Victorian home, Mistletoe Villa (which she and her husband renovated themselves!). They are near Hendersonville, N.C., so anyone who happens to be in the neighborhood should stop by.

Cathy Pirkle Wages and her husband were also part of the Hollywood set this past year as they attended the Emmy Awards. Cathy's husband had been nominated for one of the awards.

Back in Atlanta for about 10 years, Charlotte Gillis is a landscape architect with the park service.

Martha Carr Glocker is Mom to three boys.

Rebecca "Becky" Meador Walsh has recently married and works in insurance in Denver. Becky and her husband plan to build a new home on their 40 acres outside the city.

Ellen Phillips Smith is an artist for an Atlanta magazine. Sally Stenger, a legal secretary, lives in the West End section of Atlanta.

Joyce McKee McDonald is a U.S. attorney with the Department of Justice and deals primarily with white-collar crime. When she's not prosecuting the bad guys, Joyce is Mom to three girls.

Roberta "Robbie" Goodall Boman teaches school and has two children, ages 16 and 13.

Rose Ann Fraistat Cleveland, recently single, has a 16-year-old son and 12-year-old daughter. She works in admission at the University of Maryland.

Margaret Robison Lemon, married for 20 years, has a daughter, 16, and a son, 13.

Margaret lives in Roanoke, Va., where she manages apartments.

Page Lane Hodson's daughter, Challen, is a first-year student at Agnes Scott. She's on second Walters, Page's old hall, and did it bring back memories as they moved her into her dorm room!

Shelby Cave Cobb, the new class president, is now a full-time mom to Forrest, age 6, one of the most delightful little boys one could ever want to meet.

Margaret Williams Johnston is the new fund-raising chair, while Mary Jones Underwood serves as class vice president.

They had a small wedding at the Druid Hills Golf Club, attended by Elizabeth Wells Lang and Peggy Pfeiffer Elder. Following a honeymoon to St. John's Island, they have settled into Anne's townhouse in Decatur. Don has two sons, making Anne stepmom to a 9-year-old and a 14-year-old. Anne also works at DeKalb Medical Center as director of education services, in addition to serving as president of the ASC Alumnae Association.

Sandra "Sandy" Fowler has registered at the London School of Hygiene and Tropical Medicine, where she will work toward a master's degree in epidemiology. This program will take three or four years to complete, but those trips to London will be nice! Sandy will continue her work in research at the Medical College of South Carolina in Charleston. In other directions, she has been organizing a church mission trip to Haiti and has had several recent cycling trips, including one amid the wildfires of Montana this summer.

In May, Linda McInnis traveled to England, Scotland and Ireland with her mother. The HMO she has been working for, QualMed, closed shop in Colorado at the end of September. Linda plans to work as a paralegal and assistant to an attorney in Colorado Springs who represents a citizens' group trying to halt the development of a cement plant in Pueblo. Linda suggests that she could be the next Erin Brockovich (without cleavage). In family activities, she has been busy playing with her new grandson, Elijah, born in May. She wonders if she is the first grandmother in the class of '79.

Virginia Rockwell and husband Robert Bradford have been enjoying Stella Rockwell Bradford, born March 20. Virginia's business in Gordonsville, Va., The Gentle Gardener, continues to thrive. She was able to take time off this summer for an extended visit with family in Rhode Island.

Virginia "Ginny" Lee McMurray had a delightful visit with Eleanor Graham in New Orleans over Labor Day weekend, when they met for coffee with Ginny's daughter, Kathleen, and Eleanor's daughter, Caroline (both 13). Eleanor works as an attorney with the New Orleans office of the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission. Along with her husband, Jay, and children, Caroline and Benjamin, she had a glorious summer vacation on the beach in Florida. "Ginny" has begun a new part-time job as executive director of Ballet Arkansas. Carol invited them to join her in meeting three upcoming Agnes Scott first-years from Augusta. She has been serving on a special grand jury for the past year and has enjoyed learning about city government in Augusta. Amy, who lives in Kobe, Japan, had a busy summer traveling with her children, Danielle and John, to Tennessee, South Carolina, Cincinnati, Ohio and Augusta, Ga. Her husband works for Procter and Gamble in Japan, and the family will be there for about two more years. While living in Japan, the Goodwin family has traveled extensively, to Guam, Bali, Europe and Bangkok, Thailand, with their next stop scheduled for Australia.

Christia Riley-Ashmore lives in Augusta and is occupied with her four children as well as with teaching Bible studies and creating pottery. Her son, Jerry, is 14 and, in addition to being in the ninth grade, works part time with his father in a successful concrete construction business. Her daughter, Alicia, 12, suffered a brain tumor in 1997 but has fully recovered and is in the seventh grade. Christia has another daughter, Claire, who is 8, and a second son, Bryson, 4. After home-schooling her children for five years, she has put them into the school system in Martinez, Ga., a suburb of Augusta.

Sallie Taylor Manning has been serving on Augusta's Animal Control Advisory Board for the past year and has appeared on local news broadcasts on several occasions.

Emily Hill Ross had a visit from Anita Barbee-Cunningham, who lives in Louisville, Ky., with her husband, Michael, and sons Robert and Benjamin. Anita and Michael are both psychology professors.

Margaret "Marge" Long Cianchetti moved to Claremont, Calif., where her husband, Bob, is in law school. They have two sons, Sam and Henry.

Joy Jun Rousso lives in Mill Valley, Calif. (near San Francisco), with husband Paul and their son, Maxwell. They have embarked on an artistic adventure (Paul is an artist), and they hope to meet the rich and the famous!

While classmates have had many exciting and memorable vacations since graduation, beach vacations replete with sand, sun and lounging about occupy the top tier of such experiences for members of the class.

Deborah "Ann" Fitzgerald Aichinger comments on her honeymoon in Jamaica, "WOW!" The rest remains for individual imaginations. The food sounded awesome, Ann!

Elizabeth Stevenson Fairleigh celebrated five years of marital bliss with a trip to Kauai, Hawaii.

Marie Wooldridge and her husband, Chris, visited Spain and connected with Lorraine Elder Maxwell, who flew over from England to see them.

Other European travelers include Carolyn "Conley" Simons, Nancy Patierno and Kristen Sojourner Burgess. Both Carolyn and Kristen visited Paris, though they did not bump into each other. Nancy loved Greece.

Katherine "Katesy" Watson's most memorable trip was to the Republican Convention, where she oversaw the arrangements in booking convention spokespersons for TV news appearances throughout the South. If classmates saw one of these appearances, chances are "Katesy" had something to do with it. She is likely hoping for the trip of a lifetime, working in the White House.

Bonnie Crannell Evans' business trip to Hong Kong, Singapore and China provided an eye-opening, unforgettable experience. She toured many factories in all three countries where women were overworked, underpaid and generally lived an impoverished and abused life. She said that this made her aware of the high quality of life and good fortune on this side of the ocean. Bonnie's memories make Joanna Wiedeman Quillen's and Kristen's favorite trip—a recent shopping bender sans enfants at Phipp's Plaza, accompanied by dinner at the Pleasant Peasant—look rather petty and trite. They did, however, have a great time.

Bonnie welcomes a baby boy, Griffin Andrew, in May; he makes a nice bookend to her other son, Brantley, who is 2. Griffin was born just four days before Nancy Patierno's son, Zane Louis. Nancy said little Hugo, also 2, was impressed with his new little brother. Bonnie and Nancy are thrilled to have two boys so close in age.

Glenda "Sharmaine" McNeil is working in Atlanta for Metropolitan Life and keeps busy with travel but would like to hear from anybody who wants to e-mail her, especially cat lovers. She has a cat named Zoe.

Margaret Shippen Saunders received intriguing photos of Katesy Watson at the convention. Margaret is directing a community theatre production of The Miracle Worker.

Jill Whitfill has experienced some difficult times lately. Her mother has been diagnosed with Alzheimer's Disease, and one of her dogs is dying with congestive heart failure. Jill will be in the prayers of her classmates in the hope that things will be better for her and her loved ones.

Deborah "Ann" Fitzgerald Aichinger and husband Frank have adopted a 13-year-old boy, Thomas James (T.J.). They are parents for the first time but have managed to skip all that diaper business. Congratulations to all three!

Carolyn Conley Simons is helping Kristen Burgess via e-mail with ideas for teaching art classes. Kristen accepted a position at the Boulder Country Day School as art teacher for K-8 and also as middle school music teacher and choir director. After 11 years as a member of the diaper brigade, Kristen loves life.

Lauren Snee Booth, Sarah Garland St. Onge and Karen Youngner Garby manage to stay in touch regularly, even though they are in Florida, South Carolina and Michigan, respectively. In fact, they had their second "Girls' Long Weekend Away" in March. They met in Atlanta and had a marvelous time visiting old haunts, shopping, eating and talking. Of course, they had to visit Agnes Scott to check out all the renovations and improvements. It was spring break, so the campus was empty; but they had a lovely conversation with D. Behan on the state of the College. They just can't believe it has been 13 years since their Scottie years! Karen found her family down south, this time on Sullivan Island, S.C. It was there that she saw Sarah and two of her children. The week went quickly as they also spent time with Joan McGuirt Khan '88 and family before they left the Charleston area for Winston-Salem, N.C., where Joan's husband is completing his medical residency. Michigan lakes are fine, but these three truly enjoy the beach vacations. Allison Adams completed her thesis on Edith Wharton in August and graduated from Emory University with a master's in English. She is working for Emory as editor of the Academic Exchange. In addition, Allison and classmates Dustin "Dusty" Hill Matthews, Darline "Dolly" Purvis and Daphne Burt traveled to St. Augustine, Fla., in March and had a wonderful time relaxing at the condominium of "Dusty's in-laws." They enjoyed time on the beach and took in Fantasia 2000 at a nearby IMAX theater.

Cherie Arnette is teaching two honors geography classes, three world history classes, while sponsoring the Scholar Bowl team. She took two small vacations camping this past summer in state parks and traveled to visit with her sister. Cherie recently reconnected with Roberta Daniel '87. When she was in Tallahassee, Fla., for a reading conference, she called Roberta's old phone number and found her!

Daphne Burt is artistic manager for the Milwaukee Symphony. Through her position, she participated in a project that took the symphony on a history-making tour to Havana, Cuba. The symphony became the first American orchestra to play in Cuba in more than 40 years. In her non-professional life, she is a member of the vestry and the choir at St. Mark's Episcopal Church and continues to work as a volunteer for Habitat for Humanity. Daphne vacationed in San Francisco and the Napa Valley, as well as the Cayman Islands, to rest up for the opening of the orchestra's season in September. She also enjoyed her trip to St. Augustine with Allison, Dusty and Dolly in March.

Heidi Staven Carpenter and her husband, Paul, celebrated their fourth wedding anniversary with a trip to Disneyworld. Paul had visited Disneyworld twice before, but this was Heidi's first venture into the Magic Kingdom.

For World Youth Day, Mary Tyrena Carr traveled to Rome with the Arlington Diocese, joining 200 high school students. It was thrilling as well to be so close to the Pope. Tina was confirmed in the Catholic Church this past spring, and has had a very spiritually profound year.

Felrese Bradshaw Carroll is working with mixed success to potty train her 2-and-a-half-year-old daughter, Resa. She is excited that her husband, Bud, has opened his own business, making furniture and cabinets.

Elizabeth Cooper Matthews has moved back to Atlanta and teaches in the Cobb County School System. She has also purchased a new home near Kennesaw Mountain.

Eleanor Dill has returned to Atlanta after living for several years in the Florida Keys.

Cindy Franks bought a new house in Norcross, Ga.

Amy Goodloe has fulfilled two of her lifelong dreams: she and her partner built a horse ranch in Colorado, where they train horses, give lessons and breed Connemara ponies; and she is teaching an upper-level writing course at the University of Colorado, Boulder. She invites her classmates to visit her on the web at www.goodhorse.com.

In May, Aimée Peebles Haines and her husband, Sam, welcomed their third child into their family.

Jeanne Higgins Bressoud has been sharing mothering tips with Thea Mayne, as they both gave birth this year and talk to one another all the time.

Dustin "Dusty" Hill Matthews and her husband also greeted a new baby. They report that their older son, Griffin, is adjusting pretty well to the addition.

Maria "Conchi" Gonzalez Iglesias and her husband, Angel, returned to Atlanta. He is a doctor at the Veterans' Hospital in Decatur, Ga.

Jill Jordan flew to Georgia from Colorado in July for a wedding and stayed with Rebecca Earnshaw and her husband, John. John, Rebecca and Jill drove to Savannah, Ga., and had a wonderful time staying at the apartment Rebecca and John have renovated. The three visited museums while there.

Louisa Parker Mattozzi and her husband, Michael, visited with Pamilla "Pam" Gulley Hardin '90 and her husband, Paul, in Alexandria, Va., in June.

Thea Mayne and her husband, Gray, had their first child this year and declare her the light of their lives.

Sarah Napier is working on her doctorate in education at Harvard teaching at the Fayerweather Street School in Cambridge, Mass.

Nelathi "Nela" Nanayakkara DeSoysa has been selected by World Vision Lanka to follow a course on non-government organization management through Eastern College. This course of study moves "Nela" further toward the completion of her master's in business administration. Juggling her schedule with her baby, Naomi, working full time and finishing her second master's degree are quite challenging.

Ginger K. Patton-Schmitt has left big firm practice to branch out with a law school colleague. They formed Patton & Fletcher, L.L.C., through which Ginger and her law partner are developing a residential real estate, estate planning and probate practice. Hanging out her own shingle gives Ginger more time to spend with her two sons, Ren and Ellis, but less time to sleep.

Darline "Dolly" Purvis' husband, Pat, has begun a four-year course of theological study in order to become an ordained Episcopal deacon. Dolly confirms the good time in St. Augustine, Fla., with Dusty, Daphne and Allison. Dolly decided to leave her position with the College and accepted a position as managing editor of a county paper, The Champion. Her new position affords her the opportunity to help a newspaper grow as she gets back to the type of work she loves.

Alisa Duffy Rogers and her family have relocated to the Chicago area where she is pursuing a master's in public services at DePaul University.

In January, Elsa Jann Newman Schaefer married Scott Schaefer, a commercial diver and submarine pilot/technician. She was promoted to associate professor of mathematics at Marymount University and is now the chair of the mathematics and computing sciences department for the University. Jennifer Burger is hard at work in her residency, but she did manage to get away to a spa in Mexico during the summer.

Teresa Ramirez Dore got a surprise for her ninth anniversary, a trip to Asheville, N.C.

Hillary Soper Strong and her family took advantage of a long weekend and went camping in a state park in Vermont. They swam in a river, biked on an old railroad bed and hiked to waterfalls.

Michele Moses Lackey is in Phoenix, Ariz., loving married life.

Kim Goodwin Henderson has started her own company, Teedum, Inc., which helps community centers and programs secure funding to provide children with multicultural books. Her company solicits donations from corporate and community organizations to include these types of programs in their community relations. Kim was up and running this fall.

Kimberle Maleski Swaak and her husband, Ewoud, went on a Habitat for Humanity global village trip to Cape Town, South Africa. Kimberle works for Habitat and was a team leader for the trip. Her parents and brother found time this summer to visit Kim and her family in Holland.

Thomas, Blaise and Wendy Worthy Robertet spent their vacation in Quebec. They also went to Paris to introduce Blaise to the rest of his family and to learn some French. Thomas is writing his thesis at NYU and will soon have a master's degree in economics.

Mary Ann Athens spent some of her summer taking a printmaking class at Penland School, which she calls "an art camp for grown-ups." The creative and intense experience helped her recharge before the school year.

Jennifer "Jenny" Brand Gruber visited Erin Gaston while Jenny was on a business trip to Denver. Erin spent July in Missouri with family and then went to Costa Rica to visit her former Peace Corps site.

Kim Lamkin Drew, Rus and Anna Katherine spent a week in Boston, Cape Cod and Newport, R.I. They stayed in Hyannisport about a mile from the Kennedy compound and particularly enjoyed seeing the tall ships in the Newport Harbor. They also took a trip to Savannah and Tybee Island. There Anna Katherine learned to peel and eat boiled shrimp. She has started Montessori school. In professional news, Kim notes that her business is now four years old and that she will co-chair the International PRSA Convention in Atlanta in 2001.

A recent conversation revealed that Francis Daves, the grandfather of Heidi Wilson Ream's husband, was the architect who designed Bradley Observatory at Agnes Scott.

Sarah E. Crane married Scott M. Nichols in February at St. Bede's Episcopal Church in St. Petersburg, Fla. Among those attending was Leigh Bennett-Conner '92. For the honeymoon, Scott and Sarah toured Great Britain. They bought a home in Madeira Beach, Fla. and are busily adjusting to many recent changes.

BIRTHS

- Andrew Arthur Doyle, son of Debbie Sirban Doyle and husband William, May 19.
- Paul Hardin Jr., son of Pamilla Gulley Hardin and Paul, Sr., June 2000.

Vivian Saker and her husband, Cale Lennon, have relocated in New Orleans. Cale is the senior licensing associate for the department of technology development at Tulane University.

Vivian is a faculty member in pediatrics at Tulane. She was hired to organize and supervise the pediatric urgent care center in the emergency room.

Ashley Carter rarely has a dull moment these days. Her daughter, Zoe, is 2 and a half. Ashley finished her master's in biology at Georgia State last year and has enjoyed working at the Emory Vaccine Research Center.

Denice Dresser Arnold and Russ proudly announce the birth of their fourth child, Zachary Robert Arnold. Big sisters Ashley and Courtney, along with big brother Chase, are thrilled to have a baby brother. Denice, Russ and family took an extended vacation to Atlanta and Florida to see friends and family over the summer and enjoyed their visit back east.

According to Tammy Shirley, Camila Weise Bottome is still in Caracas, Venezuela, with her husband, Ricardo Bottome. Camila, however, came to Atlanta several months ago and stayed with Tatiana Mejia Fernandez. Tammy visited with Tatiana, Alyssa Hurd and Camila at Tatiana's house in Marietta just before Camila returned home. Tammy hosted a Tupperware party attended by Stephanie Strickland, Annamarie Anderson, Daphne Norton and Erika Stamper, among others.

Kim Kizirian spent the summer in Superior, Colo., with Dave and the kids. On their way back home to Tampa, Tammy was lucky enough to have them stay with her for a few days.

Erika Stamper bought her first home in Lawrenceville, Ga. Tammy calls it "adorable," adding that Erika spends all her free time in the Home Depot.

Daphne Norton is taking jewelry-making classes and is really into beading. Her mom held a jewelry show at her home and sold a large number of Daphne's creations. Consequently, Daphne is teaching Tammy how to make beaded jewelry.

Jennifer Pilcher Duke's son, Sam, is in 4-year-old preschool and loves it. Katie Belle is in "mothers' morning out" once a week; she was 9 months old in August and into everything—Tupperware, pots, pans and Cheerios. Since August Jennifer has spent more time at home with the kids. She may do some part-time work for a medical defense firm, analyzing charts to keep her medical skills sharp. Husband Sandy is still working hard in his surgical residency and will finish in the spring.

AnnMarie Anderson had fun at Tammy Shirley's Tupperware party. She works with Jones Apparel Group and participated in a fashion show in New York, introducing a new Nine West line. She and Chrissie Lewandowski Driggers are planning a March trip to New York on the train for the opening of AnnMarie's mother's art exhibit. Chrissie has purchased a condo in Decatur and is teaching at Stone Mountain High, "looking marvelous." AnnMarie and Stan are living in North Gwinnett with their three cats. Their business, AnnMarie's Replacement Bulls, is doing very well and takes up much of their free time.

to work for Southern LINC, a subsidiary of the Southern Company, as their regulatory affairs manager.

Secretary Betsy Johnson Burn finally finished law school in May, then spent a very tedious summer studying for the bar exam, which she took the last week of July. After the bar exam, she and Chip relaxed for a wonderful week on Mount Desert Island, Maine. They stayed right on the water and had a fabulous time hiking, relaxing and eating lobster. Chip started his last year of law school, and Betsy joined Nelson, Mullins, Riley and Scarborough, L.L.P., in the areas of banking and bankruptcy.

Stacey Langwick, in graduate school at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill, is writing her dissertation in medical anthropology.

In June, Hannah Little married the Rev. Patrick Lee Friday. The couple honeymooned in Italy and then traveled to Coventry, England, where Patrick was coordinator and soloist for the International Sacred Music Festival. Following this event, they traveled to Moscow to transport 78 children of Chernobyl back to Alabama for medical treatment. Hannah and her husband currently reside in Riga, Latvia, in Eastern Europe, as missionaries for the United Methodist Church. They will spend time in Belarus working with the children of Chernobyl.

Courtney Alison became a mother in August—of a dog, that is. She and her boyfriend adopted a 6-month-old dachshund of mixed ancestry from the Atlanta Humane Society and named him Halley (derived from Edmund Halley of comet fame because the dog is black with a white streak on his chest resembling a comet and its tail). Courtney is getting used to having another living thing to take care of besides houseplants. Also, during a stretch of record heat (nine days with temperatures over 100), she spent a week and a half in Houston, Texas, tending to her mother, who was recuperating from open heart surgery. After a good visit, Courtney gladly reports that her mother is recovering well.

Anne Bearden Gunn has been busy this summer with school and travels. She started on her master's in education degree at Georgia State University and has three semesters remaining. In a break from school, she and her husband escaped to Germany, Switzerland and Austria, where they put on their tourist personas for a welcome change.

Leigh Bennett-Conner received a promotion with the DeKalb County Department of Family and Children Services (DFCS) in August 1999. She has become an economic program administrator, which means that she supervises supervisors. While she hated leaving Fulton County DFCS, she was excited about the new opportunity. As of this writing, she has been doing the job for over a year and is still enjoying it.

Ruth Blackwood writes that she earned a master's degree in biology from Southern Connecticut State University.

In June, Vanessa Elliott Goggans returned to work after three months of maternity leave with her second son, Nathan Alan, born in March. Big brother, Griffin, and his parents are very excited about their new addition. After spending three months with a 2-year-old and a newborn, it was hard for Vanessa to accustom herself to being back at work, but everyone seemed to make the adjustment well. She is a real estate lawyer with the firm of Morris, Manning and Martin, L.L.P., and loves her job. She even had some of her classmates come through her office when they bought their homes.

Mary Ann Hickman married David Klassen in an August ceremony at Christ Episcopal Church in Media, Penn., with a reception afterward at Swarthmore College, where she teaches. Dave is a planetary scientist studying Mars. They met in graduate school at the University of Wyoming. He is now assistant professor of physics at Rowan University, in Glassboro, N.J., which luckily is within commuting distance of Swarthmore. Their wedding day was beautiful, a relief after a week of humid weather. Mary Ann was thrilled that her ASC roommate, Elizabeth "Ellie" Morgan, and her husband, Danny Rouk, were able to attend. Mary Ann and Ellie had been in e-mail contact, but hadn't seen each other since shortly after graduation, a fact that added to the joy of the occasion. Mary Ann reports that Teresa Beckham is a professor in economics/business administration at Rhodes College, Memphis, Tenn.

Christie Miller has been traveling frequently for her company on trips to Atlanta, Michigan, San Francisco and Los Angeles. In addition, she did some freelance editing on Time Out's Mini-Guide to Miami. Other than celebrating her 30th birthday at a Miami club called Lola, Christie says that's about the sum of it.

Brooke Price joined IBM in June as an instructional designer with IBM Global Learning Services. She designs large, computer-based, training deliverables.

In May, MaryClaire Myers King gave birth to a handsome baby boy named Jonah Jorgen Berger. His father, Pascal, and older brother, Eliot, are delighted. MaryClaire has been promoted to director, distribution business development, Europe, Middle East and Africa, for IBM's Technology Group. She and Pascal bought an apartment in Paris and were able to visit with Donna Kimball in September.

BIRTHS

- Nathan Alan Goggans, son of Vanessa Elliott Goggans and her husband, March 16.
- Jonah Jergen Berger, son of MaryClaire Myers King and Pascal, May 2000.

Laura Barlament has been living in Lafayette, Ind., for one year, working on her dissertation, which deals with the influence of Richard Wagner's opera on literature. Laura also worked part time as writer/editor at the Office of Publications at Purdue University. Laura is getting her Ph.D. from Emory University in English Literature, along with a minor in German. She has decided to stay in Lafayette where she now has a full-time job in the Office of Publications as a project editor. Before beginning her new job, Laura traveled to Phuket, Thailand, on a mission trip for six weeks. She reports that Aimee Griffin recently visited and that Soo Chan is back in her home country of Malaysia.

Staci Catron-Sullivan is at work on her master's degree in historic preservation at Georgia State University. She visited Egypt for two weeks and says it was fabulous.

Traci Corum Dunn proudly announces that her family has grown again. Geren, 6, and Aubrey, 5, have welcomed a new sister into their lives, Marley Weston Dunn, born in June. She weighed exactly seven pounds and was 19.5 inches long and has a full supply of brown hair, along with what Traci calls "truly mesmerizing" dark blue eyes.

In June, Anna Crotts Straight married Ben Straight in Charleston, S.C. Anna and Ben live in West Virginia, where Anna is a minister.

Jennifer Garlen and husband David Sparks traveled to Paris and London in May. They had a splendid time, climbing to the top of Notre Dame and visiting the catacombs of Paris. In London they toured more than a dozen museums and stood on the Prime Meridian in Greenwich. They also attended a performance of The Tempest at the Globe.

Terri Grossi has been accepted by Pace University in New York in the master's program leading to a degree as nurse practitioner. She is still acting and working toward being a movie star. In the interim, however, Terri is concentrating on maintaining the "luxuries" of life—running water, rent, electricity and the like.

Stephanie Hawes-Blomberg calls Fort Mill, S.C., home. She is a senior logistics analyst for Intermec Technologies Corp. Last year she traveled to Turkey and fell in love with the people and the food. Stephanie reports that Fotini Soublis Sioris lives in Arizona with her husband and three children.

In Atlanta, Mary Curtis Lanford Pizzano and husband George welcomed Joseph Griffin Pizzano into the world in June. Griffin weighed nine pounds, four ounces, and was 21 inches long.

Ellie Porter married Troy Ivey in May at Fincastle Presbyterian Church, outside Roanoke, Va. Claire Lemme, Sandie Fogle and Barbie Stitt-Allen '92 were bridesmaids; Elizabeth Seward '91 sang during the processional and Brooke Parish read the Scripture. Among the guests were Angela Weaver Barnhart, Heather Flanagan, Jennifer Garlen, Tracy Peavy Roussey, Kristin Lemmerman '92 and Melissa Anne Elebash Creed '91. After a honeymoon in France, the couple resides in Atlanta.

Julie Stowe Garner brought Daniel Scott Garner into the world in July, in Conyers, Ga. He weighed eight pounds, 11 ounces, and was 20 inches long.

In April, Dede Streetman married Tom Wakefield of Louisville, Ky., in Vero Beach, Fla. They live in Atlanta.

Shanika Swift's daughter, Tori, was accepted to The Lovett School in Atlanta. She entered pre-k.

Sara Carruthers' name was incorrect in the September MAIN EVENTS. The last name DeFoor was added to her name, when it should be only Carruthers.

BIRTHS

- Marley Weston Dunn, daughter of Traci Corum Dunn and Gregory, June 2.
- Joseph Griffin Pizzano, son of Mary Curtis Lanford Pizzano and George, June 10.

The Class of 1995 had their five-year reunion this past spring and found it great to see everyone.

Stacy Bredendieck spent the last five years as a fire protection consultant with the Atlanta office of a national engineering and design firm. Two years ago she purchased a house in Midtown that she has been renovating ever since.

After graduation, Jenny White Howard went to Georgia Tech for a year and earned her master's in physics. After working at Boeing until the plant closed, she now is at NCR Corporation as a supplier manager. She married her high school sweetheart, Jon Howard, in June 1996; they live in Lilburn, Ga., with their two cats, Tigger and Roo.

In April 1998, Kathryn Durkee married Tom Kovarik. She promises he makes a much better husband than he ever was a boyfriend. After two and a half years of bookkeeping, she is presently at an animal clinic in Atlanta, planning to attend Georgia State in the fall to begin prerequisite science courses for vet school.

Lisa Sebotnick married Jamie McLean in June 1998. They reside in Charleston, S.C. She is in her second year of residency in psychiatry at the Medical University of South Carolina. Lisa and Jamie own their own home and just "increased their debt even further" by buying a boat.

Daka Hermon lives in Los Angeles, where she is a production coordinator on a film called Jackpot, with a cast that includes Daryl Hannah. She's still writing and hopes soon to hear good news on one of her projects.

In Atlanta, Kerry Murphy is employed as a marketing and promotions coordinator for CNN, planning big events like CNN's 20th anniversary bash. She traveled to Philadelphia to help cover the Republican National Convention and to Los Angeles for the Democratic National Convention. Kerry was very glad to hand over her class duties to a new set of officers.

Laura Hinte Cawthon returned home to Williamsburg, Va., and is working in human resources for MCIWorldCom. She has been happily married to Michael for over four years; this summer they bought their first home, a transaction that makes them feel like adults.

Merisa Aranas is director of special projects at Pendleton Memorial Methodist Hospital in New Orleans. She moved into a new apartment and is thrilled with it.

Other Scotties at the reunion were Holly Demuth, Jennie Sparrow, Paula Pendarvis, Pam Peel Holliday, Wendy Riviere Earon, Amy Sweckard Parker, Emily Stone Kandetzki, Emily Pender, Stephanie Riggs Roark, Kristen Thornton, Kelly Holton, Joy Edge and Alexa Horne.

Camille Montgomery Morris has married and is living in Nashville, Tenn. She spends most of her time with her new son, Jeffery Chapman Morris, born in July. In her spare time she specializes in children's photography. Camille would love to hear from any Agnes Scott alum.

Nitya Mariam Jacob received her Ph.D. in biology from the Ohio State University in Spring 2000. She was hired as a post-doctoral fellow by the biology department at Knox College, Galesburg, Ill. Knox is a liberal arts school with 1,200 students, fairly similar to Agnes Scott, except that it is co-ed. Nitya's job includes research, mentoring undergraduate students and teaching two courses a year. So far, she is enjoying it and is glad to be back in an environment that reminds her so much of ASC.

Lisa Sandblom was awarded a master's in commercial diplomacy at spring commencement of the Monterey Institute of International Studies, Monterey, Calif.

Embarking on Bold Aspirations

CELEBRATION WEEKEND DEDICATES BUILDINGS, LAUNCHES CAMPAIGN

Nearly 1,000 alumnae and friends of the College joined faculty, staff and students on the Agnes Scott campus

Feb. 23-24 for a celebration weekend held in conjunction with Founder's Day.

In addition to celebrating the excellence of the College, the event formally launched Bold Aspirations: The Campaign for Agnes Scott College, a $60 million comprehensive campaign that is the most ambitious in the school's 113-year history and proportionally one of the largest among the nation's elite women's colleges.

The celebration weekend also provided an occasion for the dedication of two buildings—the new Alston

Campus Center and the renovated and expanded McCain Library, which President Mary Brown Bullock '66 called "the soul of the campus." Both are signature buildings in the $120 million construction program underway since 1998. The celebration also recognized great strides in academic goals and a 50 percent increase in enrollment since 1995, when Bullock became the first alumna president.

"Institutions have a moment in time when they can either make or break their future,"

Bullock said. "My predecessors set the sights so high for this College; we, too, must have bold aspirations as we educate women to be citizens of the world."

When completed in 2003, the building project will have touched all aspects of college life; square footage for teaching, residential and community areas will have increased by 56 percent. So far, six new or renovated buildings have been completed, with three more new buildings and three renovations to be completed before the campaign's close. This spring, the College will break ground on a new $36.5-million, 115,000-square-foot science building.

"This campaign will be the most

"Our boldest aspirations are not yet realized. The world does not yet have enough of women's thinking."

Emblematic of the Scottish theme running throughout the celebration weekend, the Atholl Highlanders Pipes and Drums led the procession at Founder's Day convocation.

ambitious in the history of the College," said Board of Trustees Chair Joseph R. Gladden Jr. "It will value the generosity of every individual and charitable organization that loves learning, believes in the education of women at the highest levels of excellence and shares our mission, dedication and bold aspirations for this College in Atlanta." Gladden chairs the campaign steering committee; Agnes Scott trustees and alumnae Frances B. Graves '63 of Atlanta and JoAnn Sawyer Delafield '58 of New York City are national campaign co-chairs.

Sadat to Speak at Commencement

FORMER FIRST LADY OF EGYPT RECOGNIZED AS WOMEN'S RIGHTS ADVOCATE

Jehan el-Sadat, activist and wife of the late Egyptian president Anwar Sadat, will deliver Agnes Scott's Commencement address on Saturday, May 12.

Jehan el-Sadat

During her husband's presidency, Madame Sadat was an outspoken advocate of women's rights to an education, to working outside the home and to political participation. Since President Sadat's assassination in 1981, she has continued as an activist in international women's conferences and as a catalyst for women's movements in the Middle East.

Born in Egypt in 1933, Madame Sadat married Anwar el-Sadat when she was 16. They were married for 32 years until her husband's death. A scholar of Arabic literature, she earned bachelor's, master's and doctorate degrees from Cairo University. She also established the Talla Society, a women's emancipation movement; helped establish the Al-Wafa Wa Amal (Faith and Hope) Society, which built the largest hospital in the Middle East for handicapped war veterans and their families; initiated the idea of S.O.S. Children's Villages for needy orphans; and participated in the reconstruction of Kasr El Einy Hospital.

Recognition that Sadat has received during her career includes an honorary degree from the Philippines Women's University in 1977; the Human Service Award from the University of Kansas in 1978; the Living Legacy Award from the Women's International Center (WIC) in 1984; and honorary president of WIC and inspiration for the organization's Jehan Sadat Peace Award in 1985.

Since 1993, Sadat has been a professor of international studies at the University of Maryland, where she established the Anwar Sadat Chair for Population, Development and Peace.

Her book, A Woman of Egypt, recounts her life as the first lady of Egypt.

FROM THE PRESIDENT

On Founder's Day, I was reminded that Agnes Scott College has been trying to live up to the bold aspirations of its founders for more than a century. George Washington Scott and Frank Gaines resolved that Agnes Scott would become a school of high standards, intellectually and spiritually. This came to mean an educational institution equivalent to the best in the land. These aspirations are reflected in our high academic standards, our Honor Code, in career aspirations to be a judge, the surgeon general of the United States, an inner-city high school teacher, a devoted mother.

Here is what our Calvinist roots show: This is a college that has always pushed itself ethically and intellectually. It has raised high moral and intellectual expectations for everyone who enters its gates and becomes part of its community.

Succeeding founders James Ross McCain and Wallace McPherson Alston collectively served as presidents from 1923 to 1972. It is in their honor that we dedicated two magnificent buildings on Founder's Day during Bold Aspirations weekend.

Dr. McCain's bold aspirations for Agnes Scott were legendary. He understood that a great college needed a great campus, and that a great college required a strong financial base. But Dr. McCain also understood that Agnes Scott's future was inexorably linked to Atlanta, and that an Agnes Scott education required a sophisticated understanding of the liberal arts.

Both Dr. McCain and Dr. Alston emphasized the richness of Agnes Scott's religious and intellectual heritage, and how both were essential to liberal learning. This is nowhere more evident than in the McCain Library, conceived and built during the most challenging of circumstances—the Great Depression. Those who enter the wonderfully restored library and its great hall are greeted with "Nutrimentum spiritus—Food for the Soul," and inside is a mixture of classical and ecclesiastical quotations. The common themes are wisdom, a word we don't use very much today, and truth, an absolute that makes us a little nervous. When we enter, we are invited to partake in a feast for the mind and soul, the accumulated knowledge, the wisdom of the ancients and moderns, the sacred and the secular, in order to be free. "The Truth Shall Make You Free"—this is still the heart of liberal learning.

If James Ross McCain was a great builder and educator, I like to think of Wallace Alston as the great communicator. He understood that a great college needed to be a community, and that the celebration of ideas, as well as personal relationship, was central to that community. A learned man, Dr. Alston came to his presidency from the pastorate, and his was a pastoral presidency. His recall of names and his personal notes are remembered by all. Professor Emerita Jane Pepperdene once told me how she was offered tenure, not in a formal letter but in person, with a warm handshake from Dr. Alston. A classmate has told of running into him in Buttrick during her sophomore year, when he asked about her plans to transfer. "How did he know?" she thought. But when he said, "We need you here," she stayed. He always seemed to know everything.

During Dr. Alston's tenure, budgets grew tighter, American society became more complex, and political, social and ethnic divisions became more intense. Community became more difficult. Board members remember financial difficulties. Former Board Chair Hal Smith and Bertie Bond paint a poignant picture of Dr. Alston and an old adding machine, trying to make the budget add up. Ben Kline tells how every cent went for faculty salaries. There was little left over for roof repairs. Faculty support and nourishing the life of the mind was what Wallace Alston was all about. But Dr. Alston also believed in the transforming power of community, especially during the 1960s and especially for women. I can hear him speaking at a Wednesday convocation:

"We are concerned with the whole person—her mind, her physical welfare, her social development and her spiritual life." How often we joked about becoming "whole women," and yet, we remember, this too is still at the heart of liberal learning.

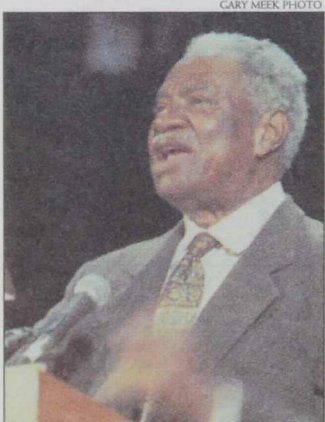

While honoring the past, we also make a bold new statement about Agnes Scott's future: Agnes Scott's deep humanistic roots are guiding it into a new age of technology, science and global learning. The library and the campus center stand side by side, a witness to what Wallace Alston called "holistic learning." These buildings have been designed to be interconnected so that community life and the life of the mind become inseparable. They have been designed with the latest technology—but in the setting of a learning community.

Presidents McCain and Alston would have been thrilled with the Bold Aspirations celebration. Also, both would understand fully why we need now to turn to fund raising. It was Dr. Alston who wrote in 1957: "We deeply desire, as an educational community, to achieve greatness. . . and this will mean dealing with the need for adequate financial support. . . To secure the money to finance a first-class college is, then, imperative if Agnes Scott is to deserve to be called a great College." It is Dr. McCain who would have been out in front, leading the way.

"Bold Aspirations" is what Agnes Scott has always been about. Now it is our time to follow their lead, to provide for the College of the future.

SUGG HOLDS PASTORAL, TEACHING ROLES

The Rev. Laura Sugg was installed as Julia Thompson Smith Chaplain before a gathering of students, alumnae, faculty and staff in January.

The installation formally introduced Sugg to the College community, affirming the relationship of the chaplain to the campus and the College's relationship to the Presbyterian Church (U.S.A.). The event included a sermon by Pat Hunt, Mary Baldwin College chaplain and a friend of Sugg, and a ceremony based on the Presbyterian Church's Book of Order.

In addition to her pastoral and administrative duties on campus, Sugg will also teach "Protestant Faith and Practice." Her chaplaincy includes responsibility for faith and learning programming, Christian worship on campus, interfaith events and support to non-Christian students, and overseeing volunteering efforts.

Sugg previously served as chaplain and assistant professor of theological studies at Hanover College, Ind. She has also held positions at Davis & Elkins College, W.Va., and James Madison University.

M.A.T.—a Model Program

DEGREE ADDRESSES NATIONAL NEED FOR SECONDARY ENGLISH TEACHERS

Last spring I entered for the first time one of the trailers that accommodates the burgeoning student populations at a number of area schools.

Although the physical economy of trailers has long fascinated me in the abstract, I assumed that relegating students to such classrooms was the next worst thing to holding classes in hedge schools or palm-frond huts. Perhaps trailers were even the worst of all, because of the confinement and the closeness of the air.

Not so, I discovered. Reassured by windows and an inviting covered entryway, I was amazed at the homey touches the teacher had provided in the mobile classroom: a decorative table on a small rug by the "front" door; colorful pictures and posters, even a potted plant.

I was even more amazed to watch Lisa, one of Agnes Scott's M.A.T. students, work confidently in this not-so-terrible environment, proving, I suppose, that it is not facilities but the engagement of teachers and students that doth a class create and a classroom make. It was a learning place.

Lively Lisa was discussing Homer's Odyssey with a group of ninth graders, many of whom were designated by the system as "special students." She was a very special young teacher, I soon observed, even more remarkable than I might have expected based on my excellent experience with her in our Agnes Scott classroom. She was confident and self-assured; humorous and engaging as she and the students considered the challenges confronting the struggling Odysseus. I was astonished at how involved this group of presumably sluggish and easily distracted students seemed in the experience, how lively their participation, how germane all this Greek adventure seemed to their own lives.

And hence came my "epiphany," "my spot of time," "my moment of being." It had been a long and exasperating drive to Lisa's school from the Agnes Scott campus. More significantly, the road to this point in our M.A.T. program, though perhaps smoother than it might have been without the investment and support of the College behind it, had not been without risk, struggle and at least occasional frustration.

But if ever a moment redeemed all hardship and worry, this moment worked that way for me. I was as proud as I could be to know that Agnes Scott had helped this young woman, an undergraduate in English from Smith College, bring her considerable talents to the classroom. As I sat in the trailer and contemplated that Lisa was just one example of a fine group of M.A.T. graduates prepared by Agnes Scott, the hairs on the back of my neck bristled with the thrill.

That afternoon, like many an afternoon before and since, I confronted tangible evidence that the world—particularly the world of the secondary English classroom—is much the richer by virtue of the more than a hundred men and women who have earned an M.A.T. degree through Agnes Scott. Their influence is steadily expanding—particularly in the school systems of Atlanta, but indeed throughout the country. And that reality is gratifying.

When Agnes Scott's M.A.T. program began almost a decade ago, the plan was fired from the start with a sense of mission: to help meet the national need for superior secondary teachers. For the College to provide access to a teaching career for individuals who had not completed requirements for certification as undergraduates seemed a natural extension of Agnes Scott's all but lifelong commitment to preparing teachers. Agnes Scott, after all, has for generations been educating on the undergraduate level the kind of teachers who animate our best memories of elementary and secondary school.

The drawbacks of providing teaching certification on the undergraduate level are obvious. Such ambitions represent a particular hardship at Agnes Scott, which has never believed students should major in education. We have insisted that our prospective teachers be exposed to a demanding range of liberal studies as well as being thoroughly grounded in any and all subject matter that they plan to teach. Taking the fundamental education courses and gaining the internship experience required for certification has meant thin major programs and few electives. Agnes Scott's English department decided that a 5-year program was minimal to turn out first-rate teachers. Because of our relatively large faculty, the English department had the flexibility to offer such an option—and the M.A.T. was born.

The program represented a radical shift for the College when it was first conceived. The charter of the College had to be altered to allow for graduate degree study. By law, we could not extend our status as a women's college to new graduate programs. Agnes Scott's first male degree candidates entered with our inaugural M.A.T. class, graduating in 1994. One of these, Doug Talbott, an early retiree from I.B.M., is now a valuable member of Agnes Scott's Information Technology department. He works with instructional technologist Jackie Klock to lead current M.A.T.'s comfortably to the cutting edge of technological proficiency and to equip them to embrace the technological opportunities of today's classrooms.

The design for our M.A.T. program in Secondary English, a prototype for Agnes Scott M.A.T. programs to follow, was created almost from whole cloth. We surveyed the few existing M.A.T. programs and tried to imagine the best way to educate teachers for the long haul. Our aim then as now was to prepare creative teachers, thorough professionals who inspire respect for their talents and insights. Our goal is for our graduates to become influential in shaping and promoting enlightened policies and practices. To those ends, we believe that we have fashioned a program that is distinctive in its ambitions and its curriculum—and efficient with respect to the time and financial obligations that it places on our Unique among teacher-education programs is the investment of Agnes Scott's entire English department in its concepts and curriculum. Although a number of us have some experience with teaching at the secondary level, all of us have a dedication to strong teaching and to contributing to the development of teachers—at any level.

Collaborating with the English department in a recent review of the program, the Department of Education rethought and redesigned their graduate education courses in ways that students should find both relevant and appealing. We look forward in the near future to enriching the M.A.T. program with electives that offer ESOL training, opportunities for certification in reading, and graduate-credit credentials for the teaching of Advanced Placement courses.

Clearly the optimum way to prepare excellent teachers and thus to endorse teaching as an honored profession is precisely the way we are doing it at Agnes Scott. We build on a strong liberal arts or science degree; we don't gut it. Our curriculum is rich in opportunities to study the language and literatures of English; it provides a balanced blend of educational theory and application; it requires extensive field and internship experience; and it provokes confrontation with issues, such as gender equity, that challenge the profession. It leads to the master's level certification that is requisite for master teachers. All this in 14 months!

Almost everyone has strong opinions about the state of education in America. Most of the educators, politicians, and representatives of the public at large, who lament the state of American education, have come to endorse the view of teachers that Agnes Scott has long held. Knowledge of the subject matter is the first essential for superior teachers; pedagogical skills, desirable character traits and personal commitment must complement that knowledge.

At Agnes Scott—almost 10 years ago—we pressed past lamentations and talk to purposeful action that resulted in a program we believe is a model of its kind. We invite you to consider Agnes Scott's program if you have an interest in teaching English. We urge you to recommend our M.A.T. program to college and university graduates who would make excellent English teachers.

—Linda L. Hubert '62,
M.A.T. program director

I Teach Because...

PROFESSOR CHALLENGES SOCIETY'S ATTITUDE TOWARD TEACHING

The following remarks on teaching by Ayse Ilgaz Carden '66, professor of psychology, were made during the Founder's Day Convocation on Feb. 24, part of the Bold Aspirations weekend.

Those who can, do; those who cannot, teach. From the original quotation by George Bernard Shaw, "He who can, does; he who cannot, teaches," this gender-neutral version of our society's attitude toward teaching has persisted over time into the new millennium. I have taught at Agnes Scott for 24 years because I am one of "those who cannot."

I teach because I cannot stand a life lived without Awareness; an unquestioning existence, a life lived according to unexamined roles and values; a life without considered choices and options.

I teach because I cannot stand a world without Generosity of spirit and means; a world where people do not care to share with each other, shirk away from giving freely—their resources, their love, their dedication, their time; a world where the focus is "me" instead of "us."

I teach because I cannot stand a world where New ideas are resisted, not because of their lack of merit, but because they are new and challenge the vested ways of seeing and doing.

I teach because I cannot stand a society where Ethical values are ignored or manipulated; a society where equality does not represent a goal; a society where recognition of different needs is deemed to be inconsistent with equality or fairness.

I teach because I cannot stand a person who goes through life without a Sense of humor, without the flexibility and confidence of self that allows for laughter especially at one's own expense.

I teach because I cannot stand a world that does not value Scholarship, does not encourage in the individual a sense of wonder and commitment to continuing the search for answers and forming of new questions and the enjoyment of the process.

I teach because I cannot stand an individual who does not value Community; does not work for a better life for all; has no sense of responsibility or commitment; feels no shame for transgressions.

I teach because I cannot stand a world without Optimism. I want a world where people believe that tomorrow can be better than today, a world where we will be even better human beings in spite of the mistakes of yesterday, and that we will create better lives for all.

I teach because I cannot stand a society without Tolerance, based on assertions, open or veiled, that there is only one correct way of believing, one correct way of doing, one correct way of caring, and only one group of people worth caring for.

And finally, I teach because I cannot stand a society where Teaching is devalued and separated from doing; a society where teaching and learning are considered to take place in the classroom, and doing, outside it; where doing is better even when it is not informed by reflection or wisdom.

I have been a member of the Agnes Scott community for a long time, first as a student, later as an alumna, and currently as a faculty member. I, like all my colleagues here, have been a learner, a teacher and a doer—in and out of the classroom. I have taught and learned from my students; many are here as alumnae today. Through the reflection and actions of all whose lives intersect at this place, our community continues to be a better place for the development of more meaningful and responsible lives. Now, the challenge is: Can we keep on working with intelligence, creativity and tenacity to achieve the goal of widening the limits of our community and to contribute to the creation of a world more hospitable for life and well-being of all its peoples? Agnes Scott's legacy says we can and we must.

ANNUAL AWARDS HONOR EXEMPLARY SERVICE AND ACCOMPLISHMENTS

SERVICE TO THE COMMUNITY

Keller Henderson Barron '53 has been a community activist since her graduation from Agnes Scott. For 18 years, Barron was the director of research for South Carolina's Joint Legislative Committee on Aging, where she developed and implemented recommendations for legislative priorities to promote quality of life for the aging. She retired in 1997, and in January 2001, she was appointed by the governor of South Carolina to serve on the committee. Prior to that time, she was the associate coordinator and director of Emergency School Aid Act projects, Community Care Inc., a nonprofit interdenominational social action agency dealing with the many challenges facing public school children during the 1970s.

Barron's volunteer activities reflect a lifelong commitment to equal protection under the law and the fundamental rights for all, particularly women and minorities. She served on the National Board of League of Women Voters, was the president of the LWV/SC and president of the LWV of the Columbia area. She chaired the LWV/US campaign for passage of the Equal Rights Amendment (ERA). She has served on the State Reorganization Commission and State Human Affairs Commission for racial equality and diversity in state government. The Human Endeavor, an organization promoting civil rights, presented her with the Modjeska Simkins Endowment award for her work on behalf of social causes and equal rights.

Currently, Barron serves as vice president of the Southern Regional Council, which serves to promote racial justice, protect democratic rights and broaden civic participation. She is co-chair of the Richland County Task Force on Public Awareness and Citizen Participation for land use planning and serves on the Women's Studies Partnership Council of the University of South Carolina. In her support for the aging, Barron also is an instructor for the AARP Mature Drivers' Safety Program and is a licensed agent for Long Term Care Insurance.

Barron grew up in Atlanta and majored in history and political science at Agnes Scott. In 1953, she married Sherrod Bumgardner and moved to Columbia. Barron was widowed in 1979 and married Bill Barron in 1984. She has four children, three step-children and nine grandchildren. She and her husband reside in Columbia.

DISTINGUISHED CAREER

Elizabeth "Libba" G. Patterson '68 is an attorney, a law professor at the University of South Carolina and an individual who is making a difference for South Carolina's children and families.

When South Carolina Gov. Jim Hodges appointed her director of the state's Department of Social Services, Patterson sought to change the traditional social services approach so that the needs of parents and children were better addressed to focus on families' particular needs. For example, child neglect often is the product of poverty and ignorance, especially in poor and rural areas. Patterson sought to change attitudes and practices so that the entire department, particularly its "front line" case-workers, became partners with parents to teach them basic parenting skills.

Changing the traditional social services model requires behavior change, which in turn requires consensus building. Patterson always works hard and has been successful in getting people to understand and believe in doing the right thing, even though it required that changes be made.

Prior to her gubernatorial appointment, Patterson created the Children's Law Office at the University of South Carolina where she drafted and advocated for the passage of many statutes including living wills, health care powers of attorney along with comprehensive overhaul of the laws dealing with child abuse and neglect. In many ways, her work has come full circle in that Patterson now works to ensure that the laws for which she advocated, are in fact, implemented and enforced.

Patterson is a native of South Carolina and received her law degree from the University of Arizona, where she was editor in chief of Arizona Law Review. She is a mother of two daughters and resides in Columbia.

SERVICE TO THE COLLEGE

For five decades, Dorothy Quillian Reeves '49 has served Agnes Scott College as a steadfast and indispensable volunteer. Her contributions to the College run the gamut—from rolling up her sleeves to work an alumnae event to standing tall at the podium in Gaines Chapel leading the Alumnae Association's annual meeting. In every volunteer role, her warmth, intelligence, commitment, and high spirits have inspired and encouraged those around her.

For the past 15 years, Reeves has made the College the primary focus of her volunteerism, although other community concerns have also been the beneficiaries of her talents. A frequent presence on campus, Reeves has interacted with students and served with alumnae, faculty and staff on numerous committees, many of which she chaired. She has organized her class reunions over the years and welcomed her '49 classmates in her home. Reeves served as secretary-treasurer of the Agnes Scott Alumnae Board and has just completed her two-year term as president of the Alumnae Association. She was a member of the Alumnae House committee and has served on and chaired the nominating and alumnae awards committees. The Alumnae Board is most grateful for the many times she has opened her Atlanta home for board dinners and her Fayette County farm house for board retreats. At present she brings her special talents and commitment to the College's Board of Trustees, Atlanta Chapter Steering Committee and Atlanta Campaign Steering Committee. In every capacity, Reeves has set the standard for alumnae service to our alma mater. Quick to smile, she has never failed to show others that volunteering can be fun.

Just as the Agnes Scott community values Reeves's gifts and commitment, her community and family continue to be amazed by the range of her talents. The Atlanta History Center named her a volunteer of the year during the 1970s. When home-building professionals did not meet her standards, Reeves stepped in as general contractor for the construction of her North Atlanta home, which is built from drawings of homes in Colonial Williamsburg. Relying on her extensive knowledge of history and antiques, she also managed the restoration of the family's antebellum farmhouse in Fayette County, Ga.

Reeves feels at home in Decatur. Her father was an Emory law professor, and she majored in biology and German at Agnes Scott. She met her future husband, Dr. Walton Harrison Reeves while taking science classes at Emory. She and Harrison reared five children and now have eight grandchildren.

OUTSTANDING YOUNG ALUMNA

Kim Fortenberry Siegelson '84 has established herself as an award-winning writer of children's books.

Her first book, The Terrible, Wonderful Tellin' at Hog Hammock, published by Harper Collins in 1996, won numerous honors including the Sunshine State Young Readers Award, the Arkansas Charlie May Simon Book Award List and two honors in South Carolina.

Her second book, In the Time of the Drums, published in 1999, became an American Librarians Association Coretta Scott King Award winner, earned a listing in the New York Public Library Top 100 Children's Books for 1999-2000 and was recognized by the 1999-2000 Booklist's Best African-American Books for Children and Top Ten Black History Picture Books.

With several more children's books on the way, including Escape South, Siegelson is well established in her profession of children's literature. She has been asked to speak at many writers workshops and featured as a guest author at the Disney Institute, Georgia Children's Literature Conference and the national convention of the American Librarians Association in Chicago, and she was featured on a Georgia Authors public television series as well as cable programs.

Siegelson's African-American history genre attempts to make sense of a history that many Southerners find difficult to articulate and contemplate truthfully. Her stories were inspired by tales she heard as a child growing up in Georgia.

Siegelson is a lifetime Atlanta native who majored in biology at Agnes Scott followed by a master's degree in risk management and insurance at Georgia State University. She is the mother of two young sons and is married to Dr. Henry J. Siegelson.

Alumnae Award winners were chosen from a pool of nominations submitted by fellow alumnae. Their selection is based on their personification of the values of Agnes Scott College as stated in the mission statement. The selection committee members are Heidi Wilson Ream '90, chair, Charlotte Allsmiller Crosland '52, Carolyn Newton Curry '66, Barbara Byrd Gaines '77, Agnes Parker Wells '86 and Marilyn Johnson Hammond '68, ex officio.

The winners will accept their awards and speak at a luncheon in their honor on Friday, April 27, at noon in Letitia Pate Evans Hall. They will again be recognized during the annual meeting of the Alumnae Association at 1 p.m. on Saturday, April 28, in Gaines Chapel, Presser Hall.

A MESSAGE FROM MARILYN

The Agnes Scott Community has just emerged from a glorious weekend celebrating our "Bold Aspirations." We dedicated the Alston Campus Center and rededicated the newly renovated and expanded McCain Library. We celebrated Founder's Day and kicked off a $60-million comprehensive campaign. Students and alumnae celebrated all that Agnes Scott is and will be at a Friday night gala at the Fox Theatre's Egyptian Ballroom.

For many of us, the best way to summarize our feelings about all we experienced was "WOW!" But for me, whenever I'm with ASC alumnae, the real "WOW factor" is the women who make up the Agnes Scott community. Everywhere I turned that weekend, I met women who personify a lifelong love of learning and the capacity to reinvent themselves and the world around them.

- There was Christine Hatch '82, whom I met at lunch on Saturday. She is one of Agnes Scott's first Return-to-College students. The first two times Christine applied to Agnes Scott, she was rejected because the College did not have a program for non-traditional age women who might want to take classes part time. She was a woman ahead of her time, and when ASC caught up to her and established the RTC program, she was one of the first women to enroll. She entered Agnes Scott the same year her son entered Princeton and graduated with a double major in art and English on the same day he graduated from law school. Because of Christine's tenacity, she and the College shared a period of mutual transformation. We're a better place because Christine didn't take "no" for an answer.
- There was Tish Lowe '69, who was back on campus as a member of the Bold Aspirations Campaign committee from Washington, D.C. Tish is a perfect example of how love of learning and a willingness to reinvent oneself can also transform the world around us. In college, Tish was a music major and organist who also loved biology. Her first job out of college, which used some of the same skills she applied to her music, was as a systems analyst for IBM. When she moved to Tennessee and started taking courses "just for fun," Tish ended up completing a Ph.D. in biological anthropology. After a period working with the Tennessee Valley Authority as both anthropologist and systems analyst in environmental programs, she realized that she wanted to combine her interest in the environment with international development. At 41, Tish enrolled at Yale where she received an M.B.A. She now heads the Environment Division for International Finance Corporation, supervising a staff responsible for the environmental compliance of the World Bank's financial sector investments in third world countries. Her job and her department didn't exist until Tish convinced IFC that environmental due diligence mattered in their investments. We're a better place because Tish had the courage to navigate her own course.

- There was Ayse Carden '66, alumna and professor of psychology at Agnes Scott. Ayse's remarks at Founder's Day convocation (see "Parting Words") were a powerful reminder of the role that teachers like Ayse play in "the creation of a world more hospitable to life and the well-being of all its peoples." And Ayse is a woman who backs her words with action. This weekend, we learned that Ayse and John Carden have endowed a fund for the development of an alumna-in-residence program that will bring alumnae and students together for teaching and mutual learning. We're a better place because Ayse turns her values into action.

Numerous activities are planned for Agnes Scott alumnae over the coming year in communities across the country. I hope you will come and share your story and become reacquainted with other Agnes Scott women who, like you, are extraordinary women with extraordinary gifts.

A November letter from Fidesah Edwards Alexander assures the secretary that she found her broom in the basement. She belongs to a hiking club and says she attends all of the eating meetings, but very few of the walking ones.

Rosalyn Crispin Robinson participates in her cancer support group and attends book fairs with her author son. At the last meeting, five members, including Rosalyn, got stuck in the elevator. The fire department had to release them! For years Rosalyn has collected manger scenes and has to clear the decks to set them all up. This year was no exception, but she loves it.

Sarah "Carolyn" Cole Gregory sent a Christmas card and enclosed a lovely picture of her holding her adorable great grandchild, Grace Griffin Hall, with Bruce Jr. in the background. She has fully recovered from the broken hip and is back in her apartment on Lenox Road.

Marian Calhoun Murray reports that the Presbyterian home keeps calendars full with movies, concerts, luncheons and visitations to historic churches. In August, Marian had a bout with pneumonia, but by September, she was able to baby sit for son Jim's children while he and his wife went camping. Marian is circle chairperson for the Presbyterian women at the Presbyterian home. In other family news, her youngest grandson is engaged to be married in June.

Eva Poliakoff Goodman's August letter found her waiting for quarters in a new facility. By the time this item is in print, the secretary trusts that Eva will be well situated.

The Department of Theatre and Dance is organizing its archives and requests the assistance of alumnae. Various playbills from Studio Dance Theatre productions are missing, particularly those of spring concerts.

The department needs playbills from before 1989 to aid in identifying unmarked photos from these productions. Also, any photos of dance productions throughout the years would be appreciated.

Originals of playbills or photos are not necessary. Please contact Marialanna Lee or Marilyn Darling at (404) 471-5473 if you can help.

26 Reunion: April 27-29

DEATHS
• Elizabeth Little Meriwether, Dec. 15.

Dalton, GA 30720-8164

After Frances Steele Garrett's husband passed away in March, she continues to live in Lenbrook Square along with numerous other Agnes Scott College retirees.

Mary Alice Newton Bishop and her husband are in good health and active in their church and community. They sold their home and moved into Grove Park Terrace, a retirement home in Dothan, Ala. Their three children, nine grandchildren and four great-grandchildren also live in Dothan.

Virginia Caldwell Payne and her husband, three children and eight grandchildren are happy and in good health.

Catharine "Kitty" Jones Malone has been in Huntcliff Independent Living since her husband's death in 1998.

Genevieve Baird Farris '38 wrote from her home in Nashville, Tenn., of the death of her husband in September, and also of the passing, at age 98, of Phillip Davidson, former Agnes Scott professor of history and later provost at Vanderbilt University.

Barbara Hertwig Meschter and her husband are in Founder's Village, where multi-level care enabled her to travel to a family wedding in Kansas City in April and to Maine with her daughters in October.

Lillian Whitehurst Corbett is content at Crowfields in Western North Carolina, where she enjoys the company of the diverse retirees who take delight in the natural beauty and many senior services in and around Asheville, N.C.

Sarah Johnson Linney lives in Brandon Wild retirement home in Evans, Ga. After 59 years of shared good things, Sarah's husband, George, passed away after a stroke at age 90.

He had good care while he was ill, and his children and grandchildren were able to celebrate his birthday with him. Sarah has been surrounded by many old and new friends.

Lucile Barnett Mirman moved in October from Akron, Ohio, to Long Boat Key, Fla.

DEATHS

• George E. Linney, Sr., husband of Sarah Johnson Linney, date unknown.

Frances King Yager says her best news is that her husband, Charlie, is well and active again after a close call last year. They continue to enjoy their wonderful retirement home at Freedom Plaza. Their daughter, Margaret Yager Dufeny '65, attended her class reunion this year and brought back news of all the great things going on at the College.

Mildred Davis Harding's address was inadvertently given as 955. It is 5955 30th Avenue S, Apartment 212, Gulfport, Fla., 33707-5339. When ordering her newest book, Waking Up in Egypt, please note her correct address. The secretary apologizes for the typo, which was not caught in time.

Ola Kelly Ausley is glad the Class News deadline has been changed from December to November because of the many activities at Christmas time. She has been nursing her husband, Bob, after his massive stroke almost seven years ago. They go down to their condo on the Gulf every six weeks or so with the help of "heavenly Henry," who worked for her husband for 45 years, building houses and developing subdivisions. Now, after years of managing property, Ola says Henry is "maintaining Mr. Bob." Ola counts her blessings, but admits that by night she is tired.

Winifred Kellersberger Vass writes that grandchildren make the only ripples in the events of their lives in Presbyterian Village North in Dallas, Texas. Their oldest granddaughter, Elizabeth, continues her job at Southern Living magazine. Another daughter, Cora Guerin, is now a registered nurse owning her own townhouse in Black Mountain, N.C. Cora works at Mission St. Joseph Hospital in Asheville. Granddaughter Krystal Stucky, a flight attendant with American Airlines, is based in Boston.

Joyce Roper McKey and her husband are back in Orlando, Fla., for the winter after a refreshing summer in Highlands, N.C. Elsie West Duval and Ellen Little Lesesne with her daughter, Laura, visited them this summer. Joyce's children and grandchildren surprised them on Labor Day, eliciting Joyce's comment, "What fun that was!"

Elizabeth "Lib" Blackshear Flinn describes the marvelous trip she and her husband had to New England with their oldest son and his wife to see a granddaughter who is a sophomore at Williams College. The autumn leaves were absolutely glorious. They flew to Hartford, rented a car and toured scenic wonders, staying in wonderful hotels, one of which was a 150-year-old inn, a favorite of Edna St. Vincent Millay. The inn also housed a small museum of Millay memorabilia. At Bar Harbor they enjoyed beautiful nature walks, boat tours and watching for seals, eagles and lobster pots. They ate shrimp, crab, lobster, salmon, halibut and clam chowder as if these were going out of style.

Nell Allison Sheldon and Jane Guthrie Rhodes have planned their fall opera season together. Before attending the opera, they usually have a snack at Nell's favorite Chinese restaurant, the Golden Buddha. Then, in respect for Atlanta traffic, they will take turns driving to the fabulous Fox for the three o'clock matinee performance instead of the evening schedule. Jane finished another after-dinner skit at Decatur Presbyterian, "Who Wants to Be a Biblical Billionaire?" Her seasonal project was the Christmas play, A Christmas Carol, featuring everyone's favorite reformed villain, Scrooge. Jane and all the class hope classmates will share news of their holiday festivities.

Guidelines For Submitting Class News

Class news is published in MAIN EVENTS in January, March, June and September. Please submit news to your class secretary according to the following deadlines:

■ August 20 for January publication

■ November 20 for March publication

■ February 20 for June publication

■ May 20 for September publication

Class news may also be submitted directly to the Office of Alumnae Relations. Whether submitting news to your secretary or the Alumnae Office, be sure to include your full name (first, maiden, last) and class year.

When reporting births, deaths and advanced degrees, please include as much detailed information as possible. In all cases, exact dates and full names are needed.

Please report weddings and other planned events (vacations, visits with alumnae and friends) only after the fact.

Agnes Scott has nearly 10,000 living alumnae. We want to keep in touch with all of you and keep you in touch with each other.

for one year in Honduras. Eleanor is occupied with her church work, clubs and gardening.

Sara "Mac" McCain McCollum is very happy with her assisted living home in Eden, N.C. She teaches Sunday school about once a month and participates in many other activities. In addition, the food and employees are wonderful. Mac is impressed with the growth of Agnes Scott since 1939.

Susie Elizabeth Furlow Brown thinks classmates will have difficulty believing her news. Within a few days of each other, she and husband Robert had wrecks totaling both cars.

Alumnae Weekend
April 27-29

See You There!

Robert suffered broken ribs and a fractured sternum necessitating a three weeks' stay in the hospital. Elizabeth had only contusion and abrasions from the air bag. She warns everyone to take care.

Secretary Elinor Tyler Richardson also had a wreck, not her fault, but no broken bones, not even sore. She is very thankful her air bag did not deploy. However, it did take almost $6,000 to repair her car at the expense of the other driver's insurance company.

Lelia Carson Watlington certainly has a kind husband. As Lelia is not able to write, he sent a letter to Sarah Cunningham Carpenter and a note to the secretary. Classmates are thankful that her daughter brought her to the 60th reunion.

Sarah Cunningham Carpenter regretted that her letter last fall was so brief, but said she had to leave the Leadership Conference early in order to attend the dedication of the new Alumni House at Emory. Her son was in town for that event, having previously served as Alumni Director. The secretary did not attend the conference. Sarah does a great job.

It was a surprise to learn of the death of Philip C. Davidson Jr., on Oct. 13 in Nashville, Tenn. He was 98. His obituary did not mention Agnes Scott, but he had been dean of the graduate school and provost of Vanderbilt University before going to the University of Louisville as president.

Evelyn Sears Schneider's news was very exciting. What a shame it could not have been available sooner. Evelyn and her husband, Morty, have both had bouts with cancer. He has had pancreatic cancer, but they hope that at this time he is in permanent remission. She says his recovery is a true miracle. At 8:00 p.m., Nov. 20 through Nov. 24, on Discovery Health Channel, they were on an 18-minute segment on the Alternative: Uncovered program. This was filmed at their home in June. Thanks and best wishes go to Evelyn and her husband for sharing this information.

With good news comes some sad news. Mary Alice Newton Bishop '37 writes that her sister, Annie Newton Parkman, died June 18. Mary Alice said that "Toni" was in poor health for many years, but always loved Agnes Scott and her many friends there. She also enjoyed singing in Mr. Johnson's chorus and several operettas. Her husband preceded her in death. Indeed, the Newton family was well represented at Agnes Scott. A younger sister, Louise Newton Wright '43, also deceased, and Jeanne Newton Snipes '45 attended ASC.

Catherine Farrar Davis reports that she is fine these days, with only a few aches and pains. Her most recent visit to the doctor found everything in order. The highlight of her summer was a trip to Hilton Head in late September. Catherine is very active at St. Timothy's United Methodist Church, where she is treasurer for her church circle, working at the church office two Wednesdays a month.

Julia Moseley continues writing local history and is involved in the historical preservation of The Nest. She is concerned about a fungus infection of the laurel tree on the property. Music remains an important part of her life.

Violet Jane Watkins grieves over the death of Philip Davidson, former history professor at Agnes Scott College, and her neighbor for many years. "VJ." is always behind in doing yard work, but manages to include in her activities reading (mostly old favorites), playing bridge, trying to keep business affairs in order and socializing a bit.

Early in October, Mary Lang Gill Olson fell getting out of the shower and broke a bone in each foot. She reports that she is mending nicely.

Betty Jean O'Brien Jackson and Charlie are pleased with the success of cataract surgery on all four eyes.

In October, Lillie Belle Drake Hamilton had visits with a former pupil in Austin, Texas, and with a high school classmate in Fort Worth. While in Austin, she had the special pleasure of making the acquaintance of Katherine Patton Carssow's daughter-in-law.

Evelyn Baty Christman reports the engagement of granddaughter Sarah, daughter of Evelyn's late daughter, Carol, who died of cancer five years ago. Evelyn is rotating off church session and thinks she will take it easy in 2001.

Ernestine Cass Dickerson and Ralph enjoyed a McGee family reunion when they went to the wedding of a great niece in Jackson, Miss., last October.

Although Katherine Patton Carssow has lived in the same place for 21 years, she has had an address change. Her new address is Cedar Park, Texas, instead of Leander, Texas. During last summer, she and Bill spent several weeks in Abingdon, Va., "Kat's" childhood home, and visited many friends.

Mary Francis Ault spent three weeks during the fall in Chennai, India, where she taught conversational English at St. Paul's School and worked at the Dazzling Stone Orphanage.

Last summer, Mary "Polly" Heaslett Hastings and David visited children in Canada and spent eight wonderful days in Bermuda.

Henrietta Thompson Wilkinson enjoyed a summer stay with her son John in Maine and is fondly remembering having three of her children and their families with her at Christmas.

Frances Alston Lewis is always glad to read news of her classmates, and so she and Sam have shared theirs: both old and new. They have four children (three boys and one girl). Susan lives only 30 miles away and watches over them and her three brothers by e-mail. Sam, a Georgia Tech mechanical engineer, designs and solves machine problems. From ages 60 to 72, Frances and Sam's fondest achievement was bicycling, with Euro-Bike tours each summer. Their pictures of Europe by bike are a treasure. They now spend six cold months at their favorite KOA on Lake Corpus Christi with many friends who travel there, too. They have shifted from Tulsa's huge very active church to a smaller one where they can better learn members' names. They are beginning, moreover, to think of a smaller house and yard. For years they have been active in church and in nursing homes. Frances is also proud of campus improvements.

Nina Broughton Gaines and John were in Atlanta for the Georgia Tech homecoming, Jack's 60th. It was a disappointment to miss visiting the Scott campus. They both are healthy and active and hope to return for her 60th in 2001. It is already marked on the calendar as Frances looks forward to seeing old friends.

In August, Doris Dalton Crosby traveled to the Canadian Rockies with a group from her church. They saw many beautiful sites and were blessed with good weather. In November, her children and grandchildren honored Doris on her 80th birthday. Two daughters graduated from Agnes Scott, Carol Crosby Harvey '70 and Elaine Crosby Schauer '87. Elaine and her husband, Chris Schauer, presented her with twin grandchildren, a boy and a girl, Dec. 14, 1999. They are so much fun and live only a mile away.

Florence Ellis Gifford and John are in good health and are grateful for it. Their three children are happily married. Two granddaughters are also married, with two children each. The other four grandchildren are in college: the University of Virginia, Georgia, Tennessee and Appalachian State. Florence has happy memories of Agnes Scott years.

Elizabeth Irby Milam is busy enjoying grandchildren, participating in church activities, volunteering, including hospice, and fishing when time allows. She traveled with her son, Tom, Leslie and their six children to Gulf Shores in the summer. The triplets are thriving. In September, she visited her former assistant pastor and family in Victoria, B.C., where he is planting a PCA church. It was wonderful to see that part of the beautiful Northwest and the growing church.

Anna Meiere Culver lost her husband, Lewis, on August 18th in Austell, Ga., following a stroke on July 25th as they were traveling to Greenville, S.C., for a family reunion. Lewis was also the brother of Betsy Culver Iverson and the father of Anna Carol Culver '68.

Margaret Nix Ponder plans to attend the reunion in April.

Cornelia "Connie" Watson Pruett has moved to Rome, Ga., to be near her son, Tom Dasher, provost of Berry College.

Josephine "Betty" Nash Story wrote to tell classmates of the death of her husband of 56 years in May following a massive heart attack. He was also the father of Linda Story Lubitz '72. Betty is very involved as a discussion leader for Bible Study Fellowship, an international Bible-study organization.

Myree Wells Maas and husband Joe, their daughter, Jane Maas Edwards '76 and great grandchildren attended the change-of-command ceremonies at the Norfolk Naval Station, where their son, Rear Admiral Steven Maas, assumed command of the Navy Supply Corps in charge of post exchanges throughout the world.

Big events for Mamie Hallman Ross will be four college graduations and two weddings of various grandchildren.

Rebekah Andrews McNeill enjoyed the beautiful scenery on a trip to Colorado Springs in the fall. Her 16-year-old granddaughter especially liked visiting the Air Force Academy located there.

Julia Harry Bennett had a rather traumatic experience at Christmas time when she moved to a retirement community across town, necessitating much downsizing. She has had a happy year, however, with memorable trips to Florida and the Rockies. Julia has five grandchildren in college and two daughters teaching, all of which makes for a busy life.

In July, Elizabeth "Betty" Clarkson Shearer moved from Marietta, Ga., to a new retirement community, Kendal of Lexington, in Lexington, Va., in order to be near a daughter living in Clifton Forge, Va. In November, Betty's children celebrated her 80th birthday with a special party. All five of her

Reader's Connection

The Atlanta Chapter of the Agnes Scott Alumnae Association recently introduced the Reader's Connection program in metro Atlanta. Reader's Connection brings together women who enjoy reading books for lively discussions with Agnes Scott professors or celebrity authors.

The first Reader's Connection event was held on Feb. 8, when Christopher Ames, Charles A. Dana Professor of English met with 40 women to discuss White Teeth by Zadie Smith. Reader's Connection members were also invited to attend the reading by John Updike, featured author for the Agnes Scott Writers' Festival, on March 22, and a discussion of Waiting by Ha Jin, which will be led by Ayse Carden, professor of psychology on April 19.

The idea for Reader's Connection came from members of the Atlanta Chapter steering committee, with special thanks to organizers Chrissie Lewandowski '91, Jacquelyn Hahne '54, who created the name for the group, and Meg Thrash '73, who organized the events. For more information about starting a Reader's Connection program in your area, contact Marilyn Hammond at (404) 471-6325 or mhammond@agnesscott.edu.

children, 15 of her 19 grandchildren and one great-grandchild were present. Also attending were two other Kendal residents, Vicky Alexander Sharp '45 and Mary Price Coulling '49.

Neva Jackson Redfern, Myree Wells Maas and Eleanor "Jane" Stillwell Espy enjoyed a holiday luncheon of the Anna Young Club, formerly known as the Fifty-Year Club. The speaker was Laura Sugg, College chaplain, who apprised guests of her work on campus and outlined exciting plans for the future, including the erection of a small chapel.

Margaret Downie Brown writes that her only accomplishment seems to be having six great grandchildren and more anticipated. She doesn't remember taking a course on that at Agnes Scott, but then says she is not remembering many things these days!

Swanna "Betty" Henderson Cameron has joined the computer group and loves getting e-mail. She would love to hear from her classmates (BHCM100@aol.com). She boasts of a 2-and-a-half-year-old granddaughter, 14 years younger than their last grandchild. The family acts as if she were the first and smartest child born. Her father, Swanna's son-in-law, has pledged that although she will be free to choose where she goes to college, he will see to it that she visits ASC several times first.

Regina "Pat" Stokes Barnes and husband Hank swim every day at the Callaway Natatorium in LaGrange, Ga. They went on a wonderful cruise on the Volga River with visits to Moscow, St. Petersburg and Helsinki. They learned much and found pleasure in everything from small towns to big cities. (e-mail RAFHJB@mindspring.com)

Mamie Sue Barker Woolf and Warren are grateful that they can travel, having particularly relished two trips in the fall. In September, they spent three weeks driving 2,200 miles around the Republic of Ireland and Northern Ireland. They stayed in farmhouses and bed-and-breakfast homes, meeting some fascinating folks. They were there during the national hurling competition. What excitement! In October, they traveled to North Carolina, where the leaves were beautiful. (e-mail ewwoolf@juno.com)

Mary Blakemore Johnston has moved to Westminster/Canterbury Retirement Community in Winchester, Va. It is close to her son, John, and not too far from Fourth Presbyterian folks. Mary comments, "Time has marched on and on, and so have I. Praise God for all his grace in caring for me. I am well."

Patricia "Pat" Perry Reiss had a great two weeks in Ireland in October. She has six great-grandchildren with two more expected. Pat does a great deal of civic work and feels fortunate to be so well at almost 80.

After years of being separated abroad, Iyllis Lee Hutchin is delighted with visits from children and their families. Last winter they had the fun of having their oldest grandson, Eric, in town with them. Iyllis and Walter have four adult children, six grandchildren and one great-grandson. She hopes to attend a reunion at Agnes Scott and loves receiving the newsletter.

Flora Campbell McLain's grandson, son of Joyce McLain Poes and Eddie, was awarded the honor of a Morehead Scholarship to attend the University of North Carolina.

Anne Frierson Smoak brags about her grandson, a freshman at Carnegie Mellon University, Pittsburgh, Pa., recipient of a prestigious Intel Scholarship. He was one of 40 honored in Washington, D.C. She and Harold are moving along, though slowly at times.

In October, Mary "Mardia" Hopper Brown and Tommy took a beautiful Western Mediterranean cruise from Rome to Lisbon, nine ports in five countries. They celebrated the wedding of their first granddaughter, Amy, in November. Also, the Presbytery of Greater Atlanta honored Mardia in November for her long service with the clothes closet at Mission Haven. (e-mail GTBrownSR@aol.com)

Following the death of Raddy Mauldin, Maryann Cochran Abbott has been doing a splendid job as president of the class.

Alice Clements Shinall and her daughter embarked on a wonderful trip to London. They went to see Alice's granddaughter and her husband, who have been there for a year. They had a fine time shopping, going to the theatre and just visiting.

Anne B. Register Jones

After retiring from teaching chemistry at Vassar, Harriet Frierson Crabb set out in a different direction and in April published a paperback book. It is a study of lifestyle changes in a middle-Tennessee family between the Great Depression of the 1930s and World War II. Harriet carried out her theme through family life in two historic houses: one, her father's childhood home, and the other, her mother's. She felt a sense of urgency since the latter, which had been in her mother's family since 1840, was soon to be demolished. New owners have restored her father's home, however. Classmates should look for Growing up Years in Tennessee: A Tale of Two Houses.

Susan M. Richardson has been in touch with Marilyn Johnson Hammond '68, director of alumnae relations, about one of the events for the Agnes Scott Theatre Lovers' Tour of New York in May. Susan's job at the Gotham Book Mart is rewarding as ever.

Louise Reid Strickler's husband retired in November, and she loves having him home, even for lunch! They have three sons: one, a physician at Mayo's; another, working in computers; and the third, a Methodist minister. The Stricklers have four grandchildren.

Joyce Gilleland Dickinson quit her job, built a house and moved to St. Augustine, Fla., all in the space of six months. She said that her children think she is mad. She chuckles at the thought as she walks on the beach every day.

Elise Marshall Simkins unfortunately has had some health problems and probably won't be at the reunion. Everyone wishes her well.

Bonnie Hope Robinson is active in her church in Fayetteville, N.C. She traveled to Alaska last year and hopes to be at the April gathering.

Mildred McCain Persing likes her patio home at the Presbyterian Church's Retirement Center in Waynesboro, Va. She says that it is well managed.

Betty Crabill Rogers and Charlie recently enjoyed having an 18-year-old Chinese exchange student for a 10-day visit. Betty continues to be busy with church activities and prison fellowship ministries.

Theresa Kemp Setze and a loosely organized group from the Class of '47, who have met several times for Elderhostels and vacations, took a trip to London. The group consisted of Alice Beardsley Garber and Norm, Emma "Jean" Williams Hand and Jim and Theresa Kemp Setze, Doris Kissling Hamilton, Rosemary Jones Cox and her sister, Lucy Jones Cooley '67. Rosemary served as the fearless leader of the group and, despite her protests to the contrary, was of immense value in such matters as teaching companions how to ride the tube and buy seven-day passes thereto. She also engaged a reasonably priced, convenient, respectable hotel and alerted everyone to the use of ATMs that could take dollars from a bank in Petal, Miss., and have them magically appear as pounds in London. Amazing! Other highlights were sightseeing, theatres, including a visit to the Globe, marvelous dinners and high tea. It proved a marvelous trip, in spite of a petrol strike and a one-day flood.

Rosemary Jones Cox and Jim have a new granddaughter, Cameron Jones Cox, born Oct. 20.

The class of 1947 is proud of Amalea Isabel Hajar, this year's recipient of the Class of 1947 scholarship. A junior from St. Petersburg, Fla., she is majoring in philosophy and is a resident advisor and a philosophy tutor. The class wishes her continued success.

Jane is busy with the Wednesday Club, a 110-year-old women's study club, and will chair the science section of the club next year.

Harriet Gregory Heriot managed three exceptional trips with friends and classmates. She and Mary "Sheely" Little Miller trekked through old Himalayan trade routes in Nepal. Then with Harriet Reid she attended a Shakespeare seminar at Trinity College, Oxford. The third was a backpacking excursion on horseback in the Montana Rockies.

Mae Osborne Boles and Alvin enjoy church activities, especially Mobile Meals, for which she has volunteered for 30 years, as well as traveling to Europe and cultivating roses.

History professor Michael Brown's tour provided the opportunity for Martha Beacham Jackson and Sid to visit England for the eighth time. Besides a long tour each summer, the couple still spends a few weeks in Highlands, N.C., during that season.

Mary "Mac" Compton Osgood and her husband, John, completed an overseas adventure tour of Egypt and found the tombs, temples and the Nile to be magnificent. A side trip took them to the Sinai Peninsula to visit St. Catherine's monastery and to climb Mt. Sinai, a 10-mile, rocky, straight-up hike to see the sunrise. Mac reported that Martha Humber Porter and Jim celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary in October 2000. Mac's e-mail address is josg@mediaone.net.

Marybeth Little Lobdell had a good time with Ben and Anne "Page" Violette Harmon in Richmond, Va., and with Dabney Adams Hart at Thanksgiving in Ponte Vedra, Fla. Dabney was visiting her charming Uncle Dabney at Vicar's Landing, a retirement community where the Lobdells now live, except for Christmas and summers in Armory, N.Y. Marybeth has joined the chorus, writers' workshop and the book club. Her son-in-law, Rob Ackerman, has a hit play, Table Top, in New York City.

During a fall trip to the North Carolina mountains,

Nancy Dendy Ryle and Dallas visited Barbara Coith Ricker '48.

While participating in a river and loch cruise in Scotland last August, Jane Efurd Watkins and Charles stopped at the Isle of Skye, home of her Scottish ancestors.

On an Elderhostel trip to France in September, Annie "Charlsie" Smith Harris bumped into Frances Howerton Lucas '50, who was among the participants.

In February, Edryce Reynolds left for Beijing to teach oral and written English and organizational behavior and management to Chinese college students majoring in international studies. She expects to be in China for a year.

Marguerite "Peggy" Pittard Bullard and Carmen Shaver Brown had a wonderful trip to Israel and Jordan last spring. Later, during a visit to Portugal and Spain, Peggy fell and broke her elbow. In September, Carmen, Julia Weathers Wynne and Rachael "Binky" Stubbs Farris held a Druid Hills High School mini-reunion in the mountains of North Georgia.

Though widowed for 22 years, Bettie Davison Bruce reports from Opelika, Ala., that she is still living in the same house she and her husband moved into 46 years ago. Slowing down only a little, she enjoys her five married children and 13 grandchildren.

In the spring Julianne Cook Ashmead had a good visit with Louise "Poochy" Gehrken Howie in Savannah. In October, Julianne and Ed attended the 24th annual Bach Festival in California, where their son, Ralph, was especially honored for the extraordinary instruments and bows he makes. The visiting Philharmonic Baroque Orchestra, many of them using Ralph's handmade bows, presented an outstanding program.

After spending some time in Bulgaria and Slovakia in the fall, Nancy Francisco Barbour and her husband went to Madrid for Thanksgiving with their daughter. They returned to Washington, D.C., at the end of November.

Sue Tidwell Paulsen and Chuck have settled happily at Lake Burton and in Clayton, happy to be free of their house in Atlanta and the city's traffic and smog. In the fall they spent three weeks in Bavaria and the Black Forest, ending the trip with four days in London.

As usual, Katherine Geffcken spent the summer in Rome, except for two weeks in July in Cyprus and Rhodes, where the temperature was a torrid 116.

Betty "Bebba" Blackmon Kinnett reports a busy spring and summer in 2000, with a new grandson, three graduations and her husband's knee and hip replacements.

In spite of a busy schedule as library trustee, member of the local hospital's development board and participant in a hospital chaplaincy program, Ellen "Steve" Page Reid travels a great deal. She did a kayak trip on the Baja with three of her children and two grandchildren, and continues to indulge in downhill skiing.

Dr. Driscoll Reid, husband of Ellen "Steve" Page Reid, Sept. 1999.

- Don R. Wynne, Jr., husband of Julia Weathers Wynne, Nov. 23.

Carol Munger wishes that she could attend the 50th reunion, but is physically unable to fly because she is on oxygen. She hopes everyone has a great time. Five years ago, Carol moved to Erie, Pa., to be near her sister, Joyce Munger Osborn '54.

Julia Cuthbertson Clarkson moved during November into her new home in Charlotte. For the past four years she had opted for living on a lake some distance from town. Now she prefers less yard work and the convenience of being closer to church, museums, concerts, theaters and libraries.

Mary Hayes Barber Holmes is enjoying her first grandchild, Grace, who lives nearby in Chapel Hill, N.C. She accompanied Grace and her parents to Scottsdale, Ariz., for a convention. Mary Hayes serves as president of Friends of the Pittsboro Library (an easy job) and teaches preschoolers at Sunday school (a hard one). She is looking forward to the reunion.

Barbara Stainton Robinson volunteers at church music camp, Pumpkin Patch, and preschool. In addition to daily swims and bike riding, "Babs" stays busy with craft projects. She has made dozens of mini-quilts, which she sent to a nursing home in France, a blind lady in Sweden and elderly people in Norway and Germany. She takes orders for her quilts, mainly from Precious Moments. A percentage of her sales go to the National Parkinson's Foundation.

Babs has made trips to Switzerland to purchase discounted and unusual fabrics. She spent Christmas with her son in Los Angeles.

Amy Jones McGreevy had sextuple bypass surgery in September at Emory University Hospital. Since she had had no symptoms of heart problems except for a little shortness of breath, she feels blessed that the major blockages were found during a checkup. By late October, Amy was well enough to travel to North Carolina for the annual time-share getaway and to have lunch at the Grove Park Inn with Jimmie Ann McGee Collings and Tom.

Marie Woods Shannon is the senior warden of the vestry at Grace Episcopal Church in Liberty, Mo. She was one of the readers of the General Ordination Examination given nationally by the Episcopalian denomination to senior seminarians aspiring to the priesthood.

In October, David and Marjorie Stukes Smith made their second trip of the year to the Romanian village where they have established a house church. During their four-day visit, they joined the "work force" to replace hundreds of tiles on the roof of the Frances House. When the house is in order with running water and a bathroom, the children of the village will be able to meet for Bible stories, singing and games. In November, Marjorie and David went to Erddig, a National Trust House in England, to collect their winning raffle ticket check for £10,000!

Martha Ann Stegar recovered quickly from her hip replacement surgery in time to join her husband on a 15-day cruise to Tahiti and neighboring islands in French Polynesia in October. Then she got a new left knee for Christmas. The activity that gave her hip and knees the coup de grace was a trip to China and Tibet last spring, but Martha enjoyed the trip, anyway.

Betty Ziegler Dunn says that life is good. She and Clyde are enjoying retirement years, traveling, working in their church and community and especially being grandparents of eight boys and two girls. They spent a month in the summer of 2000 traveling and visiting family in Germany. In August, they were a host couple at a working farm for Heifer Project International, a world organization seeking to eliminate world hunger.

Mary Caroline "M.C." Lindsay received the 2000 Peacemaking Award from the Presbytery of Greater Atlanta in November.

Marianela Segura Ortiz has two sons with wonderful families and four beautiful grandchildren. Marianela and her husband are very grateful and happy. She remembers telling Dr. Frierson that she could not understand one word of his chemistry lectures because he sounded as if he had a hot potato in his mouth. Dr. Frierson was so amused that he told the story at a faculty meeting. How embarrassed Marianela was! Dr. Frierson said he could never study in Puerto Rico because he did not know any Spanish.

Rene Dudley Lynch continues to put classmates in the shade. Not only does she travel all over the world, but she has just published her second book about her mother's family, the Fairbanks.

One never knows when a dog in the family will provide unexpected assistance. Frances Coley Parry says her new golden retriever is helping with her upper body strength, a conclusion that seems justified, since he weighs 78 lbs. She also mentioned that hubby Tom's 50th college reunion was unforgettable.

Then there are those who never stay home. An example is Keller Henderson Barron. 2000 was a travel year of international and domestic jaunts for her: to Heidelberg, Germany, the Panama Canal and Costa Rica, Expo 2000, Newport, R.I., and Italy. Keller did most of it with some members of the family.

The secretary received a long letter from Ellen Hunter Brumfield telling of the loss of her daughter to cancer in early 2000 and then her decision to travel with Mary Garrard Jernigan to alpine Europe. They were able to see the Passion Play.

Barbara E. West Erwin participated in the Atlanta Cancer Walk in September. She didn't try to walk the 60 miles but served food to the 400 people involved. Daughter Sally and granddaughter Robin did the walking. (Robin is a junior at Agnes Scott this year.) The event was quite an experience, one Barbara hopes to repeat.

Nancy Lee-Riffe spent a delightful three weeks on the road in October, visiting friends, relatives and other sights. On the way home, the last day, she had lunch with Joyce Munger Osborn and Gordon in Erie. What a treat! Joyce has been diagnosed as cancer-free after nine years and looks fine. Since Gordon retired, they do a great deal of traveling, Elderhostels, cruises and the like. They were concentrating on Florida in February.

Katharine Hefner Gross also travels extensively, including trekking through India, Nepal, Pakistan and Peru. Most recently she spent two months in Central and Eastern Europe, primarily the Republic of Georgia, traveling by Russian jeep into the remote Tusheti Mountains and staying with families in their primitive houses, enjoying delicious food with much toasting. The class hopes she won't make travel plans that cause her to miss the 50th. Katharine continues printmaking, the work she loves.

Nancy Hall Bond and her now retired husband are building a retirement home in the Pocono Mountains. They will spend time in Texas (her roots) with daughter Lynn and family, in North Carolina with artist son John and in North Delaware with son Jeff, who has his own invisible fence business. In the last two years they have also traveled to South America, Ireland and Scotland. Nancy plays tennis and is taking up golf.

Mary Pritchett Webb lost her mother last summer. She can be contacted by e-mail: MaphWebb@cs.com.

In May, Jane Crook Cunningham joined an Elderhostel to Alaska on a small ship. She saw 17 different animals in the frozen North. In the fall, she stayed at a bed and breakfast near Culpepper, Va., once owned by her great-great-grandparents. Daughter Susan, in Columbia, S.C., won her level of tennis in the state championship. Her tennis partner is a man in a wheelchair!

After retiring last June, Judith "Judy" Promnitz Marine completed editing the manuscript of her mentor, Burney Overton, dealing with relational communication. Judy put it into book form as a tribute to him. Her retirement home in Atlanta is near her younger daughter and family, still convenient to Westminster. In November, she visited her older daughter and family in Larchmont, N.Y., before taking a long trip to Kenya and on across the Indian Ocean to parts of India, including the Taj Mahal. What a way to begin retirement!

Chor Goh Chow and David's travels have mostly involved family: visiting her brother in Vancouver and nearby parts of Canada; seeing daughter Grace with her husband and four children in New Jersey; joining her son, Ivan, and his son in Lake Placid; going to Amherst, to see more of Ivan and his family. Chor says now she'll garden and read in order to relax for a while.

Jacquelyn "Jackie" Josey Hahne hasn't had a guide dog puppy this year to raise, but is proud that a previous one has completed formal training and is matched with a blind owner. With Scout, adopted from Sheltie Rescue of Georgia, she hopes to get involved in Happy Tails, a local program in which dogs visit hospitals and nursing homes. Her youngest daughter, Nancy, recently married; Nancy's husband has provided Jackie with a 13-year-old granddaughter. Classmates can e-mail Jackie: jjhahne@earthlink.net.

Jackie reports additional news items of classmates:

Harriet Durham Maloof has a pacemaker. Since her husband is a cardiologist, she must be in good hands. Patti Boring Sellas and Valley Burnett Orr did an Elderhostel to Cumberland Island, Ga.

Last spring Genevieve Guardia Chenault and Hank experienced fall in Australia and New Zealand, deliberately missing Olympic crowds. Less deliberately, they had to miss the expected three days in Fiji because of the coup there, but still had a memorable trip.

Adeline Steans Morrison had an exciting study tour of the Middle East, having been sent there as part of the PCUSA "Come and See" program. She was able to see Gaza, Bethlehem and refugee camps, meeting Palestinian Christians before the shots were fired (as Addie's group was on the Mount of Olives). Afterwards, she spent a week in Egypt. She asks that all keep the Middle East in their prayers.

In Savannah, Betty Stein Melaver, president of the Telfair Museum, is making a big difference. After much work, plans are approved to build a Moshe Safdie-designed building to house appropriately and teach contemporary art. Permits were especially difficult to obtain because it will be built within Savannah's historic district.

Fall foliage drew Kathleen Stout Mainland to Maine and North Carolina. In Maine, she traveled with the Center for Positive Aging, ate lobster, saw many lighthouses, Campobello and Kennebunkport. In Black Mountain, she was with her church's Keenagers, a senior group. She thanks God for planning colorful falls.

Caroline Reinero

Kemmerer's six wonderful grandchildren keep her smiling despite her grief at the loss of her husband. Travel also is a favorite activity.

JoAnn "Jo" Hall Hunsinger was recognized in the Home & Garden section of The Atlanta Constitution on Nov. 30 for the redesign of her Brookwood Hills yard. Her garden's main function is as "a bird and wildlife sanctuary, with enough native plants and flowers to provide food, cover and nesting sites."

Margaret (Peggy) Bridges Maxwell is a counselor in the elementary school system of Wornsockot, R.I., promoting a peace curriculum. Her third daughter, Susan, received a full graduate fellowship at the Writers' Workshop at the University of Iowa. Another daughter, Carol, is at Evergreen State College.

Harriet Stovall Kelley judged a couple of poetry contests, an activity that is always demanding as she considers it very seriously, giving it much time and thought. This situation has been complicated by well-wishers calling and coming by with food, since her husband, Chuck, had his liver operations in the summer. He is not doing well, but is in good spirits.

Mary "Bunny" Hall Schmidt attended the Schmidt family reunion in Atlanta.

Carolyn Alford Beaty and Betty Akerman Shackleford had lunch with Ann Hoover Gulley in July. Ann was in Atlanta with her husband, Frank. They were happy to hear about Ann's family, as she was unable to come to the reunion. "Shack" (Harold) and Betty toured China in November for two and one-half weeks.

Beverly Jensen Nash's husband was a securities attorney in New York City for many years, but they have retired to the beautiful mountains of Western North Carolina. They also have a home in Alexandria, Va. One son, a graduate of Duke and Harvard, is with the attorney general's office in Washington, D.C. Beverly and Gordon took a wonderful trip to the French/Italian Rivas and Corsica.

Louise Robinson Singleton will go to Ghana and Nigeria to do follow-ups on her Millennium Connection International Conference in August. She has completed six years and a presidency on the board of the Institute of Cultural Affairs. Louise is ready for a shift but does not know what it will be. She says, "Hello to all."

Letty Grafton Jernigan has updated her life for classmates. She was married for 20 years to John Harwell, the father of her two girls, who each have three children: one daughter lives in Memphis and the other in Selma, Ala. John died in 1975, and Letty remarried in 1983 but was divorced in 1986. She returned to Memphis and worked as a secretary for a benefit-consulting firm for 11 years. In 1995, she was very fortunate to meet Prent Jernigan, whom she married in 1997. He was retired when she met him; Letty finally retired 15 months ago and loves the experience. She is active in church and volunteer work. His hobby is golf, and she favors duplicate bridge. Thanks to Prent's daughter in North Carolina and his four grandchildren, the family has grown. After Letty's father died in February 1999, her mother moved to an assisted living facility in Virginia. She sees Lib Grafton Greer two or three times a year and wishes they lived closer.

Sandra Dickson Ballentine's son, Steve, lives in Wake Forest, N.C., with his family, which includes Sandra's four grandchildren. Sandra's plans are to continue living the happy life that she has had since her marriage weeks after graduation.

Julia Beeman's Mediterranean cruise with her daughter, Jennifer, was a true cultural smorgasbord from Istanbul to Barcelona. In Turkey, she set foot at last on the soil of her Armenian grandmother's homeland. Santorini's blue-trimmed, bougainvillea-draped white buildings were sheer delight. (Even a blue-eyed white kitten greeted them!) Rome was hot, mega-crowded and too rushed. Julia's usually firmly grounded and well-oriented offspring and she managed to get lost in Florence, briefly—an enlightening, frightening experience. She considers it a miracle she was not permanently left behind somewhere taking photographs. The ship itself was a great indulgence: no cooking or cleaning for two whole weeks, and extraordinary cuisine culminating on the final night with her all-time favorite dessert, baked Alaska. At last she no longer feels the deprivation of the untraveled.

Gwen McLeroy Adams ventured to Ireland with her son and daughter-in-law during the Christmas season. Since Gwen retired at 61 from the University of Tennessee Hospital, she has done a little ghostwriting for the hospital, helping to raise money.

Physically she has a bad back and had to have eye surgery. At home, Gwen enjoys her garden.

In family news, her youngest son is in Miami; her other son is in Atlanta, and her daughter, in Knoxville. Her granddaughter is a student at the University of Tennessee.

Sammie Frierson Mills and Sid spent an uneventful summer in Kansas. They will spend the winter in their beach home on South Padre Island, Texas. Their son, Bret, from Austin joined them for the holidays. Son Kirk has a home as well on the island. Sammie and Sid will return to Kansas in April. While on the island, Sammie is without her e-mail.

Joann Barrett Faillace is retired and has her 16th grandchild on the way. That is a full-time job.

This summer Beverly Watson Howie and John had an unexpected but delightful thing happen to them. While they were retreating at their summer cottage in Penobscot, Maine, they met Vivian Hays Guthrie and Shirley by total surprise at a chamber music concert on a beautiful Sunday afternoon in Blue Hill, a lovely nearby village. They managed a few good times before they left the area, including a couple of dinners together and an exciting canoe ride down the Bagaduce River. They are hoping for more such events with the Guthries and other alumnae who might be up their way. Their telephone number is 207-326-8311.

Helen "Jo" Hinchey Williams has recounted her memories of the year 2000. Among these are those associated with family, travel, alumnae activities, church events and local and international community outreach. In family she recalls receiving the news that Stef and Dave both completed the Houston Marathon, eating Mexican food with them in Houston, watching Bryan and Bryce play soccer and swim, hearing Stacy tell about winning a couple of team golf tournaments. From her wide travels, Jo remembers dancing in the street on Easter Sunday in Greece, laughing and chatting with children in Istanbul, riding a camel in Egypt. She also has fond recollections of an Agnes Scott weekend at The Cloisters in Sea Pines, Ga., of being a commissioner to the Presbyterian Church (USA) General Assembly in Long Beach, Calif., of teaching Sunday school to children for the first time in 30 years. She chaired the Committee of the Sarasota-Manatee Chapter of the UNA-USA, trying to raise $30,240 to clear a four-acre tract of land in Pakrac, Croatia, of landmines, and also planned and publicized Landmines Awareness Day in October.

Georgia Syribey is doing well as she reads and writes poetry. A high point of her life occurs when she attends the Poetry Workshops at Callanwolde Fine Arts Center, taught by Memye Curtis Tucker '56.

Katharine "Kit" Sydnor Piephoff's news came to the secretary from the porch overlooking the Intracoastal Waterway at Kit's son and daughter-in-law's condo in Ocean Isle, N. C., and with the latest MAIN EVENTS nearby. She and her husband, Zack, have made another move, this one from Greenwood, S.C., to Mooresville, N.C., one exit up I-77 from Davidson. Their new condo is nearer their children and two granddaughters in Davidson and Charlotte.

Nancy Alexander Johnson and Pierce had a splendid summer vacation in Seattle, taking in the Cascades, Mount St. Helen's, Mount Rainier, a rain forest and Vancouver, B.C. In October they attended the wedding of Nancy's nephew in Hartford, Conn. Jean Clark Sparks and Homer were there as well, along with their daughter, Holly.

Carol Pike Foster and Gene Allen Reinero Vargas got together in 1999 in Tempe, Ariz. Gene and husband Dan live in Bogotá, Columbia; they were in this country when their daughter, Carolina Vargas Reinero '87, received her master's degree from Arizona State University.

Rebecca Fewell had a visit with Nancy Grayson in Montreal during the summer. Then she joined Sibley

Robertson Veal '60 for a bike ride around Prince Edward Island. In November, "Becca" married Dan A. McRight, a Presbyterian minister, director of pastoral care education for Baptist Hospital Systems of South Florida. They live in Miami. Congratulations to the newlyweds!

For additions to reading lists, classmates should check on Valley, a book of poetry by Randy Norton Kratt published in 2000, and a color postcard book, Remembering Charlotte, University of North Carolina Press, that came out in time for Christmas. The postcard book is a collection of period postcards that reveal the fascinating story of Charlotte's past. Randy's Small Potatoes won the year's Brockman Book Prize for North Carolina. The class is proud of Randy's accomplishments.

Mary Byrd Davis and her sister, Joan Falcner Byrd '61, helped celebrate the 100th birthday of their mother, Mrs. John D. Byrd, in Hendersonville, N.C., on Dec. 2. Joan is a professor of art at Western Carolina University; Mary writes on environmental issues.

In September, Harriet "Hattie" Talmadge Mill had a visit from Delores Ann Taylor Yancey and her husband, Goodloe, as they passed through Southern Maine. Hattie said life was calm, and the hibernation season was approaching for her.

Trips to Hawaii and Italy were highlights of 2000 for Langhorne Sydnor Mauck. The trip to Italy was especially delightful, with a customized tour of Umbria led by a long-time resident of that area. When Langhorne returned from Italy, she welcomed a new grandchild, her first grandson, after four little granddaughters. She also visited Mary Jo Cowart Jenkins and Bob at their lake home in LaFollette, Tenn.

2000 has been a bang-up year for Gerald and Shirley McDonald Larkey. A month-long expedition to Antarctica and South America, a trip in early June to Alaska with 26 of their best friends from Atlanta and Lake Rabin in North Georgia and a two and one-half week trip to Central and Eastern Europe comprised the itinerary. Coincidentally, Margaret Woolfolk Webb and her husband, Glenn, from Bakersfield, Calif., were on the European trip. Shirley says that now they plan to stay home and spend time with their year-old grandson as they wait for another grandchild scheduled to arrive in early May.

Suzie Ware McGinty and her husband, Ray, left the day after his retirement on Sept. 30 to move across country to Georgia. They are now at Reynolds Plantation, Greensboro, Ga., and love it.

Learning to read Hebrew, taking an art course and playing with her 2-year-old granddaughter take Marilyn Tribble Wittner's time since she retired, but she still fits in a little consulting work on the side. Her husband, Harvey, is also enjoying his retirement and spent 28 wonderful days in China during the summer.

Anne McWhorter Butler is in Jacksonville, Fla., for the winter months and is very happy to have that option in view of the cold winter St. Louis has had.

Eve Purdom Ingle and Clyde's son, Brian, was married on Sept. 14 in Brooklyn, N.Y. The ceremony was performed by Helen Mabry Beglin. Brian is an actuary in New York City; his bride, Juliet, a graduate student at New York University.

On July 15, Suellen Beverly Wilson's son, Christian Hamler, married Celeste Chavez. Their wedding was performed by Helen Mabry Beglin.

Marion Barry Mayes and Frank retired in Beaufort, S.C., in January 2000. Frank, a Presbyterian minister, is working two days a week doing pastoral care and occasional preaching at the First Presbyterian in Beaufort. He grew up in this church, and his father was pastor there for 25 years. Marion is eagerly learning about the environment and wildlife in her new area. She has become involved as well in programs for the arts, outdoor recreation and continuing education through the University of South Carolina. Her sons are in North Carolina: John, in Charlotte; David and wife, Sally, in Wilmington.

After attending the reunion in April, Celia Crook Richardson is sure she doesn't want to miss another one. Both retired, she and her husband, Jimmy, participate in church activities, golf, skiing and hiking. Celia's most rewarding volunteer work is visiting a local nursing home and cancer center twice a week with her therapy dog, Nicholas. Her daughter and family, including two grandchildren, live near Philadelphia. Her older son and his wife are both employed at the Los Alamos National Labs. Their home narrowly escaped damage during the May 2000 forest fires near Los Alamos. Celia's youngest son, a doctor in Denver, was married in June 2000.

Another retiree is Carolyn Hoskins Coffman, after 22 years of teaching computer skills in a middle school. She is occupied now with church work, visiting her children in Panama City, Richmond and Washington, D.C., and patronizing local museum exhibits.

Eileen McCary Cline's literary output includes a book, short stories and articles for a West Virginia newspaper. In addition, she has done research and written analyses for a military advocacy group in Alexandria, Va. She also works part time in an American arts and crafts gallery. On her 62nd birthday, she married Alton Donald Smith ("Smitty"), with a two-months' honeymoon in Europe. They both love to travel and are planning to spend a month in Italy in 2001.

Utilizing Smitty's detailed travel journals, Eileen is considering writing a book or short stories about their adventures. Their new extended family includes children and grandchildren from Las Vegas to Pennsylvania.

In December, Rebecca "Becky" Wilson Guberman began working at The High Museum in Atlanta as director of development for individual gifts. Mary Beth Thomas retired from the University of North Carolina as a professor.

Nancy Duvall Hargrove, a veteran English professor at Mississippi State, has been recognized for outstanding classroom teaching by the national Carnegie Foundation for the Advancement of Teaching and Council for Advancement and Support of Education. She is among 44 winners selected from a total of more than 470 nominations and is the third MSU professor in the past five years to receive the honor. She specializes in 20th-century British and American literature and is the author of two books, Landscape as Symbol in the Poetry of T.S. Eliot and The Journey Toward Ariel: Sylvia Plath's Poetry of 1946-1959. She is currently working on a third book, also about Eliot. In addition, since joining the MSU faculty in 1970, Hargrove has received numerous awards. Among those were the Outstanding University Honors Program Faculty Award, John Grisham Master Teacher Award, MSU Alumni Association Outstanding Teacher Award and Outstanding Humanist Award. Her scholarly work resulted in four national J. William Fulbright grants, including two teaching and research stints in France and one each to Belgium and Sweden.

Betsy Schenck Kylstra and her husband continue to conduct counseling ministry seminars and to oversee a network of Healing Houses for people needing a week of counseling. They have traveled to Canada, Barbados and England in connection with their work. Betsy's children are doing well: son James is a doctor in San Francisco; son Lewis teaches at the University of New Hampshire.

Sally Bergstrom Jackson and Charles have returned to Savannah, Ga. Sally's e-mail address is sallyjac@mindspring.com.

Doris Bray Gill has retired after 34 years of teaching but still substitutes occasionally. She works part time as a store co-manager. Doris is the proud grandmother of Keaton Elizabeth Henderson, born Jan. 23. She is also the organist at her church, a member of the local Kiwanis and caretaker of her Tennessee walking horse. She would love to hear from classmates.

Mary Ann Gregory Dean has turned in the gavel as president of the Orlando Rotary Club, but she did get to travel to the Rotary International Convention in Buenos Aires, where she put her Spanish to good use. She often sees Nell Tabor Hartley at Nell and Tom's new Orlando home. Mary Ann's son, Patrick, will marry in Seattle in April and will also complete medical school. Her other son, Greg, lives close by in Florida. Mary Ann can be reached on e-mail at merrann@aol.com.

Elizabeth Thomas Freyer and husband Fred enjoy their grandchildren, Kendall, 3, and Thomas, 1. The Freyers have moved permanently to St. Simons Island, where they built a house.

Sara Ector Vagliano is having a marvelous experience as chair of the ASC Board's Academic Affairs Committee and as a member of the Comprehensive Campaign Steering Committee. She has found working with Frances "Frannie" Bailey Graves and Rebecca "Becky" Bruce Jones to be extremely satisfying. Sally assures us that the Class of '63 is doing its best for the future of the College. Sally and Alec purchased a medieval house in the south of France that she describes as "a doll house for the aging." She is very proud of her son, David Via, who writes a weekly theatre column for The Washington Post.

Nell Tabor Hartley sent the "Hartley Y2K Report." Nell and Tom have purchased a house in Orlando, where Tom now works for Morris Architects. They still have their home in Sewickley, and Nell continues to enjoy her duties at Robert Morris College, as director of the corporate education program. Daughter Britt works at the U.S. Airways Club in Pittsburgh. Her son, Robert, will complete his M.B.A. studies in August and has continued with the photography business he founded as a college freshman. Robert's wife, Barbara, is also an M.B.A. candidate while she does marketing work for an Orlando radio station.

Kathryn Mobley Ridlehoover has become a golf expert, coming in first several times in state competitions in Arizona. She and Ted visit family and grandchildren in Maryland and Georgia. Kathryn writes poetry and children's stories for the grandchildren. Moreover, she plays bridge on the Internet MSN's Zone under the name "azpeach1." She would like to play with some Scotties.

Cornelia Bryant traveled to Sicily in mid-November for two weeks on a tour organized by the Smithsonian. She pronounced Sicily a most incredible place and definitely worth a return trip. The itinerary included Palermo, Agrigento, Syracuse, Catania, Messina and Taormina.

Mary "Mac" Mitchell Saunders quit a job she never liked, effective Dec. 31, and hopes "to laze around."

Becky Miller Howard teaches calculus and differential equations at Roane State Community College, and is past president of the Tennessee Math Association of Two-Year Colleges. Daughter Susan is a veterinarian; and son Peter, a post-doctoral student in applied mathematics at the Courant Institute of Mathematical Sciences, New York University.

Susan Richards Allen is studying for a second master's, this time in ESOL (English for Speakers of Other Languages), at the University of Maryland. She finds that "going to school full time was easier at ASC—no meals to cook, laundry to do, house to clean." In addition to school, Susan plays the organ and works with choirs. Husband Bob is business manager at St. John Newman Catholic Church, Gaithersburg, Md., as well as a Catholic deacon. They have three grown sons.

Barbara White Frederic and husband George do much traveling, frequently to Atlanta to see toddler granddaughter, Tori. Thanks to the ASC Bed and Breakfast Exchange, they stayed with Sally Pockel Harper '65 in the Boston area on their way to a cruise to Quebec in September. At home in Incline Village, Nev., they are members of a hiking club and regularly hike 8-10 miles on trails at elevations between 7,500 and 9,700 feet! They are also involved in the local Young Life organization.

Anne Foster Curtis says fall was a "season of homecomings." Anne herself has a new address in Chattanooga, Tenn., and daughter Polly has moved from California to Black Mountain, N.C. While visiting Polly, Anne spent time with Maggie Whitton Ray and Tom, and with Georgia Gillis Herring '65 and her husband.

Victoria Mell Laird Ackerman lives in Grosse Point, Mich., a suburb of Detroit, and is a professor of mathematics at Macomb Community College. Her husband, Hank, works for Associated Press in New York, so they have a commuter marriage. Their son and daughter reside in Atlanta.

Pam Stanley McCaslin retired from teaching learning-disabled children and now owns an antiques business while serving as organist/choirmaster at St. Thomas Episcopal Church in Savannah, Ga. She and Jay have been married 38 years and have twins: Jay VI, who is in dental practice with his father, and Jennifer McCaslin Lobel '89, who lives in Atlanta and who has provided her parents with two grandchildren. Pam plays keyboard for an informal group called the Crabettes, who, prior to Pam's membership, used to perform wearing live crabs on their hats!

Mary Jo Beverly Limbird and Glenn retired to North Carolina last spring, where they have worked on the house and the yard, helped Mary Jo's parents during her mother's recovery from knee-replacement surgery, assisted Habitat for Humanity and joined a church. There, Glenn is an usher, and Mary Jo sings in the choir and serves on the Christian Education committee. In spare time, Mary Jo has been substitute teaching in special education classes; Glenn has been remodeling a rental house in preparation for selling it. They wonder what retirement is like! Sons Mark and Jonathan live in the house in Loomis, Calif., doing some repairs before putting it on the market.

Secretary Mary Womack Cox is busier than she has ever been in her life. (The Web site for the Diocese of Southeast Florida, www.diosef.org, lists some of the events that keep her so busy.) As diocesan communications officer, she attended the General Convention of the Episcopal Church in Denver last summer and became a cover girl. After she was photographed greeting a friend in front of the photo mural that was one of the visual symbols of the convention, the picture turned up on the cover of The Living Church, a national weekly Episcopalian magazine. The secretary prefers to be behind the camera, but the episode did amuse her family and friends.

Virginia "Jinna" Fraser Clark received her doctorate from Georgia State University in August. She appreciates the help given her on her dissertation by Catherine Heffernan, who was advisor to nontraditional students at ASC. After graduation, Jinna spent the weekend with Barbara Beischer Knight and Bernie at their cottage in Highlands, N.C. In addition, she reports a new grandchild, Chelsea Michelle Taylor, born at 9:22 p.m. on Nov. 27 to Chuck and Ginny Taylor, in McDonough, Ga. Chelsea weighed 6 lbs., 10 oz., and was 19 inches in length. Chuck and Ginny are both doing well. Jinna likes being a grandmother.

Barbara Bowers Kendrick-Holmes and her husband, Charles, have operated a Christian Training Center in Alabama for the past 26 years. This center offers Bible study for college students, a high school work-study program and a summer camp for first- to ninth-graders. Barbara and Charles have three children and four grandchildren. One son is a newspaper editor in Clarksville, Tenn., another, a football coach at The Citadel; their daughter teaches second grade in Lexington, S.C. While visiting her daughter, Barbara enjoyed seeing Sarah Timmons Gladden.

Margaret Smith Sollars is a criminal defense attorney in the New Orleans area. In 1999, she succeeded in getting a conviction overturned when DNA evidence was tested. Her client had been in jail for over 20 years. Last year Margaret and her client were the subjects of a Frontline (PBS) show. She is hopeful that a movement in Louisiana to have all convicted felons supply DNA samples will free other innocent people.

Elaine Nelson Bonner's daughter, Beth, is working at an orphanage in Hetauda, Nepal, with Helps International Ministries. Her duties include teaching English, doing accounting for the orphanage, teaching money management and beginning a cottage industry for women.

Ann Durrance Snead, Elaine Nelson Bonner and Sandra Barnwell Christmann and their husbands (all named Tom!) got together in Asheville, N.C. in July. They had a rousing time at a restaurant downtown and an Irish pub.

Sally Tucker Lee has a new job at Central Georgia Technical College.

Cathy Oliver had an exciting experience in June on Michael Brown's 15-day tour, "In Search of Elizabethan England." Except for two days and three nights in London, the group spent the rest of their time elsewhere in Britain, exploring castles, estates, magnificent gardens and cathedrals.

Ruth Hyatt Heffron invites classmates to visit her and her husband, John Vernelson, at the Compass Rose Bookstore and Café in Castine, Maine. They can be contacted at www.compassrosebookstore.com. Ruth says they love "this totally new venture," as well as "the beautiful state of Maine." All in all, "Second careers are great!" Her son, Jason, was married to Laurie Cook in March, so Ruth is now an in-law and is happy with that role, too. Laurie and Jason met at Georgetown and survived being apart for two years while Laurie served in the Peace Corps in Africa.

Hope Gazes Grayson is a field director on the Board of Directors of the American Medical Association Alliance. She serves as first vice president and artistic liaison of the Footlight Players in Charleston. Her son, Clay, is in law school at the University of South Carolina; son Peter, at the Medical University of South Carolina; and daughter Athena, a sophomore at Florida State.

Last summer, Janet Pfohl Brooks was in Williamsburg writing curriculum for the Williamsburg Foundation. She attended Bruton Parish Church and heard Mollie LaRoche Douglas preach. Her son, Chuck, was temporarily stationed at Fort Benning, Ga., after graduating from West Point. He joined Carol Crosby Harvey's church and helped with the youth group there. She and her family spent Christmas together on a Caribbean cruise. They were happy to be bonding for a week in anticipation of 2001, when they would be in far-flung places: Chuck in Alaska for three years; Elaine (a junior at Cornell) spending a semester at the University of Sydney, Australia; and son Steve attending Florida Tech in Melbourne, Fla., studying marine biology. Janet and her husband are in Baldwinsville, N.Y., working and paying the bills.

Marilyn Norris Wootton and her husband, David Shivers, have relocated in Kingstree, S.C., where Norris is director of the Williamsburg County Library. Norris most recently supervised learning resources at Griffin Technical College, but says that she had long wanted to get back to the public library environment. David is editor of the Weekly Observer in Hemingway, S.C.

Barbara Kinney has had a job change, becoming the school attendance coordinator for Murray County Schools in Georgia. She writes that schools are combating incredibly poor attendance on all fronts: personal contacts, legal action, as well as changes in policy and procedure. She would like to hear any suggestions to confront this problem successfully.

Martha Cotter Oldham's son Eric is writing his thesis to complete a master's degree in English in May at UNC-Wilmington. Their older son, Charles, finished law school at the University of Georgia last May and is practicing with a firm in the Sanford, N.C., area. She and her husband, Charles, are happy to have him nearby. Charles retired from teaching economics at Fayetteville (N.C.) Community College two years ago and is now a general contractor, building homes in Sanford. Martha has also retired from part-time teaching of math at the local community college to help Charles with his new career and to spend more time with their parents. She still does quite a bit of private math tutoring.

Cathy DuVall Vogel had lunch with Nancy Rhodes McCrummen in Mobile in October, while on a trip to visit husband Steve's mother. After lunch, they took a tour of the Immaculate Conception Cathedral just across the square from the restaurant. They had "a lovely afternoon."

After heading her own public relations agency in Atlanta, Joanne DeLavan Reichardt was lured back into corporate America to become director of external relations for Randstad North America, a position which takes her from Senate offices on Capitol Hill to newsrooms and executive offices around the world.

Tammi DeVore's younger son, Taylor, who began his freshman year at the University of Washington this past fall, enjoys his studies, as well as the view from his dorm window of the Cascades and Mount Washington. Even with her job as director of product marketing for McKesson HBOC, Tammi remains dedicated to working with Canine Companions for Independence and is busy training her second dog.

Susan McLarin Caffery passed the exam certifying her as a licensed professional counselor in Texas. This step allows Susan to have her own private practice in addition to being a school counselor.

Della McMillan continued her work with colleagues in seven East African countries, spending last spring visiting Eritrea, Ethiopia and Kenya. Della, her husband, David, and daughter, Jane, enjoyed a month in Chamonix, France, where her daughter attended a French public school. In conjunction with Africare, Della participated in a three-week trip to Chad and Mali. When not traveling with his wife, David is professor of mathematics at the University of Florida. Della also works for the university in the research area with the anthropology department, and Jane is in second grade.

Susan Landham Carson and Steve's daughter, Cathi, has graduated from UGA magna cum laude with a degree in business administration concentrating in finance. Cathi is a financial analyst for Delta Airlines. Susan's older daughter completed her studies at Auburn in 1999 and is employed by Colgate-Palmolive, in Smyrna, Ga.

Since the reunion in spring, Charlotte Gillis has braved lightning storms, rain, heat, blisters, not to mention port-a-potties, to complete the Avon 3-Day Breast Cancer Walk (60+miles) from Lake Lanier to Piedmont Park. Well done, Charlotte!

In October, Constance "Connie" Bowen Hart had the pleasure of meeting with Susannah Stevens Pitman at her vacation home in New Hampshire for a memorable weekend to rest and refresh. It sounds heavenly.

Knight Webb Upchurch and her husband, Michael, have three children: Mary, who is 14; Richard, 13; and Carolyn, 10. Knight is busy but manages to volunteer at St. Paul's, where Mary and Richard are enrolled, as well as at Austin Elementary, Carolyn's school. They are all good students.

Last fall, the Pittmans enjoyed a weekend in Atlanta, visiting both ASC and Georgia Tech for Leigh's consideration. They were all impressed with the work done on the campus. As Anne Hodges mentioned in her president's letter, the observatory is great and the dining hall (and food), wonderful. Sharon wants to go back to see the completed campus center and library.

Paige Patton Edwards and family are very busy. Paige is an application developer at IBM. Her husband, Wayne, works in marketing at AT&T. Their daughters are active in sports: Lindsey, 15, a cross-country runner; and Lauren, 12, a select soccer enthusiast. Last September, Paige walked 60 miles in the Avon Breast Cancer 3-Day Walk. She found it "an inspiring adventure and an awesome experience." The group passed by the corner of the ASC Campus during the trek from Lake Lanier to Piedmont Park.

Cindy Peters directs enrollment services for the Nicholas School of the Environment at Duke University. Kathryn Deane Chambless is keeping busy after the birth of her second child, Zachary. She reports that her daughter, Abby, is adjusting and is helping out—as much as a 2-year-old can!

Deborah Erb Manigault left the Center for a New American Dream in mid-October to accept a position with the Montgomery County Human Relations Commission. She works to enforce local civil rights laws in Montgomery County, Md., investigating complaints of discrimination in employment, public accommodations, real estate and racial/religious intimidation. Deb is truly enjoying working in the civil rights/justice/peace arena again.

Sarah Napier married Rob Baum in September. Sarah Jewett, Karen McNay Bauerle '92 and Nica Poser Moreau '90 were in attendance. Sarah continues to work on her doctoral degree in education at Harvard while teaching at the Fayerweather Street School in Cambridge.

Kimberly Osias has accepted a reporting and fill-in anchor position with the ABC-affiliate station in Birmingham, Ala.

Louisa Parker Mattozzi is studying and completing research in Italy as a Fulbright scholar. Her husband, Michael, accepted a new position with GlobalOne, a subsidiary of France Telecom. He is a program manager of global contracts, a great opportunity to use his French in conjunction with his business expertise. He will be traveling to Paris while Louisa is working in Italy, so they will be able to visit one another.

Sarah Crane and Scott Mitchell Nichols were married Feb. 5, 2000, in St. Bede's Episcopal Church, St. Petersburg, Fla. In attendance was Leigh Bennett-Conner '92. For their honeymoon, the couple toured Great Britain. They have purchased a home and reside in Madeira Beach, Fla. Sarah is working on her master's degree, playing hand bells with the church and working for Honeywell.

Laura Perry Bates completed the Avon Breast Cancer Walk. It was grueling, but the women she met were amazing. In October, she represented her company by speaking at a conference in Barbados.

Anita Pressley was promoted in her job with the Southern Company. She is in charge of strategic management and contracts for coal purchased for Georgia Power and Savannah Electric. Anita is also working towards a master's degree in theological studies. She went on a retreat at Our Lady of the Angels Monastery and spent five days there with Trappist nuns.

Michele Moses Lackey reports that she and her new husband, Craig, have moved to Dallas, Texas.

Hillary Soper Strong and her family went to Providence, R.I., where her daughter, Katilyn, competed in a cheering competition for New England.

Teresa Ramirez Dore and Greg are busy with their children and their church. They took a trip in November to Baltimore, Md., to visit Greg's grandmother. While there they visited the National Aquarium and stopped at the North Carolina Zoo on the way home.

Wendy Worthy Robertet traveled to Budapest for a conference. She spent a few days in Paris on her way to and from Budapest.

Julianne "Kris" Jones Tenny-Brittian is senior pastor at a congregation on the east side of Seattle. The new pastorate necessitated another move: the third in two and one-half years, the second in eight months. The new home is a lovely one, complete with a hot tub in the back porch and quite conducive to Christmas decorating. Kris is also a member of the third leadership group of the Bethany Project, seeking to initiate and support congregational revitalization through prayer and fellowship. She is co-facilitating the Project's Bethany Fellowship.

Erin Gaston interprets for the State Department. In that capacity she went on a month-long trip with a group of Latin American journalists meeting with the U.S. media. Moreover, she interpreted on the floor of the United Nations' General Assembly and has a photo with Kofi Annan to prove it.

Jennifer "Jenny" Brand Gruber received her professional certification as a senior professional in human resources through the Society for Human Resources Management. The certification involved months of studying followed by a cumulative examination on the body of professional knowledge in human resources. Jenny is a human resources division manager with Intertec Publishing. She and Alan are content on their farm and are the happy "parents" of numerous cows, goats and even a flock of ducks! Now that the testing and studying are over, Jenny is looking forward to spending more time with her Scottie friends and asks classmates to call her if they are ever in the Atlanta/Acworth area.

Katie Pattillo Fisher traveled to Cleveland, Ohio, for the Association of Science and Technology Centers Conference. She presented a workshop on integrating minority youth into science center culture. While in Cleveland, Katie visited the zoo and the science center.

Kim Lamkin Drew's parents and brother moved back to Atlanta.

Jean Wilson Tate spent some time at the Cloisters on Sea Island while she worked at a conference held by the Atlanta Fed in October. Her son, Alex, loved playing in the sand. Also in October, she relaxed at St. Simons Island, and Alex went to his first college football game. Julia Davidson Bellamy and her husband, Dave, visited Jean and her family after Thanksgiving and attended the Georgia/Georgia Tech game in Athens.

Kim Maleski Swaak and her husband, Ewoud, flew to South Africa over the summer to build houses for Habitat for Humanity in Cape Town. They were there for a week and one-half in a township and built two houses. Kim hauled bricks, mixed cement and got blisters and sore muscles. She found South Africa breathtakingly beautiful, despite the hardships experienced by many of its people. She spent Christmas with her family in Tennessee.

Jennifer Burger is surviving the snow in Ann Arbor, where she's doing her internship in dermatology. In September, she visited with her godson, Alex Tate (who gets his good looks from his godmother) and his mother, Jean. She saw Laura Brown Young and her new daughter, Madeline, in October. Then for Christmas she went to Albany to spend that time with her family.

Betty Hammond married her long-time boyfriend on July 29 in Atlanta. Patricia Schopfer Wooldridge (all the way from Montana), Angie Tacker and Staci Catron Sullivan attended the wedding.

Betty's sister, Margaret Hammond Stiglitz '94, and her family were unable to attend. They live in Japan and could not make the trip back. Betty's wedding came after she helped Steve through chemotherapy; he is in full remission.

Meredith Jolly Deen has moved into a new house in Canton, Ga.

Helen Nash manages Coca-Cola's archival programs. Through her work for the company, she went to Sydney, Australia, for the 2000 Olympic Games.

At Thanksgiving, Tonya Smith Grieco (tmgrieco@erols.com) and husband Bill celebrated their first year in their house. She was promoted to intake team leader at United Behavioral Health.

Deborah Watters Adams and her husband, Ken, have bought their first home. They have been busy remodeling the structure built in 1927. Their home in Dallas is open to any members of the Class of '93. Deborah's sister, Ellen Watters, is attending ASC.

Lu Zheng moved into a new house in July. She lives in Ann Arbor, Mich.

AGNES
SCOTT

Davidson Anthropologist Selected Dean of the College

ROSEMARY ZUMWALT CITED FOR 'BROAD INTELLECTUAL PERSPECTIVE'

In choosing Rosemary Lévy Zumwalt as vice president for academic affairs and dean of the college, Agnes Scott College has brought home an intrepid traveler and devoted teacher.

Born in Decatur, Zumwalt was an infant when her family moved to California. She earned her master's and doctorate degrees from the University of California at Berkeley. Since 1983, Zumwalt has served on the faculty of Davidson College in North Carolina, and was the first woman to hold the highest elected faculty position, vice chair pro tem. She begins work at Agnes Scott July 1.

A cultural anthropologist and folklorist, she has researched extensively the role of Sephardic women, culminating in a book written with her husband, Isaac Jack Lévy, titled Ritual Medical Lore of Sephardic Women: Sweetening the Spirits, Healing the Sick.

Zumwalt applauds Agnes Scott's emphasis on global learning, language across the curriculum, and the College's commitment to maintaining a low student-teacher ratio.

"I'm an anthropologist and a folklorist, so the notion of global connections is just part of my orientation," she said. "I think it's crucial in terms of educating young people and keeping ourselves in tune with the world.

"It awakens an appetite for travel and for experience that goes with you throughout life," she said. As a teenager, Zumwalt first dove into world travel as a member of a synchronized swim team touring Europe. As an adult, fieldwork has taken her to Greece, Turkey, Yugoslavia, Israel, Alaska, Sri Lanka and Western Europe. Her favorite destination so far has been India, because the culture is so different from our own.

"It's impossible to react in a neutral fashion to India," she said. "Everything to me in India was so much brighter, smelled stronger—both sweet fragrances, and perhaps not so sweet fragrances if you were there during the torrential downpours and the festival seasons . . . everything was just vivid. I loved that—the vividness and the intensity and the interpersonal relations. People always had time for people, and there was never the rush that we have constantly."

Agnes Scott College President Mary Brown Bullock '66 said Zumwalt's demonstrated scholarship and experience as a faculty leader make her an excellent choice for dean of the college.

"As a folklorist and anthropologist who works with texts, literary and historical traditions, she is inherently interdisciplinary in her teaching and scholarship," Bullock said. "This broad intellectual perspective provides a wonderful foundation for leading the academic programs at Agnes Scott College."

Zumwalt's published work is wide-ranging and she has received several national fellowships, including recognition as a John Simon Guggenheim Fellow and a Mellon Resident Research Fellow. She has also received numerous grants from the National Endowment for the Humanities.

Zumwalt looks forward to seeing how a women's college shapes its students. "I've been very interested about this notion of women finding their voice," she said. "I know that I myself was one of those students who frustrate me now, who sit in the classroom and don't respond—they listen, they take notes. You don't learn about your star students until you've graded the mid-terms, and often they're the ones who don't talk. I think that for many young women, it's really important for them to have a space where they can find their voice and gain a sense of self," she said. She believes the College is reaching that goal, based on her interviews on campus and conversations with alumnae.

"They're remarkable women," she said.

College Breaks Ground on Science Building

FACILITY TO FEATURE ADVANCED TECHNOLOGY

The construction crews and mounds of dirt seen so often on the north side of campus in the last three years have migrated slightly southward, as the College broke ground on its new science building on E. Dougherty Street in March. The College's $36.5-million 115,000-square-foot integrated science building will provide advanced technology and research space in support of Agnes Scott's science program. The March groundbreaking ceremony was held on the site of the tennis courts, which are being relocated to provide space for the science building.

"The new facility will provide 'villages' of specialized facilities for chemistry, biology, physics and psychology as well as many shared facilities where we will regularly come together for interdisciplinary teaching and research," said Sandra Bowden, Dana Professor of Biology and shepherd of the science building project.

The new building will include a suite for electron and light microscopes; an attached greenhouse for ecology, environmental and plant science; learning centers on two floors where students can gather informally; a central atrium open to the top of the building; and spaces where research results can be displayed and discussed.

Construction is expected to be complete in 2003.

JULIA T. SMITH CHAPEL TO BE BUILT NEAR ALSTON CAMPUS CENTER

The Hal and John Smith Family Foundation of Atlanta has announced a gift to provide a freestanding chapel for the College. The Julia T. Smith Chapel will honor Julia Thompson Smith '31, a Phi Beta Kappa English major and former Alumnae Association board member. Mrs. Smith was the wife of Hal Smith; their son is John E. Smith II.

"The trustees of the Hal and John Smith Foundation are very excited and pleased about this gift to Agnes Scott College and the memorial it provides to Julia T. Smith," said John E. Smith II as he announced the news on behalf of his father to a small assembly of former College trustees. Also on hand from Richmond, Va., was Anne Thompson Rose '38, Julia Smith's sister.

The family previously created the Julia Thompson Smith chaplaincy, which provides for an on-campus minister (currently the Rev. Dr. Laura Sugg), and the Smith Chair of Free Enterprise. Hal Smith is a trustee emeritus who joined the Board in 1952. He was chairperson from 1956 to 1973 and continued as a trustee until 1977. John Smith is also a former trustee.

John Smith said his father believes the promise of a chapel in Mrs. Smith's honor continues the legacy of faith for which she was known.

"The Smith family's gift will provide a place of beauty, reflection and worship for generations of students to come," said President Mary Brown Bullock '66. "I applaud their faith and generosity."

The College's former place of worship, Thatcher Chapel, was housed within the old campus center that was demolished in 1999 to make room for the new Alston Campus Center. Planning for the new chapel (to be located near the new campus center and the amphitheatre) has already begun. The College is in the process of selecting an architectural firm and the chapel is expected to be completed in 2003.

The Power of Memory

In April, I attended my sixth reunion as president of Agnes Scott College, and celebrated once again with my own class, the class of 1966. The weather was spectacular, and the new buildings and renovated landscape sparkled. The new schedule introduced by the Alumnae Association was a huge success, featuring an outstanding alumnae panel on "Ethical Dilemmas in a High Tech World," a panel of both alumnae and student writers on Friday afternoon, and even a mimosa brunch on Saturday morning! One of the featured writers was Helen Blackshear '31, Alabama Poet Laureate, celebrating her 70th reunion.

For those of you who could not attend, I present a poem she read, written long ago, "Reunion" (from her book Along Alabama Roads, 1982):

Go back? To what reunion would I go
When I have with me all that I hold dear
Of college days? The slow growth of each year
Is part of me. The blue, soft glow
Of lamps on misty nights, the rich, low Chords of benediction—they are near Me often. And my friends? I still can hear Their voices, feel their hands, and see them. Oh,
How can you think to see them now would bring Them closer, or can ever bring again
Those long, long talks, that trembling joy in Spring

The bitter hurt, the tramping in the rain, World-saving visions? None of these remain.
There's no reunion but remembering.

Remembering is very much what Agnes Scott reunions are all about. And, although Helen's poem captures the inner persistence of Agnes Scott memories, the impossibility of replicating our college years, I have seen the collective power of communal memory.

Watching generations of alumnae return to this hallowed place, I have witnessed Gaines Chapel serve as the touchstone of transformative memory, transformative friendships and transformative education. It is there that we remember together the metamorphosis of our early adult personal identities—the awkwardness, the aspirations, the friendships, the intensity, the excitement of learning, and yes, the fear of failure. It is on the occasion of these reunions—our first, our 10th, 25th, 50th—that we benchmark our lives—marriages, births, advanced degrees, jobs, aging parents, illness and deaths. We do so within the communal friendship of those who have grown apace with us.

It is then that we are reminded of our youthful "world-changing visions." And are encouraged, once again, to continue to seek, and often find, a wellspring of personal courage and conviction to continue our multiple personal re-inventions, with the support and in the safety of Agnes Scott's "sheltering arms." And we return renewed to our families, our professions and our communities, and once again set about our daily lives. We will continue not only our own transformative process, but the myriad ways in which we,
as women, transform others.

Such is the power of an Agnes Scott College education and of an Agnes Scott College reunion.

NEWS BRIEFS

Media Turn to Bullock for China Commentary

During a tense 11 days in April when China detained an American navy crew, President Mary Brown Bullock '66 appeared often on national news as an expert on Asian history, culture and politics.

Bullock's appearances include two guest slots on NBC's "Today," an interview with Natalie Allen on "CNN Live Today," a spot on MSNBC's "Hardball" with Chris Matthews, and several appearances on CNN's news reports.

The spy plane incident involved a collision between an American surveillance plane and a Chinese fighter jet. Bullock fielded questions ranging from how the incident would affect China's admission to the World Trade Organization to how diplomacy works to resolve conflict with the least amount of damage.

ASC Junior Named Goldwater Scholar

A deline Ashmore '02 of Portsmouth, R.I., was named one of only seven Georgia college students in 2001 to receive a Barry M. Goldwater Scholarship.

Ashmore has just completed her junior year at Agnes Scott College majoring in biochemistry and molecular biology. She intends to pursue a doctorate in evolutionary biology and conduct research on the evolution of disease. She is Agnes Scott's fourth Goldwater scholar, with the most recent awards given to two students in the 1998-1999 academic year.

Since the foundation was established in 1986 to honor the Republican senator from Arizona, the Goldwater awards have promoted study in mathematics, science and engineering. This year, 302 students from a field of 1164 were selected on the basis of academic merit; the pool included nominations from more than 500 colleges. The scholarship carries an award of up to $7,500 per year.

Goldwater Scholars typically go on to even greater academic accomplishments. In the past eight years, 31 have been selected as Rhodes Scholars and 25 have been awarded Marshall Scholarships. Other awards received by these students include the Fulbright and National Science Foundation Fellowships.

ASC Student Involved in Astronomical Discovery

Because of her involvement in a remarkable fluke discovery last summer, Agnes Scott rising senior Ashley Zauderer '02 spent this year's spring break at the Very Large Array (VLA), a Y-shaped collection of giant radio telescopes in Socorro, N.M. (where parts of the 1997 Jodie Foster movie Contact were filmed).

Zauderer was part of a 14-student team project at the Very Large Array to observe a brown dwarf, an object that is something between a star and a planet. Long suspected to exist, the first brown dwarf was not visually identified until 1995. The student study marked the first time one has been identified by radio emission.

The college team of mostly undergraduates caught a glimpse of something no one expected: a flare of radio light, suggesting that brown dwarfs behave very differently than previously thought. The research paper discussing the phenomenon was published in the science journal Nature in March.

"This blows all the theories out about what's expected in brown dwarfs," Zauderer said. With only three hours of viewing time allotted, students weren't expecting major findings. They were just learning about the method and how to process what they gathered. At first they thought they had made a mistake in processing the data, Zauderer said.

"The radio emission these students discovered coming from this brown dwarf is 10,000 times stronger than anyone expected," said astronomer Dale Frail, co-author of the Nature research paper. "This student project is going to open up a whole new area of research for the VLA."

SCAD Dedicates Pepe Hall

The Savannah College of Art and Design (SCAD) dedicated Pepe Hall in April in honor of Charles W. and Marie H. Pepe. Mrs. Pepe is an Agnes Scott professor emerita of art, having taught at the College from 1951 to 1986. She was the first Charles A. Dana Professor at the College and served as chair of the art department.

Mr. and Mrs. Pepe both have served as trustees on the SCAD board.

Pepe Hall is a two-story Mediterranean Revival-style building that houses art history and architectural history classrooms.

The "Ginny Fund"

The investments class at Agnes Scott College is fortunate to have some "real money" at its disposal to invest in the market. In 1996, Carl Beck established a fund for the College to be used as a teaching tool for Economics 210 students. The gift was in honor of his late wife, Virginia Beck, and is named the "Ginny Fund." Although the fund performed extremely well during its first three years, this year was a tough one for the Ginny Fund. From the end of April 2000 to end of April 2001, the fund lost approximately 6 percent of its value. The good news is that this performance was better than that of the S&P 500, which lost 14 percent. "Mr. Beck's generous gift has been a wonderful teaching tool," said Rosemary Cunningham, professor of economics.

Board Elects Two New Trustees

J. Phillips Noble Jr. and Mildred L. Petty '61 were elected to serve on the Board of Trustees at the Board's May meeting. Noble is a political and public affairs consultant and founder of PoliticsOnline, the premier international company providing fundraising and Internet tools for politics. Petty is a community volunteer and former assistant dean of the faculty and instructor in history at the College.

Board Chairperson Joseph R. Gladden Jr., J. Wallace Daniel, Kathleen B. Ashe '68 and Sally A. Skardon '70 were re-elected to new terms of service on the Board.

By special resolutions, the Board expressed gratitude to George S. Branch, Kay L. Krill '77 and Susan C. Lowance '55, whose terms conclude June 30, and to W.G. (Guy) Tittle, who ended active service on the Board earlier this year.

162 Graduate at 112th Commencement

FORMER FIRST LADY OF EGYPT ADDRESSES CLASS OF 2001

Agnes Scott College awarded 154 baccalaureate degrees and eight diplomas for master of arts in teaching secondary English at its 112th commencement exercises in May. Of the bachelor's graduates, eight were summa cum laude, 19 were designated magna cum laude and another 24 received cum laude recognition. Seven students graduated with honor.

Jehan Sadat, widow of former Egyptian President Anwar Sadat, addressed graduates, family and friends in an outdoor ceremony held beneath Presser Quadrangle's spreading magnolias.

Sadat has been an advocate of women's rights to an education, to working outside the home and to political participation. She established the Talla Society, a women's emancipation movement, and is a scholar of Arabic literature. She is a professor at the University of Maryland.

Plans for the Class of 2001 include: Peace Corps duty in Uzbekistan, law school, medical school and graduate studies in public policy, architecture, education, English and Middle Eastern studies. Others will begin careers in journalism, finance, architecture and teaching. Graduates have accepted positions at the U.S. Department of Justice, Salomon Smith Barney, a regional hospital, and corporations in Belgium and Germany, among others.

Sadat Tells Graduates of the Importance of Faith

PEACE ACCORD BETWEEN ISRAEL AND EGYPT CITED

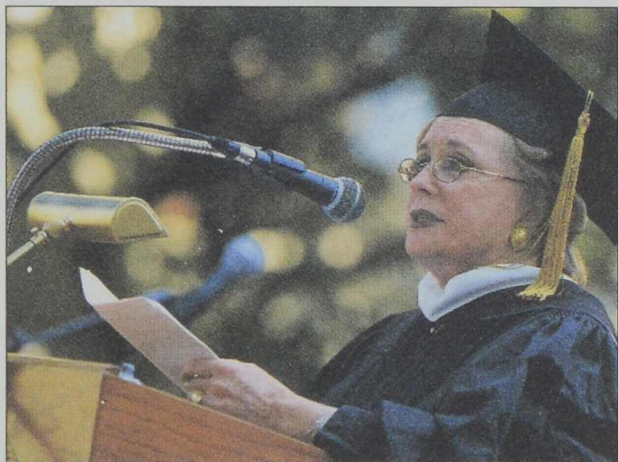

In her address to the Class of 2001, Jehan Sadat said intelligence is not a virtue until guided by faith and courage.

"Knowledge is not in short supply," she said. "But knowledge without faith is an empty vessel—without direction, without purpose." Sadat emphasized the importance of family and principle—and parents' roles in the years leading to commencement day. "They are the foundations of who you are and what you will become."

"Conviction can change the course of history," Sadat said, holding up the examples of Gandhi, Nelson Mandela, Mother Teresa, Martin Luther King Jr., and her husband, Anwar Sadat, who was assassinated in 1981. His faith that peace between Israel and Egypt was possible, "when centuries of hatred had thrust us into decades of war," was key to the eventual accord, she said. She underscored the importance of maintaining conviction in the face of doubt as did her late husband during his work for peace in the Middle East.

Now an associate scholar at the University of Maryland, Madame Sadat worked to establish the Anwar Sadat Chair for Development and Peace, endowed in 1997.

As a scholar who obtained three degrees after the age of 40, Sadat applauded ASC founder George Washington Scott as "one man whose mother taught him the value of an educated woman."

Scott Wins Vulcan Award

POLITICAL SCIENTIST HONORED FOR EXCELLENCE IN TEACHING

Catherine Scott, professor of political science, was honored with the Vulcan Company's Excellence in Teaching award at Agnes Scott commencement exercises May 12.

Scott is an authoritative writer and respected lecturer in her field, primarily on the subjects of gender studies and the politics of third world countries. She joined the Agnes Scott faculty in 1984 and has served as chair of the Department of Political Science, Sociology and Anthropology and advisor for Washington Semester students. She spent her 1999-2000 sabbatical in South Africa as a Fulbright scholar.

In nominations, colleagues wrote that they considered Scott such a dynamic presence they initially feared she might overpower students. But as one professor wrote, "What makes her a stellar teacher are her energy and humor. She is tough, rigorous and demanding. But students love her classes—in spite of it or because of it."

Scott is the second consecutive political science professor to be honored with the Vulcan award. Colleague Gus Cochran received the honor last year.

Legacy to the 24th Degree

FORSYTHE '01 LATEST OF MANY FAMILY MEMBERS TO GRADUATE FROM ASC

The word "legacy" is not taken lightly in the family of Kathryn Forsythe '01. Forsythe can name sister, mother, grandmother, cousins and aunts among those she has followed as Agnes Scott students.

And as if being the 24th member of her family to attend Agnes Scott isn't enough to constitute an impressive relationship with the College, Forsythe is connected to Agnes Scott through two other significant relatives: great grandfather James Ross McCain, president from 1923 to 1951; and great uncle Paul McCain, former vice president of development.

Forsythe's Presbyterian forebears, including Bessie Evelyn Young Brown, Susan Young Egan and Anna Young, began attending Agnes Scott when it was but an institute and not yet a college.

Despite her family's legacy, Forsythe didn't feel any pressure to attend the College or even to apply. "I was looking at Bryn Mawr, and my mother said, 'If you're going to look at a women's college, you should check out some others as well,'" Forsythe said. "I decided to apply to Agnes Scott, and when I visited for a scholar's weekend, I just fell in love with the students, the atmosphere and everything about Agnes Scott. I just knew it was the school for me."

After graduation this spring, Forsythe, a self-designed medieval studies major, plans to pursue Celtic studies at the University of Glasgow, a goal prompted by a year in Scotland through the College's study abroad program.

Alumna Assists in Honduras

ALLAN '57 HELPS REBUILD AFTER HURRICANE MITCH

Retirement for Elizabeth Ansley Allan '57 has been anything but sedentary.

Since retiring from teaching in 1999, Allan, who grew up in the shadow of the Agnes Scott campus and once served as a campus guide for Robert Frost, has renewed her interest in writing and, along with a friend from Decatur, is on the verge of publishing a volume of poetry. In addition, she and her husband, Frank, have established The Work of Our Hands Inc., a nonprofit art education venture that Frank envisioned as he began to make plans for his retirement as the bishop of the Episcopal Diocese of Atlanta.

But Allan has often traveled away from her Atlanta home in her retirement activities. Her travels have included a relief effort in Honduras in the aftermath of Hurricane Mitch.

In an article Allan wrote for DIALOG, the newspaper for the Episcopalian Diocese of Atlanta, she notes: "I was one of the lucky ones to make the first 'all-spouses-of-bishops' team to help build houses as part of the Faith, Hope, and Joy: a Project For Living undertaking of The Presiding Bishop's Fund for World Relief (PBFWR)."

Hurricane Mitch hit Central America in November 1998, and Honduras was especially hard hit. "Mitch destroyed 35 percent of the homes, killed 9,000 persons, and left 8,000 more still missing," Allan said. "The world was horrified and responded generously. Along with other international charitable organizations, the PBFWR had a larger than usual sum of money to meet the emergency and to help with rebuilding. The challenge was to make the wisest decision about how to take advantage of this opportunity not only to provide immediate relief and bring order out of chaos, but also to assist Honduras in developing a lasting infrastructure for a stronger future."

Allan's involvement with the project continues. "Just a couple of weeks ago I listened to the report of a group of parishioners from The Episcopal Church of the Epiphany in Decatur tell of its experience in March with that same project, which has come so far in a year. They were kind enough to give me credit for encouraging them to make the trip when I spoke twice to them about my experience last year."

Renewing Old Acquaintances

What is Alumnae Weekend? A time to renew friendships with classmates. A chance to visit the campus to see what is the same and what has changed. A time to remember days of youth (recent or long ago). It is all these things, and for me one more. It is a celebration of Agnes Scott alumnae and our contributions to the College, our families, our communities and our world.

Once a year the College and the Alumnae Association host this three-day program, which is open to all alumnae. Planning begins almost a year in advance. We try to have a weekend that feeds your mind, your spirit and your soul—one that gives each of us the opportunity to reconnect with the College. Why should you come back to Decatur?

To stimulate and challenge minds. On Friday, the first day of Alumnae Weekend, we feature what we have come to call "brain food." This year we heard five of our alumnae participate in a symposium titled "Ethical Dilemmas in a High Tech World." Later we continued with an authors' roundtable, featuring alumnae authors from reunion classes in the 1930s, 1940s and 1950s. During each session, ASC alumnae in the audience joined in the discussion.

To celebrate Agnes Scott women. At a luncheon on Friday, we honored our four Outstanding Alumnae Award recipients. Here we had the opportunity to learn about their lives and to hear them speak about their experiences. At the Anna Young Club dinner on Friday evening, the members of the 50-year reunion class, the class of 1951, were inducted into the Anna Young Club. Saturday, we celebrated the reunion classes, their memories of days at Agnes Scott, their financial contributions to the College and their participation in Alumnae Weekend. President Bullock spoke to alumnae about the College, both recent achievements and future goals.

To renew old friendships and relive college days. At class meetings on Saturday morning, reunion classes elected class officers and discussed final plans for class parties held later that evening. After having their reunion picture made on the steps of Main, they continued their fun at a Mimosa Brunch. Saturday afternoon featured a Sky's the Limit Festival for alumnae and their families.

To feed the spirit and the soul. The weekend concluded Sunday with a worship service and a brunch in the newly landscaped Alumnae Garden. The Rev. Dr. Laura S. Sugg, the Julia Thompson Smith Chaplain for the College, and clergy from two of the reunion classes led the worship service.

By the time you read this, we will be well on our way to creating Alumnae Weekend for April 26-28, 2002. Some things will change, and others will stay the same. Why not plan to attend part or all of the activities on campus? If it's not your "official" reunion year, ask a friend or two to accompany you to the events. It's time to renew your acquaintance with an old friend: the Agnes Scott College campus and community.

Interpreting Success

GASTON '90 FINDS NICHE IN TRANSLATION WORK

For Erin Gaston '90, realizing she could make a living at something she truly enjoyed came as a complete surprise.

An international relations major at Agnes Scott, Gaston did some volunteer interpreting while earning a master's in Spanish literature in Colorado and found that she enjoyed it. "I really just fell into it because it was fun, not because I ever dreamed I could make a living at it," she says.

Relocating to Washington, D.C., led to a "dream job" as a translator/interpreter with the Justice Department. After a two-year stint in Costa Rica with the Peace Corps and a master's degree in translation/interpretation from the Monterey Institute, Gaston is now an interpreter for the district courts in Denver. Her work allows for some freelance assignments for the U.S. Department of State, including special State Department conferences with high-profile people.

In November, Gaston experienced an "interpreter's dream"—an opportunity to interpret on the floor of the United Nations General Assembly room. Gaston met U.N. Secretary General Kofi Annan and introduced him to visitors. She also interpreted for officials from Panama at the inauguration of George W. Bush.

New Alumnae Travel Program

LITERARY LANDSCAPES OF IRELAND

MAY 17-27, 2002

Program Fee $3095

From William Butler Yeats' converted Norman castle home, Thoor Ballylee, to the Belfast hillside profile of a giant's face that inspired Gulliver's Travels, the landscapes of Ireland have given birth to legend and literature. The May 2002 Agnes Scott College alumnae trip to the Republic of Ireland and Northern Ireland will explore some of these places, taking you to castles and coastlines, along city streets and country roads, and inside writers' homes and haunts. While the itinerary will emphasize places with literary associations, the trip also offers a general introduction to Ireland's history and culture. Planned tours, activities and meals are mixed with liberal amounts of free time for exploring or dining on your own. Two great cities and two lively provincial towns have been selected—Dublin and Belfast, Galway and Derry/London-derry—as our stopping places on the tour, but we will spend plenty of time visiting the rural landscapes as well.

For a complete registration packet, contact the alumnae office, (404)471-6323 or alumoffice@agnesscott.edu.

CHINA ITINERARY

MAY 16-JUNE 1, 2002

Led by: Ayse Carden, professor of psychology and Harry Wistrand, professor/chair of biology

In May 2000, 18 Agnes Scott students traveled to China to become acquainted with Chinese science, history and culture. Their trip is highlighted in the Fall 2000 Alumnae Magazine (www.agnesscott.edu/aas/news/alumnae_mag/falloo/index). This tour recreates some of the highlights of the students' experiences, including lectures from Chinese scholars at leading universities on topics such as U.S.-China relations. Focal points of this excursion are Hong Kong, Shanghai and Beijing. These provide easy access to many of the historic sights of China, including the Forbidden City, Tiananmen Square, the Great Wall, as well as the gardens and silk factories of Suzhou. Our hotels are in convenient areas of each city, and ample free time will allow for some independent exploration. An optional extension to Guilin or Xi'an will be offered.

For a complete registration packet, contact the alumnae office, (404)471-6323 or alumoffice@agnesscott.edu.

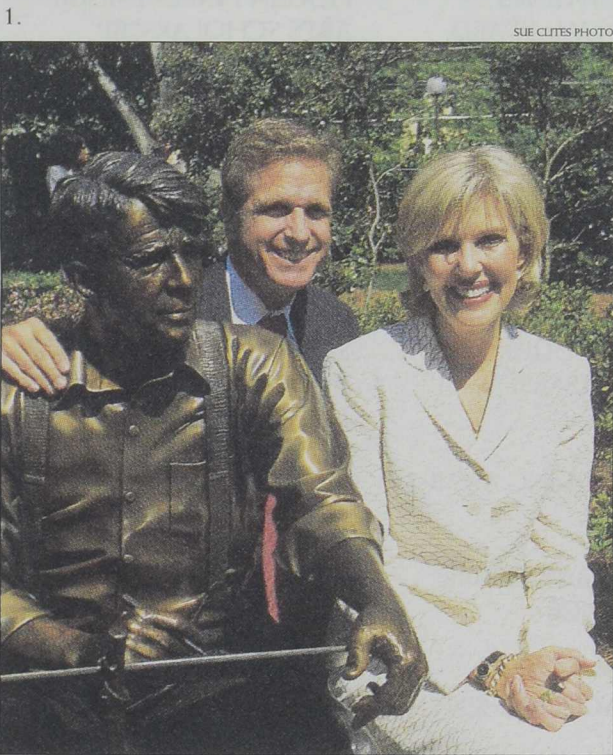

Alumnae Weekend 2001

LOOKING FORWARD—The Alumnae Weekend theme of "Looking Forward" aptly described the anticipation of alumnae, meeting old friends and enjoying the newly renovated campus. 1) The Hub Sing tradition was revived this year in the Hub of the new Alston Campus Center. The event was dedicated to the memory of Susan Landrum '66, who died in February. 2) Bertie Bond '53 and Kate McKemie enjoy the new bench donated by the Class of 1932. The bench is situated opposite the new statue of Robert Frost in the Alumnae Garden. Bond and McKemie, along with the late Kay Manuel, were honored by the dedication of the Camellia Garden in their names. 3) Susan Gamble Smathers '75 and Bruce A. Smathers donated the statue of Robert Frost recently installed in the Alumnae Garden. 4) Alumnae get reacquainted and meet new family members. 5) The annual President's Gala was held in Letitia Pate Evans Hall. 6) Alumnae enjoy the new seating area and landscaping in front of McCain Library.

ARTS

Calvert Johnson, professor of music, edited an arrangement for two pianos of Amélie-Julie Candeille's Concerto Pour le Forte Piano ou Clavecin, op. 2, and Arias from Catherine, ou la Belle Fermière (Hildegard Publishing Company).

Kel Keller, instructor in art, was selected to teach photography at the University of Georgia's program in Cortona, Italy, during spring semester 2002. Keller was also one of four photographers chosen for The Contemporary Art Center's spring studio tours and debuted new work including the large-scale "A Symphony for Harry Callahan."

Tracey E.W. Laird, assistant professor of music, was chosen for the Governor's Teaching Fellows program in May at the Institute of Higher Education, University of Georgia.

Theodore K. Mathews, professor of music, was program chair for the conference of the Georgia Association of Music Theorists at Clayton College and State University in April and presided over four papers addressing the topic of "Bridges into the Twentieth Century."

Kay Paulsen, artist affiliate, contributed to an Internet-based lesson plan on appropriate musical form for sixth through ninth grade students. The Web site, <http://www.finermusic.com>, is designed as a resource for teachers.

Donna Sadler, associate professor of art, presented a paper titled "When Crozier Meets Sceptre in the Iconographic Program of Reims Cathedral" at the meeting of the Medieval Academy of America in March in Tempe, Ariz.

Sunny Saunders, artist affiliate, went on a 22-day concert tour of Taiwan with the Hollywood Festival Orchestra in December. Saunders, on the violin, gave a concert in each province of the country.

Lyn Schenbeck, visiting associate professor of music, presented a paper titled "A Study of Student-Community Orchestras in the United States and Canada" at the Georgia Music Educators Association Conference in Savannah in January. The paper was written with the help of research scholar Rebecca Jones. Schenbeck was also given the Faculty Award of the Office of Career Planning's Career Initiative Awards for her diligence in locating internships for students.

David S. Thompson, associate professor of theatre, published "Going to Broadway (or Your Favorite Theatre Festival). . . and Getting Someone Else to Foot the Bill" in the winter 2001 edition of Southern Theatre. He also was listed in columnist/editorial board member of the Kansas City Star's Bill Tammeus' nationally syndicated list of people producing the best quotes of 2000 for a quote taken from Thompson's article titled "Politics or Theatre," which was picked up by the New York Times News Service in February 2000.

D. Patton White, assistant to the director of dance, served on the Dance Grants Panel for the Atlanta Bureau of Cultural Affairs for the 2001 grant cycle. He also presented a work-in-progress showing of "Streetscapes," a new dance/theatre piece. The piece was presented at the Performing Arts Studio on the Emory Campus in December.

HUMANITIES

Chris Ames, Charles A. Dana Professor of English, presented his paper titled "Cutting on Emotion: Narrative Juxtaposition and Character in Robert Altman's Short Cuts" at the 26th annual Conference on Literature and Film at Florida State University in February. He also published a review of The Player by Robert Altman in "Portals: A Special Issue of the On-line Cinema Journal Scope" in March.

Julia De Pree, assistant professor of French, gave a presentation at Decatur Presbyterian Church in February. Her topic, "Religion in a Postmodern World," focused on postmodern thought as a critique of Enlightenment ideals.

Violet Johnson, associate professor of history, published "Relentless Ex-Colonials and Militant Immigrants: the Case of Boston's West Indian Immigrants, 1910-1950" in The Civil Rights Movement Revisited: Critical Perspectives on the Struggle for Racial Equality in the United States, Patrick B. Miller, Therese Frey Steffen and Elizabeth Schafer-Wunsche, eds. Johnson also presented a paper, "Racial Frontiers in Jamaica's Nonracial Nationhood: Understanding Race and Nation Through the Eyes of Jamaicans Abroad," at the conference of the Collegium for African American Research in Sardinia, Italy.

Waqas Ahmad Khwaja, visiting assistant professor of English, was a featured participant in "The South Asian Diaspora in the Arts," a roundtable discussion centering on issues pertaining to diasporic writers and artists of South Asian origin. An edited script of the discussion was published in March.

Sally MacEwen, associate professor of classical languages and literatures, presented "Beyond Joseph Campbell: a Cross-Cultural Study of Heroes in Film and Greek Tragedy" at the Dean's Colloquium Dinner at Agnes Scott College in April.

Rafael Ocasio, associate professor of Spanish, published his paper titled "Judith Ortiz Cofer's The Latin Deli" in U.S. Latino Literature: A Critical Guide for Students and Teachers (Harold Augenbraum and Margarite Fernández Olmos, eds., Greenwood Press).

Richard Parry, Fuller E. Callaway Professor of Philosophy, was a visiting fellow in the philosophy department of Princeton University during the fall semester. In addition, his article "Characteristics, Paradigms, and Forms in Plato's Middle Dialogues" was published in Apeiron, a journal devoted to publishing articles in ancient Greek philosophy.

Margaret W. Pepperdene, professor emerita of English, received the Phebe and Zephaniah Swift Moore Teaching Award from Amherst College. She was chosen as an award winner from nominations submitted by graduating seniors. A committee of seniors, faculty and staff evaluated the nominees.

Régine Reynolds-Cornell, professor emerita of French, published a review of Sans autre guide, Mélanges de littérature française de la Renaissance offerts à Marcel Tetel (réunis par Ph. Desan, L. Krizman, R. La Charité, M. Simonin, Paris, Klincksieck, 1999, 272 p.) in Extrait de la Bibliothèque D'Humanisme et Renaissance, Geneva, Switzerland in June.

Michael Schlig, assistant professor of Spanish, presented a paper at the IX Congreso de la Asociación Española de Semiótica in November in Valencia, Spain. The paper, "La Pintura, la Fotografía y la Mirada Masculina en El Profesor Inútil de Benjamin Jarnés," deals with Jarnés' novel and the portrayal of women in the arts.

Willie Tolliver, assistant professor of English, published a book titled Henry James as a Biographer: A Self Among Others (Garland Publishing, 2000).

Ingrid Wieshofer, professor of German, was selected to participate in the Governor's Teaching Fellows program on instructional technology and pedagogical issues in teaching and learning at the Institute of Higher Education, University of Georgia.

Isa Williams, director of The Atlanta Semester, was elected to the National Women's Studies Association Governing Council.

SCIENCE AND MATHEMATICS

Chris De Pree, assistant professor of astronomy, received an American Astronomical Society Small Research Grant in January. The grant will fund his research, travel, publication and supply expenses as well as a new Linux workstation for his work with Ionized Gas Velocities of the Hypercompact HII Regions in W49. De Pree also co-authored three published papers: "Hot Cores in W49N and the Timescale for Hot Core Evolution" in The Astrophysical

Trustees Approve Faculty Appointments

The Agnes Scott College Board of Trustees granted tenure to Phil Gibson, assistant professor of biology, and David Thompson, associate professor of theatre, at its May meeting. Gibson was also promoted to the rank of associate professor. The Board also re-appointed Jennifer Lucas, assistant professor of psychology; Michael Lynn, assistant professor of history; Michael Schlig, assistant professor of Spanish; and Feng Xu, assistant professor of political science.

The Board approved the tenure-track appointment of five faculty members: Mary Cain, assistant professor of history; Waqas Khwaja, assistant professor of English; Hong Qu, assistant professor of religious studies; Edward Sayre, assistant professor of economics; and Edward Tilson, assistant professor of French.

Journal, and "VLA High Sensitivity ⁴He Imaging of Galactic HII Regions" and "WSRT and VLA Observations of the 6cm and 2cm Lines of H₂CO in the Direction of W58 C1 (ON3) and W58 C2" in The Astronomical Journal.

Robert A. Leslie, associate professor of mathematics, presented a paper titled "Introductory Statistics with an International Travel Lab Component in Nicaragua" at the January joint meeting of the American Mathematical Society and the Mathematical Association of America.

Myrtle Lewin, professor of mathematics, presented a paper titled "The Transition from Arithmetic to Algebra: Some Thoughts Gleaned from Euclid" at the spring meeting of the southeastern section of the Mathematical Association of America in Montgomery, Ala., in March.

Ruth Riter, assistant professor of chemistry, co-authored a book chapter titled "Dynamics of Polar Solvent Motion, at Liquid Interfaces" in Liquid Interfaces in Chemical, Biological, Pharmaceutical Applications (Marcel Dekker, ed.). The chapter reviews the current experimental research on the motion of polar solvents that effects many chemical processes at liquid interfaces.

T. Leon Venable, associate professor of chemistry, co-authored a biographical article on Marie S. Curie in the Macmillan Encyclopedia of Energy.

SOCIAL SCIENCES

Mary Katherine Crabb, visiting instructor in anthropology, was awarded the Marjorie Shostak Award for Ethnographic Writing from the Emory University Department of Anthropology in May. Crabb also had her article "The Political Economy of Caudillismo" published in the 10th edition of Cuban Communism, Irving Louis Horowitz and Jaimie Suchlicki, eds.

Gus Cochran, professor of political science, published Democracy Heading South: National Politics in the Shadow of Dixie in February (University of Kansas Press). (A review by Constance Curry '55 is in the Spring/Summer issue of the Agnes Scott Alumnae Magazine.)

Rosemary Cunningham, professor of economics, received an $8,400 grant from the Kauffman Center for Entrepreneurial Leadership to continue the Kauffman Internship Program for Women Entrepreneurs for 2001-02. The grant will place 12 students in internships with women entrepreneurs.

George Redmond, visiting associate professor of economics, was named a Sam M. Walton Free Enterprise Fellow for the Students in Free Enterprise Team at the College.

STAFF AND ADMINISTRATION

Stephanie Balmer, associate vice president for enrollment/director of admission, gave presentations at five college admission workshops in January and February, and was named to the National Association for College Admission Counseling's Ad Hoc Committee on Enrollment Management.

Jennifer Lund, director of international education, received an invitation to serve on the College Board of Advisors of the American Institute for Foreign Study for a three-year term beginning in January. She also published part of her evaluation of her spring 2000 Fulbright Seminar for U.S. Administrators. The title of the reflection is "Cranes: The Symbol of Germany," and is published along with three of her pictures in the newsmagazine of the German-American Fulbright Association.

Margaret Shirley, personal counselor, was honored in October by an award in her name by the Return-to-College Student Organization. The Margaret Shirley Return to College Student Spirit Award will be presented every year on Awards Day to a return-to-college student.

Don't Forget the Chocolate

Edmund Sheehey

Following are excerpts from the Baccalaureate sermon of Edmund Sheehey, outgoing vice president for academic affairs and dean of the college.

I want to dwell for a few moments on the gift of life that God has given us. I'm relying on the perspective of Gabriel Garcia Marquez, author of One Hundred Years of Solitude, winner of the Nobel Prize for literature. Seriously ill and realizing he doesn't have much longer to live, he sent a letter of farewell to a circle of friends on what he would do if God gave him an extension of his life, and what he would do if he were in their position or in our position.

The gist of his letter is that he would depart radically from the conventional pursuit of happiness.

A Genius Bids Farewell, by Gabriel Garcia Marquez

If for an instant God were to forget that I am rag doll and gifted me with a piece of life, possibly I wouldn't say all that I think, but rather I would think of all that I say. I would value things, not for their worth but for what they mean. I would sleep little, dream more, understanding that for each minute we close our eyes we lose 60 seconds of light. I would walk when others hold back, I would wake when others sleep. I would listen when others talk, and how I would enjoy a good chocolate ice cream!

If God were to give me a piece of life, I would dress simply, throw myself face first into the sun, baring not only my body but also my soul. My God, if I could have a heart, I would write my hate on ice, and wait for the sun to show. Over the stars I would paint with a Van Gogh dream a Benedetti poem, and a Serrat song would be the serenade I'd offer to the moon. With my tears I would water roses, to feel the pain of their thorns, and the red kiss of their petals . . .

My God, if I had a piece of life . . . I wouldn't let a single day pass without telling the people I love that I love them. I would convince each woman and each man that they are my favorites, and I would live in love with love. I would show men how very wrong they are to think that they cease to be in love when they grow old, not knowing that they grow old when they cease to be in love! To a child I would give wings, but I would let him learn to fly on his own. I would teach the old that death does not come with old age, but with forgetting.

So much have I learned from you, my friends . . .

I have learned that everyone wants to live on the peak of the mountain, without knowing that real happiness is in how it is scaled. I have learned that when a newborn child squeezes for the first time with his tiny fist his father's finger, he has him trapped forever. I have learned that a man has the right to look down on another only when he has to help the other get to his feet. From you I could have learned so many other things, but in truth they won't be of much use, for when they put me in this suitcase, unhappily shall I be dying.

We are rag dolls that God has miraculously gifted with a piece of life. Let us think deeply, listen carefully, seek the truth, banish fear and hate, and with complete abandonment give ourselves to our immense capacity to love. If you should be so lucky, hold your finger out to your new newborn child to be trapped forever by love.

And, by all means, don't forget the chocolate ice cream.

Mary Virginia Allen had a slight stroke on Nov. 30. She is recovering well and by the time this news is published should have moved to Summerville, S.C.

As a gift to her far-flung family, Betty Lou Houck Smith hosted a reunion on Dec. 23, 2000. With over 40 present, it was quite an aggregation of children, grandchildren, great-grandchildren and in-laws. Betty Lou has lost count of the greats but estimates the number as 12 or 13 (with more on the way). Cousins greeted cousins they had never met, as family ties were renewed and strengthened. Betty greeted family members from London, Bulgaria, Wyoming, California, North Dakota, Connecticut, New Jersey and Georgia. All told, it was a "bash."

Pensacola, FL 32514-1629

Katherine Bishop Oxford enjoys living in and keeping up her home in Augusta, Ga. She claims the best sons and daughters-in-law "under the sun." One son and family live in Atlanta; another, in Augusta; and the third, in Dallas, Texas. The families have regular reunions at the Texas ranch. Katherine takes part in church activities, plays the piano and organ, reads, plays bridge and follows the activities of 11 grandchildren, ages 10-29.

Ernelle Blair Fife serves on church committees; she was an elder for several years. She is an active Garden Club member. During the past year, she spent a week with her daughter in Highlands, N.C., and another week with her in Galveston, Texas, where Ernelle Jr. delivered a paper to the International Seminar for English Professors. Ernelle Sr. spent three and a half weeks in San Jose, Calif., with son Alex. Her son, James, who works with the Educational Training Service in Collegeville, Pa., gets to Avondale Estates often for a visit.

Mary Cornely Dwight's husband, Kennedy, died last fall. Mary is now in a nursing home near her daughter, Patsi Sheets, who sees her several times a week.

Sara Frances Estes, her sister Jane Estes '37 and Mollie Merrick '57 had a pleasant excursion to north Georgia at the peak of fall colors. The class is grateful for the work Sara Frances does as fund chair.

Sara Cureton Prowell lives in her home in Fairburn, Ga., and regrets that health problems prevented her from attending the class reunion.

Lita Goss Conrad and Bill have moved from Peachtree

Road to a "grandparents' apartment" in the home of their daughter in Lilburn, Ga.

Helen Handte Morse's husband of 63 years, Navy Captain John H. Morse, was buried with full military honors in Arlington National Cemetery last year. All members of her remarkable family were there with their spouses: sons John and Peter and daughter Joan, eight grandchildren and two great-grandchildren. Helen has moved from her home of 23 years in Menlo Park to an apartment near her son Peter, a veterinarian in Napa, Calif.

Frances James Donohue is glad she can live in her home within sight of son Daniel and his family in Accokeek, Md. She teaches a Sunday School class and is an active member of the largest garden club in Maryland. For years, Frances has helped with Christmas decorations for her church, often bringing holly and other greens from her acres. She and Daniel attended the honor service for Navy Captain John H. Morse.

Dean McKoin Bushong was sorry to miss the class reunion. The effects of a stroke prevented her attendance. She has recovered but cautiously spends days at a day-care facility and nights with her daughter and son-in-law. Dean reads a great deal and writes beautiful letters.

Health concerns caused Sadie Morrow Hughes to move from her home of 53 years in Bremen, Ga. She is pleased with her Merrill Gardens apartment in Carrollton, Ga.

Rosa Miller Barnes likes seeing and hearing son Fred in his regular Fox TV program. Daughter Rosa and her husband live in Florida near her mother. Rosa Sr. plays the guitar for a church group and continues her active membership in the DAR.

Sarah Jones Cheatham is teaching Sunday School. Two of her daughters and six Sunday School classmates were missionary volunteers for 19 days in the Philippines, sharing this experience with adult Sunday School classes in Sarah's church. Her two granddaughters graduated from Furman and Monroe Academy in May. The class is grateful for Sarah's contributions to the success of the 65th class reunion.

Mildred Clark Sargent's husband felt honored to be asked to deliver the eulogy for Navy Captain John H. Morse. She and Jim were very happy to see Helen and her outstanding family at the service and the reception following.

The good news is that Myrl Chafin Hansard was jumping up and down on the trampoline with her grandchildren. The bad news is that she did not realize until later that she had fractured two bones in her right leg. She explains that she did not remove her shoes before getting up on the trampoline, thinking that their being flat would enable her to handle the exercise. Further good news is that the class of '38 seems to be alive and kicking with high hopes for the 65th reunion in '03. A final positive note records the marriage of Myrl's granddaughter, Lindsey, to Steve Alexander in Opelika, Ala., on March 31. Lindsey graduated with a degree in psychology, in time for the wedding.

Ellen Verner Scoville reports that she is blessed with good health. She and her husband are busy with 10 grandchildren and one great-grandchild. They are active at Presbyterian Home, taking art, line dancing and exercise. She notes they are very happy "in spite of an unexpected crisis now and then."

Elizabeth "Lib" Blackshear Flinn is excited about editing the memoirs of a friend who lived two years in Paris and wrote wonderful letters about her experiences worthy of inclusion in a book. Lib has also updated her history of the North Avenue Presbyterian Church. Her two youngest grandchildren attend Westminster School in Atlanta, where their mother teaches. Lib and Bill are inveterate bridge players. Bill is enjoying the Lifespan classes at Trinity Presbyterian.

Joyce Roper McKey and John celebrated their 60th wedding anniversary on May 31. "Our summers are spent in Highlands, N.C.," she writes, "and so our family gathered there for a great time."

Elsie West Duval traveled in mid-February to Vero Beach, Fla., to visit her cousins and then stayed in Orlando with Joyce Roper McKey. On Valentine's Day they lunched with Ella Muzzey Biggers '41, who was there celebrating Brad Biggers' recent marriage. Elsie admits that although she and Joyce spent quality time together, they felt they needed to move at a slower pace now. Elsie's biggest challenge has been a basic computer class with "Lifelong Learners." She is "certainly not having fun yet. Creative writing is still [her] focus, so she hope[s] that new skill will make [her] hobby more productive."

Nell Allison Sheldon and Elizabeth "Lib" Blackshear Flinn attended Founder's Day celebration at ASC, including a tour of the McCain Library, Alston Center and lunch in the Leticia Pate Dining Hall. Nell's son, Andy, recently visited her.

Anne Thompson Rose and Ben are doing well, although continuing to age, "with aches and pains now and then." She has gotten hearing aids since "people seem to speak more softly than they used to!" She hopes to see all classmates in 2003.

Mildred Davis Harding is teaching a class in ESL at St. Petersburg Jr. College in Florida. In mid-February, she taught a one-week course for an Elderhostel class on "Pearl Craigie and the Gay Nineties." This was based on her 1996 biography of Pearl Craigie. Forty students, all 55 and over, attended. The class was so successful that she was asked to repeat the course in March. Also in March, she did a workshop at the Franciscan Center in Tampa called "Write Your Life Story." Meanwhile, she is also editing a training textbook (with CD-ROM) on combating terrorism that she claims is hair-raising material. Mildred's joyful personal news is that her son, Brayton, who teaches ESL abroad for part of every year and lives on a little boat in south San Francisco Bay, traveling from Asia and back, has "splashed" down in the marina at St. Petersburg, about six minutes from her condo. This will be his headquarters in America. Branwen, her daughter, is happy and busy in Istanbul. Mildred and husband Robert delight in their two-story condo in Gulfport with marina, sea-birds and three palm trees outside their big window. Robert works from home on Senior Settlements insurance and investments. For reading, Mildred recommends Barzun's From Dawn to Decadence, Bloom's How to Read and Why, James Hillman's The Force of Character and The Soul's Code, Tolstoy's War and Peace and Rosamunde Pilcher's Winter Solstice and Coming Home.

Jane Guthrie Rhodes at last has a great-grandchild. Her granddaughter, Lynn, called father Billy, Jane's son, and said, "Congratulations, grandpa!" Lynn is married to Steven Shurgly and lives in Jacksonville, Miss., where they are members of a branch of the Presbyterian Church that doesn't believe in women ministers!

Elinor Tyler Richardson
516 Azalea Lane
Florence, SC 29501-5718

Elinor Tyler Richardson apologizes to her classmates, whose news has been in her possession for some time. It arrived just a little too late to make the last deadline.

June Harvey Eager had three big events in 2000. Her grandson, Andrew Eager, graduated from Erskine College and was teaching and coaching at Madison County High School in Georgia during fall of 2000. Her daughter-in-law, Mary Wilson Eager, was named Georgia's Teacher of the Year. In addition, June and a friend went to Australia and took a camel ride.

Catherine Farrar Davis said one of her mother's elderly friends once expressed her aches and pains as "the infirmities of old age." She and her classmates can now identify with that observation. Catherine enjoyed her annual trip to Hilton Head Island and walking on the beach. She remains active in St. Timothy United Methodist Church, is treasurer of her circle and works in the church office two Wednesdays a month.

Two of Jane Dryfoos Rau's great-grandchildren, ages 3 and 2, live in Paris; as a true grandmother, she says they are adorable. Another great-grandchild, about 10 months and also adorable, lives in Vermont. They were all there for Christmas. Just before the holidays, Jane fell and broke her hip, but is doing nicely after a partial replacement. She was hoping to go to Florida with her sister for a week in February, and then on to Paris in March to visit her great-grandchildren. Jane still summers in New Jersey and up to now was still playing golf.

Many thanks to Sarah Cunningham Carpenter for the exciting article cut from the Jan. 7 edition of the Atlanta Journal-Constitution. It was titled "Jews in the Confederacy" and featured a large picture of Helen Moses Regenstein, her son, Reg, a former CIA intelligence officer, and the front of their lovely home. Helen and Reg have always had a great interest in the Confederacy because her grandfather and uncles fought for the South. The article was written to inform the public that Robert Rosen of Charleston, S.C., would talk in mid-March at the Atlanta History Center on the Jewish Confederates. In response, the secretary called Helen and had a wonderful visit. They grew up about 40 miles apart—she in Sumter, S.C., and Elinor in Florence.

In December, Harriet "Hat" Stimson Davis attended a special Agnes Scott College luncheon for members of the Anna Young Club, formerly the Fifty-Year Club. Three residents of Presbyterian Village represented the classes of '50, '40 and '31. "Hat" enjoyed seeing several '40 classmates at the event.

Mary "Polly" Heaslett Hastings, Henrietta "Henri" Thompson Wilkinson and Aurie Montgomery Miller '44, met for lunch at Sophie Montgomery Crane's home. The other local '40 classmate, Mary Francis Ault, was not able to attend because of broken ribs resulting from a fall, complicated by a severe virus infection. Polly plans to move from Asheville back to Chicago in the fall.

Henrietta "Henri" Thompson Wilkinson treasures close ties with her family. At Christmas they gathered for a reunion at the Highland Farms Retirement Center in Black Mountain. This year one child will be visiting her each month, and a grandchild has moved to Asheville. Using her editorial expertise, Henri helps her assistant pastor prepare material for publication. In March she traveled to Clemson, S.C., to participate in the ordination of Kazy Blocher, student worker at Clemson University.

Eleanor Newman Hutchens was recognized with a session in her honor at the 2001 meeting of the Southeastern American Society for Eighteenth-Century Studies in Huntsville, Ala. The session theme, "Tom Jones and the Shape of the Future," was inspired by her work with that novel. Eleanor's outstanding contributions to the field of 18th-century studies and her valuable service to the meeting's host institution, the University of Huntsville, led to this professional tribute.

Josephine "Betty" Nash Story wrote of the death of her husband of 56 years in May 2000 after a massive heart attack. He was also the father of Linda Story Lubitz '72. Betty is a discussion leader for Bible Study Fellowship, an international Bible study organization.

Myree Wells Maas, husband Joe, daughter Jane Maas Edwards '76 and grandchildren attended the change-of-command ceremonies at Norfolk, Va., Naval Station. Her son, Rear Admiral Steven Maas, assumed command of the Navy Supply Corps in charge of post exchanges throughout the world.

The year's big events for Mamie Hallman Ross are four college graduations and the weddings of two grandchildren.

Mary Rebekah Andrews McNeill took a wonderful trip to Colorado Springs in the fall. Her 16-year-old granddaughter especially enjoyed visiting the Air Force Academy.

Julia Harry Bennett had a rather traumatic time at Christmas when she moved from her home, an activity entailing much downsizing. She has had a happy year, however, with pleasant trips to Florida and through the Rockies. Julia has five "grands" in college and two daughters teaching, all leading to a busy family life.

In winter Margaret Sheftall Chester appreciates living in Scottsdale, Ariz., where George can ride his horses every day. Their youngest grandchild is 1 year old; two granddaughters are college age. Margaret is looking forward to celebrating her 80th birthday with a return trip to China.

Neva Jackson Redfern,

Myree Wells Maas and Jane Stillwell Espy joined others at a holiday luncheon of the Anna Young Club, formerly known as the Fifty-Year Club. The speaker was Laura S. Sugg, College chaplain, who described her responsibilities on campus and told of exciting plans for the future, including the erection of a small chapel.

Other exciting news came from St. Simons Island, where Dr. Betty Ann Brooks was honored for her pioneering efforts that created a tremendous difference in the medical treatment of local HIV and AIDS in Glynn County. In presenting one of two plaques to her, Jeff Clark, Social Service Technician for the Wellness Clinic, stated that "Dr. Brooks was very instrumental in securing the Ryan White Title II funds that made it possible for this area to open the HIV/AIDS Clinic." After retiring from 33 years of OB/GYN practice in Decatur, Betty Ann went to coastal Georgia to accept a part-time job with the Health Department in Glynn County. There she worked with the prenatal, family planning and sexually transmitted diseases units. Dr. Ted Holloway, a physician who has known B.A. since the mid-'80s, estimated that she treated about 500 HIV/AIDS patients while at the Health Department. Dr. Holloway and other co-workers honored her with a retirement party and an elegant mantel clock engraved with her name and time of service to the department. Her classmates are very proud of their class president!

Helen Summerour Zimmerman has moved from Tucson, Ariz., to Avondale. She is now closer to her son.

Maryann Cochran Abbott and Forrest were off on another trip last November to India and the Pushkar Fair. The journey began in New Delhi, and from the bustling capital of India they were transferred to Pushkar in the dry desert state of Rajasthan. Here they stayed in tents at the edge of the desert adjacent to the fair grounds, where under the full moon thousands of pilgrims, farmers, tourists and traders gathered for the annual camel and horse fair. In addition to Pushkar, the itinerary included Jaipur, Agra, the legendary city of the Taj, Varanasi (Benaris), and the traditional boat trip on the Ganges. Maryann found the schedule hectic but the experience well worth the exhaustion. During winter they were in Rome on a trip sponsored by Alumni Holidays International. The group of 50 included alumni from Wofford College (Forrest's college), Southern Medical Associates and alumni from Mississippi State College. They visited many of the usual historical cites at their own pace. Rome was just as grand as the first time they saw it in 1963.

Aileen Still Hendley's husband, Jack, had open-heart surgery for a double bypass and replacement of the aortic valve. After 10 days in the intensive care unit followed by three weeks at Emory, he was transferred to Wesley Woods Hospital for six weeks of therapy. Although those "were difficult days," they "had wonderful prayer support from church, family and friends." Aileen is "thankful now that Jack has fully recovered and is feeling good again."

The class of 1944 and many other classes will be interested to know that Betty Pope Scott Noble's father, Milton Candler Scott, the grandson of Col. George Washington Scott, founder of Agnes Scott, celebrated his 106th birthday on Jan. 14. Four generations of the family gathered at "Popsey's" home to celebrate the occasion. Mr. Scott has often told his children and grandchildren about being taken by his father to Kitty Hawk, N.C., to see the first successful flight of an airplane. He also remembers boyhood visits to Col. Scott's home in Clearwater, Fla., when he was a boy. On one occasion, after attending a wedding reception nearby, he was late getting home. When his grandfather asked him about his late return, he replied that he could not find the gate to the house. As an innocent child, he had consumed too much spiked punch.

Another vivid memory recalls Mr. Scott's trying at night to catch a glimpse of his future wife where she lived in the tower room in Agnes Scott Hall. Suddenly, President Frank Gaines appeared on the scene and ordered him off the campus. In 1915 men were not allowed on campus!

Most of Anne Sale Weydert's time for many years has been spent traveling with friends from Texas. Two of her favorite trips were an African safari and Greece and Turkey with a cruise of the Aegean Sea. They have also toured Alpine Europe, the Canadian Rockies, Australia, New Zealand and Fiji. Because cruising is their favorite mode of transportation, last year's trips took them to the Eastern Caribbean and to New Orleans from Galveston on a luxury barge. Sounds great!

Ruth "Rufus" Farrior spent three weeks last fall in Sweden and England visiting two nieces. Then she went to Wales to find a house in which she had spent the night with the family of Sir John Hope Simpson. He had stayed with the Farrior family in China in 1931. She found the house, which is now an inn. "Rufus" also attended the 60th reunion of her high school, Shanghai American School, where she learned to be such a good tennis, hockey and basketball player. She has relocated in the Highland Farms Retirement Community in Black Mountain but has the same mailing address and telephone number.

Emily Bradford Batts wrote that she was sorry she and Larry had a schedule conflict and would miss the reunion. She sent greetings to everyone.

Betty Smith Satterthwaite took her grandchildren to Florida in March for a getaway.

Anne Noell Wyant reveals that she and Jim are beginning to feel the ravages of time and could not make the long trip from Texas to Decatur in April. They have had to cut down on their volunteer work in order to keep all the appointments with doctors and labs, etc. For her birthday last August, her children gave her a computer; she vows she will learn to use it for something besides sending e-mails.

Margaret Scott Cathey has a new great-granddaughter, Margaret Jane Beal.

As a librarian, Lucile "Bunch" Beaver is very interested in seeing the newly renovated McCain Library. She continues to serve as choir librarian for her church and as a trustee for Riverside Military Academy in Gainesville, Ga. She is pleased that a portrait of her father now occupies a permanent spot over the fireplace mantel in the lobby of the new administration building at the school. Bunch's opera score for 2000 was 63 opera performances all over the world.

In February, Conradine Fraser Riddle and C.G. visited their daughter and her family in their new home in Bradenton, Fla. She found the beautiful, warm weather like a little bit of heaven.

The class president and secretary represented classmates at "Bold Aspirations," the celebratory weekend at the College in February.

Since Jack's retirement in 1996, Dorothy DeVane Redfearn and he have been traveling in their motor home. The latest expedition was a barge trip on the Mississippi River. They also celebrated their 54th wedding anniversary with a trip to Charleston. Son Robbie lives in Virginia with his wife and three children; daughter Rebecca is in Marion, S.C., and has 13- and 11-year-old children; their younger daughter is Robin.

Jean Williams Hand and Jim have had a whole year of celebrating their golden wedding anniversary. They toured England in the spring of 2000 with their Atlanta daughter and son-in-law, visiting abbeys, churches, stately homes, castles, Yorkshire Dales, the Bronte parsonage and Herriot Country. In July, their children had a lovely buffet honoring their special occasion. In the fall, they traveled again to London with some ASC classmates.

Doris Kissling Hamilton designs and makes quilts, most recently "Cathedral Windows," a gift for a daughter-in-law, and two "Storm at Sea" quilts for young grandsons, complete with pockets containing little boats to "sail" when the boys might be sick in bed.

Alice Beardsley Garber is very involved with work in her church, the Presbyterian Church of Mt. Kisco, N.Y., where she serves as elder. She also delights in being a world traveler.

Betty Crabill Rogers visited Atlanta to help celebrate the 75th birthday of a friend since kindergarten. While there, she and Charlie had lunch with Rosemary Jones Cox and Jimmy, where they caught up with all the latest happenings.

From Augusta, Ga., Valeria "Val" von Lehe Williams writes that she and Don celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary last June. They have three grown children and five grandchildren.

Nancy Huey Kelly and Thad were feted on their 50th anniversary in Helen, Ark., with marvelous memories and a gorgeous celebration among many friends and the whole family—all 21 of them.

Nelda Brantley Burke and her husband are enjoying their retirement years on St. Simons Island with travel and golf, as well as frequent visits to Atlanta to see their three daughters.

Anne "Bit" Wilson Valentine has had a series of health problems: first, a stroke last August, followed by a long rehab program; then, significant cancer that necessitated surgery, radiation and chemotherapy. The thoughts of her classmates are with her.

Evelyn Foster Henderson and U.V. spent a wonderful month last summer in Wales, attending the international musical Eisteddfod. For those who love vocal music, particularly choral singing, this is the place to go.

Ibby Wilkinson Turnipseed and Lonnie have moved from metropolitan New Jersey to Landsdale, Pa., close to grandchildren, in an area where one of the preferred retirement communities is located. In their new setting they can offer guests the rural beauty of Amish country and the cultural richness of historic Philadelphia.

After nearly five delightful years in Sky Valley, Ga., Mary "Maie" Aichel Samford and Chuck relocated to Jacksonville, Fla. They wanted to be closer to good medical care in a warmer climate. Since Chuck recently had an aortic valve replacement and Maie learned of dormant African parasites she acquired in Malawi more than 20 years ago, they were referred to the Mayo Clinic just in time to be checked, medicated and presumably cured. They are in good shape again, well enough to plan a trip to Scotland and Scandinavia. While there they hope to see Agnes Berentzen Thorensen '48.

Rita Adams Simpson is gradually getting used to her new condominium in Charlotte. She is grateful that daughter Cindy continues to gain strength and adjust to life with her new liver.

From Austell, Ga., Martha Ann Board Howell writes that she and Trent are pleased with life at Presbyterian Village. Located only 25 miles from the Atlanta airport, she finds it much easier now to visit classmates Josephine "Jo" Culp Williams and Elizabeth Williams Henry.

The class is proud that Dorothy "Dot" Quillian Reeves received an award for outstanding service to the College, at the April Alumnae Reunion.

Several classmates from the class of 1949 met at the Founder's Day convocation on Feb. 22: Dorothy Quillian Reeves, Betty Jean "B. J." Ellison Candler, Katherine Geffcken and Carmen Shaver Brown. In addition to touring newly renovated buildings, the four attended the dedication of the Kate Durr Elmore Reading Room, a warm and inviting space with a fireplace at one end. Carmen said that Dorothy read a message from Kate's family, and they toasted classmate Kate with her favorites—Coca-Cola, chocolates and nuts.

After months of chronic illness and weight loss, Frances "Robby" Robeson Hedin underwent major intestinal surgery in February. Grateful that no cancer was involved, Robby reports she is feeling much better.

Sally Ellis Mitchell and George make every effort to stay active in their laid-back life in the Appalachian Mountains of North Georgia. They walk, hike, play tennis, garden and take frequent trips to Atlanta to share the joy of grandchildren's activities.

Joan Lawrence Rogers and Larry continue to be great travelers. Last summer they ventured to Eastern Europe: Berlin, Warsaw, Krakow, Prague, Vienna, Budapest and Romania.

Betty Jean Crowther Beall has sold her home and is living in a retirement village in Columbia, S.C. She is enjoying her new home; the food, activities and friends are great. Betty was presented with her eighth grandchild on Oct. 28.

Joann Peterson Floyd and Waldo celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary on Aug. 23, 2000. Present were their 16 children and grandchildren, three of whom traveled with them to Brittany for the wedding of their French friends' son.

Adele Lee Dowd is proud of a new grandson born to daughter Peggy. Her youngest child, Brian, was married last fall in Santa Barbara, Calif. The wedding was a beautiful occasion. The newlyweds reside in San Mateo, Calif. Adele wanted classmates to know that Mildred Broyles Carver's husband, Jack, died in December.

Anne Irwin Smith's biggest news is that son Howard and wife Juli adopted two daughters. Now Anne's grandchildren total five, all under 5. She says that trying to keep up is an awesome task.

Ann Pitts Cobb liked every activity during reunion week-end. Seeing former classmates was the highlight. She is thankful to have graduated 50 years ago from Agnes Scott as she remembers how the College made everyone feel very special. In travel news, Ann and John had an unforgettable trip to Austria and Germany in the summer. For her, "the pinnacle of the 10-day tour was witnessing the Passion Play in Oberammergau." The audience of 5,000 remained "completely quiet and reverent for the six hours," with only a lunch recess in the middle of the performance. Back home in the United States, Ann loved having Jessie Hodges Kryder and Bill stop by overnight en route to Anniston from Richmond, Va. Ann's granddaughter, Ann Sholar Warren, is a junior at The North Carolina School of Math and Science and is meeting the academic challenges. Ann also has had a note from Marie Adams Conyers '46 in Cartersville, Ga., whose condition is improving. Ann's sister, Sylvia, was in the nursing home in Cartersville for nine months before she passed away. During that time Ann saw Marie and John on several occasions. Ann and Marie were both from Seneca and attended the same church.

For their 50th anniversary, Jo Ann McCall Cobb and husband John joined their three children and grandchildren on a cruise to Spain and Portugal. The cruise was fine, but they were especially happy to be with their children. In addition, John and Jo spent some time in Florida this winter on a fishing trip. The secretary sends apologies for this news not being in the earlier edition.

Margaret "Tootie" Ward Moore and a friend were the guests of Catherine "Cathie" Davis Armfield at Wild Wing Resort, Myrtle Beach. They played golf, attended live theater and had dinner at Greg Norman's Australian Grill. That is all they can afford to tell.

Tootie does not lay claim to the world's worst handwriting.

She is giving that claim to fame to some of her classmates. She asks that correspondents please help her so that she can read the messages and forgive her if she has not interpreted everything correctly. E-mail tootieward@aol.com.

In February, Cathie Davis Armfield spent time with her tennis buddies in Florida.

Jessie Hodges Kryder underwent back surgery in March.

Dorothy "Faye" Tynes Dick and Marion vacationed at Hilton Head in February.

Jo Ann McCall Cobb and John attended their grandson's graduation from medical school.

A mini-reunion was held at the beautiful Highland Lake in Flat Rock, N.C. (Hendersonville). Among those attending were Jo-Anne Christopher Cochrane, Joann Plastre Britt, Margaret "Tootie" Ward Moore, Barbara "Babs" Young Reiland and Bob, Dorothy "Faye" Tynes Dick and Marion, Emily Reid Williams and Dave, Joann Peterson Floyd and Dr. Waldo Floyd, Alline Marshall, Harriot Ann McGuire Coker and John, Marjorie Major Franklin and Ted, Ann Gebhardt Fullerton, Cathie Davis Armfield, Sally Thompson Aycock, Betty J. Crowther Beall, and Jessie Hodges Kryder and Bill. (This list is incomplete as deadline for publication was March 5. A complete report will be in the next edition.)

DEATHS

- Elizabeth "Ann" Griggs Foster, Jan. 19.
- Jane Sharkey Cobb, Dec. 26.
- Jack Carver, husband of Mildred Broyles Carver, December 2000.

After graduating from ASC, Eliza Pollard Mark earned her doctorate in chemistry at Cornell University and spent a number of years as a chemist. She met her husband, James Mark, while she was working for Hewlett-Packard in California. After they were married, they lived in New York, where he taught chemistry and she edited books for John Wiley and Sons. They moved to Cincinnati when Jim accepted a professorship of chemistry at the University of Cincinnati. They were married for 23 years, and Eliza still lives in Cincinnati. She has been retired since 1991. Eliza's daughter, Eleanor, is completing her senior residency in obstetrics and gynecology at Vanderbilt University Hospital. Last August Eleanor married Dr. Lewis McCurdy III, a researcher in infectious diseases at the National Institutes of Health.

Another retiree in 1991, Carol Munger had a successful career as a computer programmer. For many years she was at Computer Sciences Corporation, a consulting firm in Bethesda, Md.; during the last 10 years she worked on a contract with NASA at Goddard Space Flight Center. Six years ago, Carol had to move from her home in Bethesda to Erie, Pa., when she collapsed as a result of serious illness. She now lives in an upscale retirement home near her sister, Joyce Munger Osborn '54. Although Carol has to be on oxygen 24 hours a day, she goes everywhere and has an active social life. Three mornings a week, she travels across town to a rehab center for exercises. After a mild heart attack last year, Joyce also goes to the center for rehabilitation.

Jimmie Ann McGee Collings' daughter, Sharon Collings Licata '77, won a top award at an art show for her stone carving "Reflections." Jimmie Ann says Sharon really is involved in doing stone carving, and so she went to Arrowmont in Gatlinburg in March for more training.

Marjorie Stukes Smith and five English friends flew from London Heathrow in March to attend the Quilters' Heritage Celebration in Lancaster, Pa. This is their second such jaunt under Marjorie's leadership, who enjoys working out all the details. This time, they stayed a full fortnight, taking in more sightseeing and shopping in that quiet corner of Pennsylvania with its charming Amish settlements.

Nancy Cassin Smith and Ralph miss their citrus trees in South Florida, having been among the many whose trees were destroyed to prevent the spread of cancer. Their travels have taken them to Ralph's 50th class reunion at the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill. They also drove to Branson, Mo., for several entertaining shows. Then, they toured Williamsburg, Yorktown, Jamestown and Carter's Grove, Va., to study the history of those places and to research their own family history.

Winifred "Winnie" Horton Martin has a new grandson, Ian Martin.

Betty McClain Ivy and Kelley specialize in day trips from their Norcross, Ga., home. Betty still teaches Sunday School and stays deeply involved with her grandchildren. Occasionally, she meets for lunch with Gail Akers Thompson, Winifred "Winnie" Horton Martin and Dorothy Adams Knight.

Gail Akers Thompson now understands why the computer is called "Beelzebub," as her daughter, Margaret Riffe, helps her learn how to use one. Gail is trying her hand at writing short stories; so far she has written three. The writing itself is no problem for Gail; the difficulty is in developing plots.

Sarah McKee Burnside is very proud of the successful Vision Fund and of all those who worked on it and have contributed to it. She is reminded of a line spoken by the character she played in Lee Blessing's play, Eleemosynary, which opened in early March in celebration of Women's History Month: "The secret of flight lies in the assurance that we are worthy of flying." Sarah is quite sure that the years at Agnes Scott are at least part of the foundation for that assurance.

In 1996 Catherine Crowe Dickman retired from her position as director of the Women's Center in Chapel Hill. In more recent news, she and William C. Ragland were married Jan. 2, 2000. Bill is a retired C.P.A. from Annandale, Va. They are happy in their new life together.

Muriel Gear Hart and husband Mac went to Ireland last fall on the Davidson College Alumni trip. They took another week to explore on their own, calling this the "week of living dangerously." Their adventure took them off the beaten paths into prehistoric sites and cemeteries. In 2000, their greatest joys were their youngest son's recovery from surgery for a rare cancer and their daughter's being approved for tenure at the institution where she teaches Shakespeare. Muriel is looking forward to the 50th reunion.

Anne Bottoms Wouters moved to Jasper, Ala., in April 2000 to be near her older son. Anne retired in April 1999 with great plans for travel. Unfortunately, heart problems and a recurrence of breast cancer have kept her close to home. She hopes, nevertheless, to be able to attend the 50th reunion in 2002.

Sylvia Moutos Mayson and husband Pen are taking advantage of his retirement as an engineering executive from the DuPont Company. Last summer they toured the southern coast of California, spending time in Laguna Miguel with Sylvia's ASC roommate of four years, Elaine Blane Vafiadis, and her husband Nick. The roommates plan to meet again at the 50th reunion. In family updates, sons Pen III and Mark have given Sylvia and Pen four grandchildren.

Last summer Susan Hancock Findley traveled to Alaska with Jim and Tom, their wives and six grandchildren. From Seattle they embarked on the Norwegian Sky cruise ship, stopping at the Sawyer Glacier, Haines, Skagway, Juneau and Vancouver. At Skagway they took the White Pass Railway along the same route used by Klondike stampedeers during the Klondike Gold Rush. All proclaimed the trip a success. In November, Jim and family moved to Dharan, Saudi Arabia, where he works for Aramco as an environmental engineer. Tom remains in Tallahassee, "trying to stay out of the political fire." His partner represented one side of the dispute over the presidential election, while his firm's subtenants upheld the other side.

Dorothy Allison McDougall (Dottie) and Bill celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary in August. Bill planned a night at the King & Prince Hotel where they spent their honeymoon and filled the room with 50 red roses. Dottie thinks they are probably the first couple from our class to celebrate the 50th anniversary. Congratulations!

Evelyn Bassett Fuqua merits special congratulations from all her classmates. She and Colonel Edwin Cook were married at sea on Dec. 14, then enjoyed a Caribbean cruise and explored the Orinoco River in Venezuela while sailing.

Peggy Hooker Hartwein's section of Texas has had plenty of rain, so the bluebonnets were beautiful. Both Ken and Peg are active in their church, Memorial Presbyterian, in Fredericksburg, Texas.

The secretary was delighted to hear from Rosalyn Kenneday Cothran that she is relishing her retirement. Husband Bob is retired but travels everywhere helping regional theaters with scenic designs. Their three children are on the West Coast and like it. As for "Rosie," she plans to come to the 50th reunion.

The secretary also hopes that everyone has contributed or plans to give to the Comprehensive Campaign. She urges classmates who have not yet done so to contribute now, thinking especially of having a large sum for the 50th year celebration. Best of all, donations to class funds will be included in the Comprehensive Campaign totals, with no need for two checks.

A last request is to hear from more class members soon.

Lou Hill Reaves, Julia Grier Storey, Mary Pritchett Webb and Judy Promnitz Marine attended Agnes Scott College's Founder's Day Weekend. At this time the new James Ross McCain Library was dedicated, as well as the new Wallace M. Alston Campus Center. Quoting Dr. Alston, Lou also led a prayer at the library dedication. Her daughter Carol Reaves Wilson '82 and granddaughter Elizabeth, age 13, were there as well. Mary says both buildings, built to serve a variety of needs for students, faculty, staff and alumnae, are "magnificent."

Maybe Judy Promnitz Marine will bring photo albums of her month-long trip to Kenya and India last fall with her to the 50th reunion, which is coming soon! It is rumored those photos will be well worth seeing. Are classmates making plans for that event? Including the photos to bring?

Managing to miss two Minneapolis blizzards, Barbara Northey Severinghaus and Tom celebrated his retirement with a January tour of Florida and South Carolina, including delightful visits with Martha Guillot Thorpe and Cotton Williams Sweat.

Mitzi Kiser Law says she and Fred are "still in a peripatetic mode;" they went to Ireland and Northern Ireland in October to visit old friends from the Ulster Project, in which they have been involved for 25 years. Each summer the project brings young Protestant and Catholic teens to Wilmington for a month to participate in a reconciliation program.

As full-time manager of the Cathedral of St. Philip Book Store in Atlanta, Jane Landon Baird says she is becoming an endangered species and requests that other classmates who are still working full time please let her know about it at 3960 Vermont Rd., NE, Atlanta 30319-1213, or 404-261-6177.

Connie Ormsby Verdi will retire June 1 as professor of sociology at Prince George Community College in Bethesda, Md., where she has taught for 31 years.

In March, Carolyn Randolph Delay and Jack traveled to the Big Apple to see four plays.

Mary Newell Bridges, Helen McGowen French, Julia Grier Storey, Lou Hill Reaves and Jackie Josey Hahne attended the eight-week winter seminar sponsored by the Atlanta ASC Alumnae chapter; this year the group studied Henry IV, Part I, and King Lear, taught by Jane Pepperdene.

Kathleen Stout Mainland stays very busy though she says she has "no news!" She works at the Tullie Smith House in Atlanta twice a week, reads on the radio for the blind, sings in two choirs (including Mozart's Coronation Mass with one in April) and was storyteller at a re-enactment in Darien, Ga., in March, as well as hosting a Turkish student to help him perfect his English for his studies at GSU. She and Lou Hill Reaves have lunched together. It is Lou's theory that "the best confidence—sharing companionship"—takes place at a table. Anyone disagree?

In March, Helen McGowen French went with a Fernbank tour to Turkey. She had to leave Ted behind because nowadays he has trouble walking more than short distances.

Addie Steans Morrison has four daughters, the youngest two of whom got married in 2000, and three grandchildren. She and Harold spend a good bit of each winter in Florida. They also enjoy traveling and went to France in 2000. Her two weeks in the Middle East have caused Addie to become passionately interested in the situation there and to ask, "What am I going to do when I grow up?"

The news editor, Nancy Lee-Riffe, wonders how many classmates, in the retiring phase of their lives, are asking themselves that same question.

Jane Zuber Garrison and Robert have recently moved to Highlands, N.C., where they had had a summer home, and are building for permanent residence. Their e-mail address is bobjane@yahoo.com. Robert is still practicing medicine, and Jane, who got her RN at Clemson in 1976, is still working part time. They have five children and seven grandchildren. They are expecting another grandchild in August. They stay in close touch with Cissy Schor Hall's husband Andy (whose e-mail is AndrewHall@backroads.net).

An article in The Atlanta Constitution titled "Three who dared: Women share fight against prejudice" recognized Constance Curry for her involvement in the American civil rights movement. Constance tells her story in Deep in Our Hearts: Nine White Women in the Freedom Movement.

Vivian Hays Guthrie reported seeing the following at ASC's fabulous Founder's Day Weekend: Julia Beeman, Gracie Greer Phillips, Pauline Waller Hoch, Sarah Petty Dagenhart and Susanna Byrd Wells. Convocation was moving; and yes, everyone sang "God of the Marching Centuries." The McCain Library addition and new Alston Student Center were awesome. The campus was beautiful everywhere. Tea in the library was a first (and last, the secretary is sure), but so elegant. Gourmet food was served on all four levels of the Alston Center. This was a very special occasion.

Jane Gaines Johnson and Ralph had a quick trip to Costa Rica in January and were off to Chile, Argentina, and Rio in February. They gathered a few friends together from their Boeing Travel Club, rented a boat and had a week's charter trip on the Amazon.

Mary Alice Kemp is working part time at Columbia Seminary, reading a great deal, beginning to work in the garden as the weather allows and is generally quite content with her life. She would like a man in her life but none that she meets seems "significant."

Sue Walker Goddard had a big family gathering to celebrate her mother's 92nd birthday, with her children's choir singing beautifully and correctly, their Christmas play complete with angel wings and halos—her best Christmas present! Day to day a steady schedule of church music work has been intensified by several choral concerts and organ recitals, one of which became her sixth CD of organ music.

Helen Jo Hinchey Williams and Roy met daughter Stacy and her family for a week of skiing in Colorado in February. Life is beautiful in Florida, but rain is needed.

Sarah Petty Dagenhart and Larry met Vivian Hays Guthrie and Shirley in Maine last summer. The four of them are going on a Davidson College trip to Russia. At home Sarah volunteers at the hospital neonatal unit and takes pleasure in knitting and smocking for the grandchildren. Larry is still practicing law, so they are in Charlotte mostly; but they spend as much time as possible at Wrightsville Beach.

Sara McIntyre Bahner and Max took a long-planned trip to India in the fall and were sad that the January earthquake made the lot of so many of its people even harder. Her activities include investing, liturgical dance, choir and being professor of a Sewanee Bible class in Old Testament Hebrew.

Mary Evelyn "M.E." Knight Swezey's daughter Mary has a solo exhibit of fiber art at a Richmond gallery. She is an M.F.A. graduate of Arizona State, on the staff at the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts and is married to a graduate student in biology at Virginia Commonwealth University. Daughter Margaret is in the Ph.D. program in medieval English at the University of North Carolina and presented a paper on King Alfred's law code this spring at a professional meeting in Kalamazoo. Her son Chris has a Ph.D. in geology and works for the U. S. Geological Survey in Reston, Va., where he just purchased a small townhouse. M.E. is auditing a course her husband is teaching at Union-PSCE on the thoughts of Reinhold Niebuhr and is appreciating it thoroughly.

For Betty Reiney Henley, dancing consumes much of her life; she is classified as a "silver dancer." She has taken on International style and its closed positions in waltz and foxtrot. For a major National Dance Association competition in March, she worked hard to win the "Best of Show" with a Pro-Am foxtrot. Readers will have to wait until the next edition for the outcome of Betty's efforts. Upcoming family events are granddaughter Carrie Henley's graduation from Emory and daughter Natalie Henley's wedding to a wonderful person. Son Walt Henley is president and part owner of a new business named Lasershift, Inc., all about broadband and optical carriers networking. Betty is helping the new music director by service playing (organ and liturgy) while he finishes his doctorate.

Catherine "Cathy" Lewis Callaway and Mayson flew to Israel in February. One night when they returned from dinner, they saw a man sitting in the hall two doors down from their room and another man two more doors down before the suites at the end of the hall. They soon found out that Prime Minister-Elect Ariel Sharon was staying there. A couple of nights later, Shimon Peres arrived. They later went to Camden, S.C., for a meeting at Camden Military Academy and had dinner with Erlene Lide Vaughan and her husband.

Amazingly, the youthful class of 1956 celebrated its 45th anniversary this year! The next issue of MAIN EVENTS will carry classmates' news brought to the reunion event in April. The class appreciates all the effort that Elizabeth "Betty" Richardson Hickman and Louise Harley Hull put into planning a wonderful time of getting back together.

Over Christmas, New Year's and her 65th birthday, Jacqueline "Jackie" Plant Fincher luxuriated on a millennium Silversea cruise to Tahiti, Fiji, the Cook Islands and New Zealand, given to her by a retired professor she met on a Zurich-to-Atlanta flight. Winston Churchill II and royal biographer Andrew Morton were interesting guests. Jackie says to choose seatmates carefully. She also reports that daughter Jacqueline has received a national Physician of the Year award from the American Heart Association for her patients education program. In addition, Jackie's mother, Lucile Totty Homer, celebrated her 95th birthday. She is number 13 of 15 children, and she put herself through Peabody and Auburn, where she played basketball from 1924 to 1926. Mrs. Homer was cheered by the crowd when players from the '90s to the '20s walked onto the court and she was last. In other family news, after a difficult pregnancy, their daughter Andrea gave birth to Garrett, who joins 3-year-old Rachel. On the way from California, Jackie stopped in Las Vegas to see the Eiffel Tower, Paris Opera house, Statue of Liberty, Brooklyn Bridge, Sistine Chapel, Grand Canal, St. Mark's Square and Campanile, some of the latest architecture there. Finally, Jackie is building her third and last house.

Linda Guenther Christopher regrets that she will have missed the reunion as she makes final preparations for her daughter Elizabeth's marriage to Vincent Scarlata on May 19 at Pawleys Island, S.C. She is sure all classmates with daughters will understand her mother-of-the-bride jitters.

Nancy Burkitt Foy reports a "fantabulous" experience in Cambridge, England, with husband, Rob, for his 1999-2000 sabbatical year. They celebrated Christmas and New Year's in New York City with daughters Malinda, a transportation expert with degrees from MIT and Northwestern, and Elizabeth, who is in a master's program in public policy at Columbia. In January, she and Rob took students to London for 10 days and to Greece for two weeks.

Classmates watched with both pride and compassion the involvement of Harriet Griffin Harris' daughter, Katherine Harris '79, in the recent presidential election.

After being off the Agnes Scott College Board for three years, Nancy Thomas Hill is now serving on the College Campaign Steering Committee. She enjoys being back on campus again for meetings and seeing all the exciting things going on.

Jane Welborn Greene retired in the fall from the Georgia Association for Pastoral Care. She was hired 20 years ago by Helen Haynes Patton's husband, John. She highly recommends retirement for those who have not yet taken that leap.

Last July, Marijke Schepman Devries retired as doctor of oriental medicine. To celebrate her 65th birthday, her three children, their spouses, her seven grandchildren and her sister Anneke Schepman Corbitt '63 spent a wonderful week at Morain State Park in western Pennsylvania swimming, biking, fishing and canoeing. Marijke's children gave her an electric bike for the occasion.

Elizabeth Ansley Allan has retired from high school teaching and has spent her time traveling to Honduras, where she helped rebuild a house destroyed by Hurricane Mitch, and to the 37 islands of Hawaii. She has now visited all 50 states. Husband Frank retired as Episcopal Bishop of Atlanta. They have started a nonprofit art gallery called The Work of Our Hands.

Betsy Crapps Burch and her new husband, Donald, have also retired and are happy traveling. Their latest trip was a cruise from Budapest to Amsterdam. Their grandchildren, ages 3, 6 and 10, provide much enjoyment. Betsy is writing the history of Suwannee County, Fla.

Margaret "Margie" Hill Truesdale has gotten her certification in scuba and had four good dives in Grand Cayman. She then spent seven days rafting the Colorado River and hiking the Grand Canyon, only to take off to England for two weeks. These activities are in addition to making a couple of quilts, playing golf and tennis and serving on the session of her church.

Marilyn McClure Anderson spent a month last summer in England, Scotland and Ireland. She had a great time tracing some of her Scottish ancestors. Marilyn loves teaching art and American government at Clearwater High School. She says she is the oldest faculty member.

Marianne Sargent Duncan

has an interior design business, working only by appointment. At the back of her house is a log cabin that she uses as her office. Husband Kap helps out when needed. Since all three of their children live close by, they stay busy with grandchildren. Marianne has had a small book, Speaking with the Father, published, and she is now doing a second edition. It is a collection of prayers she has written during 44 years of marriage, raising children and learning to live a Christian life. The class sends congratulations to Marianne!

2000 was an exciting year for Judy Nash Gallo. Her son, Roy, married in April and now has a wonderful 13-year-old stepson. Another welcome addition was a granddaughter born in Ireland in June to daughter Anne. Judy and her husband have made two trips to Ireland, but Anne and family arrived back in this country in time to join all the family for a most enjoyable Thanksgiving.

June Stokes Moseley reported that "Reader Connection," sponsored by the Atlanta Agnes Scott Alumnae, was an exciting success for her. Chris Ames, chair of the English department and Dr. Hayes's successor, lectured and led the discussion of White Teeth by Zadie Smith. Other events were a Caribbean cruise with husband Ron in February and another "Reader Connection" in April—this one with Waiting. Perhaps most anticipated of all is this summer's two-week seminar in art history at the Hermitage in St. Petersburg, Russia.

Just after reporting to the last MAIN EVENTS about Katherine "Kit" Sydnor Piephoff and her husband Zack's plans to move to Mooresville, word was received that Zack died unexpectedly before the move and that "Kit" is now in a new condo as of Feb. 2. The class sends heartfelt sympathy and love to "Kit," with the thankful reassurance that she will be near her children in Davidson and Charlotte.

The writings of Sue Lile Inman are included in Southern Dogs and Their People, edited by Roberta Gamble. Among the others whose writings were selected are William Faulkner, Lee Smith, Bailey White, Eudora Welty, Zora Neale Hurston, Anne Tyler, Larry Brown and Flannery O'Connor. Author Clyde Edgerton, married to alumna Susan Ketchin '70, wrote the introduction.

The secretary sends her apologies for missing news publication in March because of a mix-up in new deadlines during her December move from Florida to Georgia. This issue contains news written with March publication in mind plus the latest received information.

Margaret "Wardie"

Abernethy Martin and Jim have three new grandchildren born during 2000, one to each of their three children. They travel frequently from Charlotte to Signal Mountain, Tenn., and to Atlanta to visit Jay, Catherine, Margaret and their families, including a new total of 10 grandchildren. Every year the Martins have a whole family reunion over Memorial Day weekend at their home in Montreat, N.C. "Wardie" and Jim have no retirement plans yet. His law firm and her work as administrative coordinator for the Charlotte Junior League keep them happily busy. They had a delightful trip to Scotland and England a year ago, but visits with family and friends are their top travel priorities. When she sent her news in February, "Wardie" was planning to attend the Founder's Day celebration at ASC with the dedication of new buildings.

After 31 years of sitting on an organ bench, Hazel King is happy being a choir member at her Episcopal church. In July, the 47-member group toured England and sang evensong in York, Cambridge, London, Canterbury, Winchester and Salisbury. Hazel continues to serve as assistant conductor and accompanist of the Charleston Children's Chorus but otherwise enjoys the freedom of retirement. Her granddaughter is Caroline Cooper Wilhelm '84.

Betty Lockhart Anglin teaches all the painting and drawing classes for the Fine Arts Department at Christopher Newport University. In recent years her watercolors have been used in instructional texts. Moreover, Betty still actively paints and exhibits her work. U.S. News ranked Christopher Newport numbers two and three for its division. During the past two years a new health center and gymnasium and two dormitories have opened. Summer 2001 will be the groundbreaking for the new Arts Center designed by the I.M. Pei architectural firm responsible for part of the Louvre and the east wing of the National Gallery in Washington, D.C. Betty and her arts colleagues eagerly await the new facilities.

Nancy Leslie Kearns sends her enthusiastic response to the letter with Class President Annette Teague Powell's news about the health and growth of ASC. Nancy missed the 40th anniversary reunion because of health problems, but she is now much better. Her health forced retirement from teaching English at Spelman College in 1991. Since retiring she has been traveling to England, Ireland and France, working on her book about Athol Fugard, the South African playwright. Nancy is collaborating with Simon and Schuster toward eventual publication. She and Jim live in the historic district in Columbus, Ga., and welcome contact from classmates passing through the area. This fall she will return to the classroom, teaching world literature and freshman composition at Columbus State University.

Audrey Johnson Webb is grateful for the love and support of her family, friends and church since Dick's death two years ago. She has continued his volunteer work with refugees, resulting in a touching, miraculous reunion between an Eritrean woman and her seriously ill, deaf mute son who initially was refused admittance to the USA when the rest of his family came from Ethiopia. In another encounter, a Vietnamese couple have become joyful Christians, rising above very tragic family circumstances. Last summer Audrey traveled to visit friends and family in Santa Barbara, Dallas, Savannah, Atlanta and Idaho from her home in Annandale, Va.

Ann Harvey retired as editorial director, SIPs, Oxmoor House Inc., in 1999. She says retirement is good, but 2000 was a difficult year for her and Fletcher with the sudden death of their daughter in February. We look forward to hearing more from Ann in 2001.

Janice Jones Conway and Glenn have moved from Ellijay, Ga., to Panama City Beach, Fla.

Lila McGeachy Ray and Dick welcomed two new grandchildren in 2000—Samuel Cole Ray and Catherine English Rand. These give the Rays five grandchildren. Lila and Dick are enjoying their third year at Pittsburgh Theological Seminary. Lila takes classes and is an elder at Shadyside Presbyterian Church, while Dick teaches at the Seminary.

Paula Pilkenton Vail and Chip moved in October to smaller quarters in Roanoke in anticipation of his retirement sometime in 2001. They plan to divide their time between Roanoke and Myrtle Beach, S.C., where they bought a condo last summer. She sends greetings to all classmates.

Carol Promnitz Cooper received a music therapy certificate from Mu Phi Epsilon Music Sorority for participating in volunteer music programs around Atlanta. She also was awarded a guitar certificate from the Atlanta School of Music for classical studies and traditional hymns. Carol enjoys her pets, both dogs and cats.

Helen Smith Rogers and Sam relaxed with four months of travel after he retired in June 2000 from the Methodist ministry. They visited Europe, Florida and North Carolina, allotting much time to children and grandchildren. They had fun seeing former churches, too. Helen and Sam plan to return to involvement in the life of their last church, Tifton First United Methodist Church, after giving the new pastor time to "make his own place."

Annette Teague Powell joyfully sends news of two new grandchildren. Wilson "Will" Powell Flynt was born May 18 to Elizabeth and Mike Flynt. Victoria Caine Powell, daughter of Monteith and Holly Powell, made her debut on Sept. 24.

Carolyn Wright McGarity is in her seventh year of teaching Spanish at the Community College of Denver and loves it. She is also teaching Spanish at Children's Hospital to a wide variety of staff members. Although it involves much commuting, living in Boulder has its special rewards. Son John, his wife and two children live nearby. Megan is in Crested Butte, and son Charlie resides with his wife and daughter in Taos, N.M. Carolyn says "hi to everyone" and comments that "despite being far from [her] southern roots," she finds Boulder "a great place."

Mary Jane Pickens Skinner has moved to Daphne, Ala., and is getting reacquainted with Sallie Meek Hunter and Margaret "Peggy" Bradford Kimbirl. Her daughter, Glenda, married Fedencio Cruz Gallardo Jr. on May 13, 2000, in Asheville, N.C. Bessie Murphy Lee and Bill came up from Greenville, S.C., to join them for the festivities. Mary Jane's mother, Dovie Pickens, died on Oct. 16 at the age of 91.

After 34 years in the same house in Murphreesboro, Tenn., June Hall McCash has treated herself to a lovely Victorian home with a wraparound porch and plenty of room for visits from her fellow classmates.

Suzanne Hoskins Brown spent a month at Guiding Eyes for the Blind in training with her new guide dog, Mr. Isley, a black Labrador retriever. Suzanne and Joe moved from Vail, Colo., to Atlanta in January.

Nell Archer retired in January 2000.

Ann Avant Crichton and husband Robin Beechey have settled in Atlanta. After 16 years in Brighton, England, with work in Eastern Europe, Africa and Japan, retirement and four grandchildren brought them to the United States.

Jane Welch Milligan is busy with eight grandchildren and her 11th year of putting in 40-plus hours per week at Brandon Wilde Life Care Community in Evans, Ga. She writes that "husband David [is] still around doing groceries and meals in self-defense."

Mary Crymes Bywater's husband, Ted, has decided not to retire anytime soon, but wants to "slow down" and travel. The year 2000 proved an adventure as they visited Alaska, Barbados and, best of all, Peru, with their three adult children. They now have five grandchildren and find life "very good."

Harriet Smith Bates' husband, John, has a year of retirement under his belt with a new cluster of activities. He writes book reviews for a local newspaper, amazon.com and his own Web site, Readers Review (<http://www.geocities.com/readersreview/index.htm>). Their daughter, Robin, is a graduate teaching assistant in the Auburn University English Ph.D. program. Son Andrew is pursuing a master's degree in public administration at the University of Louisville while holding down a full-time job and helping raise two active little boys.

Cornelia "Pete" Brown Nichols has a granddaughter, Emily Margaret, born March 13, 1999, to son Billy and his wife, Susan.

Julia "Panni" Doar Grubb and husband Bobby had a pleasurable trip to Italy in September for his 60th birthday. They rented a villa in Tuscany, near Lucca. She keeps up with former classmates, Betty Mattern York and Mary Park Cross Ford, on her annual trips to Pawleys Island, S.C.

Alice Boykin Robertson and husband Tom are enjoying the extra time that retirement brings to travel to spend time with granddaughter Meagan and to visit their son, who lives in Lakewood, Colo. He is fulfilling his dream of working in broadcasting and sports by serving as program manager for Fox Sports Rocky Mountain.

Guthrie "Dutton" Lemmond Moore retired from the Durham Public Schools in 2000. She is happy gardening, reading, learning to quilt and volunteering at the public library, but "the best times are extra hours with [her] granddaughter, Laurie Ellen." She and Lang are on sabbatical in Washington, D.C., for the 2001-02 academic year.

Lucy Davis Harper is chair of the board of Adventure Unlimited, a nonprofit organization that runs camps in the mountains of Colorado and organizes national youth, family and adult groups for Christian Scientists. She and husband Ed now live in Miami, Fla., where they would love to entertain guests. Their daughter, Elizabeth, married to a Frenchman, lives in Paris and works at the U.S. Embassy. Son Peter, an artist, is located in Atlanta.

Alice Cochrane Swartout and husband Jake celebrated their 40th wedding anniversary with their children in southwest Florida at a property they purchased in July 2000. All three of her children live in cities out of state. Having retired from occupational therapy, Alice has been getting back into pottery (wishing Mr. Westervelt were her teacher), various activities at church and her membership in Kiwanis International.

Ann Neal Womeldorf Noland rejoices in the birth of her first grandchild, Margaret Carrie Levin, to daughter Julie and her husband, Dan, both of whom are psychology professors at Case Western and Kent State, respectively. Her son, Daniel, who is doing his family practice residency in Virginia, recently married a nurse. Alice is delighted that "all three children are out of grad school and have jobs!"

Having retired from teaching, Elizabeth "Betsey" Hammond Moore enjoys visiting her grandchildren in North Carolina and Virginia as well as her 85-year-old mother in Georgia.

Eleanor Anne Christensen Pollitzer is another recent retiree. She finds that "after an initial month of frantic rushing about, trying to do everything that has been postponed for five years, [she is] trying to focus on one project at a time:

the house, flower gardens, family pictures, VCR movie collection, etc." She and her husband, Rick, are able to do more boating and "airplane junkets." Anne also reports that all in her immediate family are well.

Harriett "Boog" Smith Henderson has nine grandchildren from the ages of 18 months to 14 years. She and her husband go to Georgia Tech games in the fall and Lake Summit in the summer, and she runs throughout the year to keep fit.

Mildred Lafon Zimmerman retired recently after a 38-year career at the Queens Borough Library. She is finding it fun to take life easy.

In December 2000, Joan Falconer Byrd and her sister, Mary Byrd Davis '58, joined family and friends in Hendersonville, N.C., to celebrate the 100th birthday of their mother, Joanna Inger Byrd. "What a blessing it has been to watch one who saw the 20th century from start to finish begin the new millennium with undiminished grace and spirit," Joan writes.

Eleanor "Bunny" Henry Coates is completing a graduate program in anthropology, continuing a photographic record at the classic Maya site of Copán, Honduras, as part of a University of Pennsylvania archaeological project. She led a trip to Belize and Tikal in February, including three days of diving on Ambergris Cay (where Temptation Island was filmed). Both sons are married and living nearby, and first grandchild, Hayden Alexander, arrived in October 2000 and "of course, is wonderful."

In this the 60th year all have been very busy with travels, celebrations of birthdays and multiple additions of grandchildren. Although classmates have been good about sending information, the secretary has been a little slow about getting it out. She has the usual excuses: doing a major renovation on her house and having grandchildren. The house is still not finished, but life does go on, and carpenters, painters and bricklayers are not her life!

Suzanne Amidon Zoole was recognized in the December issue of Crosswalk for her iconography. She has been "drawn to iconography more through art than through monastic discipline."

Vivian "Biba" Conner Parker

had a great 60th birthday party in Houston, attended by about ten from the class of '62. The secretary wishes the class news had pictures!

Elizabeth Withers Kennedy and her husband, Jim, traveled across country for five weeks, saw their grandchildren and also took a trip to Italy.

Madelyn Eve Clow and her husband, Jim, have moved to a new home at St. James Plantation in Southport, N.C.

Judith Holloway Baum and husband Denis returned from six months in England, where Denis assisted at the parish church at Bakewell, Derbyshire, in exchange for the use of an 18th-century cottage and car of similar vintage! Judith traveled to Jacksonville, Fla., recently for her "routine laughter fix" with Betty Hopkins Stoddard. The Baums are spending four days a week in Panama City for a year, while Denis is the interim pastor at St. Andrew's Episcopal Church.

Susan Hoagland Fellows is teaching on the SS Universe Explorer Semester at Sea with the University of Pittsburgh. In addition to poetry, travel literature and global fiction, she is going to Cuba, Brazil, South Africa, Kenya, India, Malaysia, Vietnam, China and Japan! Susan also had a welcome visit with Kathy Norfleet Sisk and her husband, Ken.

Someone sent a card that said she had closed her marriage and family practice therapy to paint seriously and had a show of her interiors and Byzantine icons. She didn't sign the card, but guessing suggests it may be Suzanne Amidon Zoole.

Beverly Kenton Mason took a wonderful trip to Provence and Paris with husband Jim, daughter, son-in-law and granddaughters. She is working hard at Harry Norman Realtors, doesn't feel 60 or look it!

Elizabeth "Betty" Kneale Zlatchin's son, David, has joined her catering business. She and husband Carl travel quite a bit. They took a hiking trip to Sicily and spent Christmas in Paris. From a Spanish major, Betty has turned into a confirmed Francophile.

Since Lynne Lambert Andrews lives in Santa Fe, she was surprised to learn at an alumnae brunch of so many alums in New Mexico. She enjoys her grandchildren in Colorado.

Marjorie "Margie" Reitz Turnbull had a fine time at the mini-reunion at Sue Mustoe Lloyd's home in Rutherfordton, N.C. Nancy Bond Brothers, Edith Hanna Holt, Ruth Shepherd Vazquez, Penny Johnston Burns and Violet "Vicky" Allen Gardner were all there.

Ann Wood Corson celebrated her 60th birthday in Germany with Marijke Klein-Wassink Kutter. She is teaching and hopes to retire in '03. Ann's daughter, Claudia, lives in Denver.

Carolyn Benbow Coker was re-elected for a fifth term as property appraiser in Hardee County, Fla. She and husband Larry have four children.

Ellen Middlebrooks Granum went to Athens, Greece, with Jane Nabors Atchison and had a spectacular time. Jane travels a great deal, takes tours and knows about others. Ellen says that Jane is "a delight to travel with," but companions should "take their vitamins!"

Margaret "Peggy" Frederick Smith and Glen have entered into grandparenthood and agree that it is as satisfying as everyone says.

Laura "Ann" Lee Harris and her husband, Bill, had a welcome reunion with Norris Johnston Goss and her husband, Barry, on St. Simons Island. They hadn't seen each other for 20 years. Ann and Bill live in Americus and are very involved in the community there. This summer they had a great trip to Europe; the highlight was the Passion Play at Oberammergau. Their middle son, Lee, has opened an upscale restaurant in Tallahassee called Cypress.

Germaine Calhoun Culbertson and the secretary just returned from their annual trek to the Williamsburg Antiques Forum, where both had their usual enjoyable experience.

Sally Ann Rodwell Whetstone writes from Wilmington, N.C., that she and Jim welcomed their first grandchild, born on Nov. 21, to their son, Jamey, and his wife, Rebecca, who live in Calistoga, Calif. The new arrival is Hattie Meredith Whetstone, named for her grandmother and great-grandmother. Sally and Jim had their first visit with her in early January 2001. "So wonderful!" Sally wrote. Their younger son, David, was married in July in Brevard, N.C., and has completed his first semester of medical school at East Carolina University.

Nancy Duvall Hargrove continues to receive awards. She was named the Mississippi Professor of the Year 2000 by the Carnegie Foundation and the Council for the Advancement and Support of Education. This is a national award for outstanding undergraduate teaching. Nancy and Guy now have a second grandchild: Margaret Virginia was born last July 25 to Guy and Barbara Hargrove.

Frances E. Anderson

received a Fulbright Scholar award for Argentina for the 2001-02 academic year. This is the first time an art therapist has been honored with a Fulbright. She will be affiliated with the Instituto Universitario Nacional del Arte (IUNA), a consortium of seven arts schools in Buenos Aires with 20,000 students. In June 2000, Frances lectured for two weeks in Buenos Aires at the IUNA to open the first art therapy training program in Central, Caribbean and South America. In October, she was named editor of Art Therapy: Journal of the American Art Therapy Association.

Nancy G. Miller retired to Jekyll Island, Ga., in 1998. She now has seven grandchildren.

As a violinist in the Washington, D.C., Friday Morning Music Club, Nancy Wasell Work played in a concert at the Kennedy Center in January. Nancy is a member of the vestry of St. John's Episcopal Church in Georgetown, Md. She and husband Henry are also on the National Cathedral Association's Washington committee.

In addition to her work as a potter, Scottie Roberts Wiest is doing some writing and lecturing about care giving. She says she "had not realized how many millions, mostly women, are giving their lives to care for a loved one."

Carolyn "Kelly" Mulherin Oates and Jack have four grandchildren—Nancy's Claire and Garrett, and Katie's Sam and Lucy. "Kelly" and Jack took a walking tour of England's Lake District in May 2000, covering 8-10 miles a day, but returning each afternoon for a proper tea in the old English manor where they stayed. With a group of adults from the church, they ventured in June on a 50-mile canoe trip down the Missouri Breaks, along part of the Lewis and Clark route. Then Jack and daughter Katie embarked on the same trip, shepherding the church's junior high group. "One hundred miles of canoeing isn't bad for a 61-year-old!" their Christmas letter exulted. Classmates can keep up with the many ministries of Jack's congregation at www.fpcmissoula.org.

Martha Griffith Kelley and Ralph became first-time grandparents July 23, 2000, with the birth of Brian Claybrook Wilmarth to daughter Jenny and her husband, Steve. Jenny, Steve and Brian conveniently live in Maryland, fairly close to Martha and Ralph in Annandale, Va. Son David is music director at a Lutheran church; and his wife, Kathleen, is an attorney. Younger son Robert is working on his Ph.D. in music theory at Florida State, "loving every minute." Martha and Ralph rented a truck and helped him move to Tallahassee right after Christmas.

When Jane Wallace Brosnan's husband, Dee, "matriculated at Retirement U." at the end of 1999, they left Florida for Keowee Key, S.C., about 10 miles west of Clemson. They are living in a rental while they build a house on Jane's parents' property on Lake Keowee. Daughter Sarah continues her doctoral studies in biology under behaviorist Frans de Waal, at Emory. Her work focuses on cooperation and reciprocity among primates. Last summer she presented papers at conferences in Austria and the Czech Republic. Susan graduated last spring from Baylor and works for IBM Global Systems in Raleigh, N.C. Last June, Jane and Susan spent three weeks in Germany, Austria and Poland.

Maria Wornom Rippe is researching the Wornom family genealogy, and through the Internet and telephone has "been reconnected to relatives all over the country." She plans to publish her findings. Her husband, Peter, retired in January 2000, but continues to serve with artist Pat Moss as a consultant and as president of the Moss Foundation for Children's Education. Their new condo in Richmond was completed last spring.

Mary Jo Beverly Limbird and Glenn moved last year to their "retirement" home in Fairview, N.C., where Glenn spent most of the year working on their house and remodeling a rental house for sale. Mary Jo is gardening (they "went a bit overboard purchasing bulbs") and substituting as a special education teacher. They are already active members of New Hope Presbyterian Church. Mary Jo sings in the choir and serves on the Christian education committee; Glenn is an usher. Last spring both helped build a Habitat house. Sons Mark and Jonathan are in Loomis, Calif., where Mark is a deputy sheriff and Jonathan does specialty auto bodywork.

Though Garnett Foster misses parish ministry, she is finding her duties at Louisville Seminary very rewarding—especially the parts dealing with spiritual formation and ministry placements. Before the outbreak of violence in the Middle East last fall, she led a group of Christian educators to Lebanon to teach a weeklong series of workshops for Lebanon and Syria. In October, Garnett spent 10 days in Cuba as a guest of the Cuban Presbyterian and Reformed Church. She found the country

"sad" as "wonderful old neighborhoods disintegrate and the commitment to the revolution's vision of equality is gone." She adds, however, that "the church is alive."

Sue Keith-Lucas Carson and George are the presiding couple of their local Winston-Salem, N.C., Association for Couples in Marriage Enrichment. They have been elected to the National Board of ACME. Sue's volunteer work as a docent at Reynolda House has provided opportunities for art-related travel—most astonishingly, a "long weekend" in Ecuador in February. The trip was originally planned for 10 days but was cut abruptly to three because of economic protests that threatened to become violent. They still had time to see some of Quito and Hacienda La Ciénega in Lasso. Later in February, Sue took on an important work on behalf of the class: reclaiming the reputation of the class mascot, Harvey! Informed by daughter Jill '04 that the column in the student center listing all mascots described Harvey as a "bunny," Sue bombarded the Alumnae Office with information from Harvey Web sites, and soon had restored his proper title: "Harvey the Invisible Rabbit."

Marnie has a new children's book, Sleepy Me, due out in 2001 from Simon and Schuster. She hopes her classmates will look out for it.

Peggy Bell Gracey now has two grandchildren. Patrick Joseph Gerber was born June 1, 2000, and Caroline Marion Gracey arrived on Oct. 24.

Suzanne "Poppy" Wilson attended the Founder's Day celebration held at Agnes Scott College this past February. Festivities included dedication ceremonies for a number of new facilities funded by gifts to the College. In addition to Poppy, Avary Hack Doubleday and Gerry, Susan M. Phillips and Clair McLeod Muller attended a Friday night student/faculty/alumnae and guests party held in the Egyptian Ballroom of the Fox Theater. The weekend also encompassed the Atlanta launch of the College's Bold Aspirations Campaign at the Buckhead Ritz-Carlton on Saturday.

The February 2001 Financial Times of London featured comments from Deirdre LaPin (Deirdre.A.LaPin@spdc.shell.com) concerning the attention to community development now being paid by multinational oil companies operating in Nigeria. Deirdre's efforts as a development consultant with Shell Petroleum Development Corporation (Royal Dutch Shell's Nigeria subsidiary) have contributed to the company's becoming one of the biggest donors to social projects in Nigeria's delta, with a 130-person community development department and an annual budget of $53 million.

In Deirdre's view, moreover, Nigeria's poverty-stricken population has become more sophisticated in obtaining benefits from the oil companies, which have long profited from the country's petroleum resources.

For the third year, Ann Teat Gallant has been selected as one of the Top 100 Women in Maryland by The Daily Record. She was previously honored in 1999 and 1997; an individual cannot be chosen in successive years. The Daily Record is Maryland's business and legal news publication. To be considered for its award, a woman must be nominated by the business community, a chamber of commerce, women's organization or from the community-at-large. Ann will now be listed in The Daily Record's Circle of Excellence, profiled in a special magazine and recognized at a reception at Meyerhoff Symphony Hall in Baltimore. Ann is vice president of corporate communications for CareFirst BlueCross BlueShield. In personal news, she is a new grandmother to Seth Christopher Gallant.

Elizabeth Cooper sends greetings from Scotland, where she is spending two to three years as integration manager of British Petroleum's largest operating facility. Her responsibility is to align five different businesses into one operating complex (and to see as much of her ancestors' country as possible.) Elizabeth's daughter, Elizabeth Johnson, lives and works in Asheville; so Elizabeth has another scenic place to visit on trips back to the States.

Alsie Bell Churchman reports that "daughter Sarah Catherine Churchman graduated from UGA on Dec. 16 (a semester early!) with a degree in religion, special emphasis in eastern and Native American religions." Alsie considers her daughter "totally unemployable until she gets a master's or Ph.D., but at least she graduated, and early even!" When Sarah first went to Athens, her favorite T-shirt proclaimed, "UGA—the best decade of my life." Knowing how long it took some of Alsie's friends' children to graduate, she was not encouraged or even amused. Sarah is "going to work and probably start graduate school next fall unless she decides to spend next year's ski season working in Steamboat, Colo."

Gabrielle "Gaby" Guyton Harrelson continues as a systems designer with BellSouth in Florence. Ron has retired from BellSouth and established his own business, the ChoreStore. They enjoy having three grandchildren in Florence: all girls, ages 3, 3 and 1. The grands are the children of Ron's daughter and son, as Gaby is, of course, "not quite that old . . . yet!" Gaby's son, Mitch, is a freshman at the University of Colorado in the school of engineering. This past fall Ron and Gaby traveled to Houston for the wedding of Margaret "Peggy" Whitaker Fisher's son. While there they had a mini-reunion with Margaret "Marnie" Henson Hogen and Lee, Charlotte Hart Riordan and Betty Whitaker Wilson. Gaby has also visited recently with Lynne Anthony Butler and Kevin and with Linda Woody Perry and Don in their new Atlanta home.

Classmates Sally Bainbridge Akridge, Lucy Hamilton Lewis, Christie Theriot Woodfin, Betsy White Bacon, Wallace Bryan Ribnik, Jeannette Wright and Ann Glendinning were among the visitors to campus for Founder's Day Weekend and the launch of the Bold Aspirations campaign. Ann Glendinning spoke to prospective students and their families who were attending Scholars' Weekend, which occurred at the same time. Sally Glendinning '33, Ann's mother, wrote children's books that were part of a display featuring alumnae authors in the new Alston Campus Center.

Betty Miller Layng had a memorable fall trip to England with friends and garden club members. Son Will graduated from the University of Georgia and worked on a volunteer anthropological project in Guatemala. Daughter Blythe is majoring in biology at Georgia.

Margaret "Peg" Barnes Carter and Rock took a vacation without children (a new experience for them). They joined a small group on a cruise to the Alaskan wilderness. She says their heads were swimming with the flora, fauna and geologic information they received.

Frances "Betty" Young von Herrmann has had a very busy year. In May, her son Martin graduated from Georgia Tech and in June married his high school sweetheart. Betty and her mother, however, worked in a trip to France between graduation and the wedding. Son Peter is a sophomore at the University of Alabama.

Glenda Goodman McKinnon and Bill have moved to Virginia Beach from their home of 25 years in Norfolk. Their son, Bill, is a neighbor. She says that Margaret "Peggy" Moore Hall '68 and her husband have bought the lot next to them and plan to build soon. Glenda would like to hear from Agnes Scott friends via e-mail: gmckinnon@mckinnonco.com.

Martine "Tina" Brownley was honored with a second endowed chair from Emory University, becoming a Winship Distinguished Research Professor. Her book Deferrals of Domain: Contemporary Women Novelists and the State was published last May by St. Martin's Press.

Dorothy "Dottie" Duval Nelson sounds like a busy lady! Not only is she president of the Foreign Relations Association of New Orleans and editor of the journal of the Louisiana Branch of the International Dyslexia Association; but she drives Hunter, 13, to soccer and e-mails Lee, 15, in school in New York.

Christine "Chris" Engelhard Meade celebrated another wedding in her family. Her daughter Elizabeth '00 married Ken Johnson in July 2000. According to Chris, the financial implications of two weddings in a year (daughter Claire was married in June) have their pocketbook suffering.

Marion Hinson Mitchell and Jack have finally finished the renovation of their house. Their son, Jack, is a rehab engineer in Knoxville; their daughter, Nancy, a therapeutic assistant on the psychiatry floors at the Medical University of South Carolina. Marion helped Nancy pre-celebrate her graduation from the College of Charleston by going skydiving. In other activities, Marion sings with a women's ensemble, the Greenville Chamber Singers, and rides horses with friends as often as possible.

Mary Anne Murphy Hornbuckle and Jon have their empty nest back since son Jay has moved to Memphis to take a job with Trammell Crow. Son David is still in Gainesville, in the process of forming a new band, and learning to play the accordion. Mary Anne was able to accompany Jon on a business trip to the Napa Valley; summer plans include joining friends to climb Mt. Le Conte, near Gatlinburg.

Carol Jensen Rychly and Bob are recovering from a very rocky year. Bob was hit by a car and suffered broken ribs and emergency surgery to remove his spleen. In addition, his dad, who had lived with them, died from lung cancer. On the brighter side, Carol's parents moved to Augusta and recently celebrated their 50th anniversary. Son David is completing his degree in chemistry at the university where Carol teaches. Son Matt is in the army stationed in Colorado Springs; he and his wife, Jill, are scheduled to return to Augusta before the fall. Busy writing her dissertation, Carol is looking forward to life afterwards.

Shelia Wilkins Harkleroad remains involved in ASC activities. She is a member of the Alumnae Board as well as the Annual Fund Alumnae Committee and serves as the Reunion Giving Chair. She finds that the Agnes Scott network is really a blessing. Recently she had to move her Dad and was able to set him up with her daughter, Susan Harkleroad '96, as a roommate in the home of Peggy Johnston Nesbit.

As moving nightmares retreat into memories, Carol Blessing Ray and Billie have settled into their new house in Sarasota. They keep binoculars handy for watching the birds on the lagoon and for spying on the resident alligator.

Gayle Wunder Hock says "better late than never" is her rule of thumb. She has been married for 30 years and has two daughters. After one of her daughters, 21, graduated from James Madison University in May, she married and moved to England with her Air Force husband. Her other daughter is a freshman dance major at Allentown College and part-time U.S. Park Ranger. Gayle herself is currently the school social worker for her county, teaching at a local community college and becoming certified in American Sign Language.

Carol Hill Hightower has had a wonderful year with international students at Georgia Tech, especially the Chinese. She works through the Westminster Christian Fellowship (Presbyterian Center) on the Tech campus and with the Chinese Friendship Association to show Chinese students hospitality and to link them with the church. Carol issues an open invitation to anyone who might like to join her in this adventure.

Margaret Gillespie Sewell wants to express her appreciation for the messages of support from all her Agnes Scott friends during her illness and recovery. She is continuing her volunteer work, particularly with the Mississippi Symphony, for which she serves as vice president for education on the Board of Governors. She is also on the volunteer council of the American Symphony Orchestra League.

Ruth Everett Whitehead (ruthholmes@hfx.eastlink.ca) writes to catch classmates up on all her news. She lives in Canada and is doing research and writing at the Nova Scotia Museum. Her current project concerns a group of black men and women who escaped to Nova Scotia from South Carolina in 1783 during the American Revolution. Ruth has written extensively on Canadian Native Indian cultures (especially on the Mi'kmaq First Nations people). Currently Ruth is on disability leave while orthopedic surgeons decide what to do with the faulty discs in her back. Her daughter and son-in-law reside in Toronto.

Letitia "Tish" Frances Lowe has thoroughly enjoyed traveling this past year, not only with business, but also on her own. Her destinations included London, India, Sri Lanka, Argentina, Peru, Chile, Germany, Italy, Turkey, Paris, Rome and Ireland. Can classmates say they are envious?

Rebekah Hall Robertson has been quite occupied, too. She and Butch are bursting with pride over their twin girls, Joanna and Emily, who will graduate this year from college and are in the midst of planning and performing their senior music recitals. The younger twins, Adrienne and Kathryn, are freshmen in high school and keep Rebekah busy getting them to after-school activities in music and dance.

Her son Bert is a senior at Georgia Tech and is spending a semester in Australia and New Zealand. Son Paul is a freshman at Georgia Southern. Paula's husband, Al, is doing retirement seminars and investment counseling.

Caroline Turner's stepson, Noah, graduated from Lehigh last June. Her son, Justin, and daughter, Ashley, graduated in May, one week apart: Justin, from the College of Santa Fe; Ashley, from Vassar. Caroline is senior vice president, General Counsel and Secretary of Coors Brewing, where she has been for 15 years. In 1999 she was named Outstanding Alumna from the University of Denver College of Law; in 2000, Corporate Woman of the Year by Women's Vision Foundation for championing women in the workplace.

Jo Perry Ely's husband, Randy, has written and published his first book, Sweet Dreams and Flying Machines. It can be ordered from 1stbooks.com, amazon.com or barnes&noble.com. Jo and Randy welcome comments after classmates read the book. Jo is doing well working with her company HealthELY in the areas of fitness and wellness.

Bernie Todd Smith gave a presentation at a conference held by the American Library Association and the National Library of Medicine in Washington, D.C. While in Washington, she had dinner with Frances "Bunny" Folk Zygmunt.

Patricia "Tricia" Lindsay Green loves living on the West Coast, having returned to Atlanta only once since graduation, although she visits family in North and South Carolina. After 20 years in Seattle, Tricia and husband Don are living in Santa Barbara.

Lyn Corder's daughter, Maureen, a junior at Baldwin-Wallace College, spent a semester in Ecuador, with sojourns in Peru and the Galapagos Islands. Son Cory worked last summer in Chicago and volunteered for Ralph Nader's campaign. Ryan is studying at Stony Brook University. Lyn enjoys her work with the University of Buffalo School of Medicine and Biomedical Sciences. Last year she traveled to Nova Scotia and Newfoundland, in addition to hiking in Utah and Death Valley.

Margaret "Peggy" Thompson Davis' daughter, Lauren, a sophomore at Agnes Scott College, is majoring in astrophysics. She has accepted a summer internship at the Jodrell Banks Observatory in the U.K. Daughter Sarah graduated from the University of Virginia in May 2000 and is in strategic planning with EDS in Dallas. Peggy is working for an interior designer in Jacksonville.

Katherine Setze Horne and husband Bo are planning their retirement home on Lake Hartwell in South Carolina. They are also enjoying their grandson, Bradley James Horne, born Dec. 18, 1999.

Jane Duttonhaver Hursey spent five weeks in France during summer 2000, teaching American students in a joint-enrollment program in Toulouse. Then, after the students returned to Atlanta, she spent a week with husband Howard in Paris. Jane teaches French at Stone Mountain High School. Her daughter, Lorraine, is a freshman at the University of Georgia; son Christopher is a junior in high school.

Carlene Kirkman Dockery lives in Blairsville, Ga., and commutes to Atlanta about twice a week, but loves the peace of the mountains.

Dianne Floyd Blackshear-Wood's husband, Gene DuVall Wood, died suddenly on May 29, 2000. With the love and support of her parents, Agnes and Lamar Floyd, her twin sister, Cynthia Floyd Sikes, and her daughters, Allison and Devon Blackshear, she has gotten through this difficult time. She also has three stepchildren, five step-grandchildren and a church family at St. Catherine's Episcopal Church in Marietta. Dianne works at Wellstar Kennestone Hospital as a medical technologist. The class offers sincere sympathy to Dianne.

Kaaren Hunt Lyle's mother, Betty Miller, passed away in July 2000, after a two-year battle with cancer. The class also sends sympathy to Kaaren. In August 2000 Kaaren's husband, Elmer, was transferred to the headquarters of Verizon Wireless in Bedminster, N.J., and appointed executive director. The family has moved to Riegelsville, Pa., and Elmer commutes 40 miles each way. Kaaren is enjoying the country setting and tending to the nearly four acres. Son Greg Sadosky graduated from Ohio State in March 2001.

Helen Tyler McFadden has served as parliamentarian for the Democratic National Committee since 1996 and on the team of parliamentarians for the National Convention in 1996 and 2000. She spent a week in September on a walk/bike tour of Tuscany with Sharon Roberts Henderson and Sharon's husband, David. Tyler regrets not having been able to attend the reunion, but was committed to act as parliamentarian for the Wisconsin Education Association Council.

DEATHS

Charlotte Stringer Stephens has relocated in Louisiana and taken a position as associate professor in the College of Business and Administration at Louisiana Tech University, where she has the opportunity to work with doctoral students. In December she spent two weeks in Australia, presenting papers at a conference and admiring the beauty of the country, including Surfer's Paradise, Ayers Rock, Great Barrier Reef, Sydney and the Blue Mountains. An astronomy program about the Southern Hemisphere constellations, conducted in the outback near Ayers Rock, was the highlight.

Patricia "Pat" Austin is on the faculty at the University of New Orleans; her specialty is children's literature. She has written dozens of articles in educational journals about children's books, children's authors and kids' responses to literature. Now Pat's first picture book, The Cat Who Loved Mozart, illustrated by Henri Sorenson, has been published by Holiday House.

Pam Westmoreland Sholar experienced a memorable trip to South Africa. She visited the Cape of Good Hope, the wine country and the Garden Route to Knysna, also going through the Swartzenberg Pass to Outshoorn. Other highlights included visits to Ostrich Farms and Cango Caves. Back home in Mooresville, N.C., she started a new business with nutritional products and moved her oncology practice to a new office. Looking for a partner, she asks to be called if anyone knows of a medical oncologist "seeking to improve her lifestyle."

Now that her nest is empty, Paula Wiles Sigmon seems to be working harder than ever as product marketing director at Mercator, a software company in Connecticut. Sons Jeremy and Eric are freshmen at Washington University in St. Louis and Vanderbilt, respectively. Noting that the next big reunion for the class is just one year away, she asks that classmates send her their e-mail addresses to facilitate communications and planning for the big event.

Ann Yrwing Hall reports that her son, Phillip, is a senior at Venice High School, Venice, Fla. In December, the Venice Indians won the 5A Florida state championship in high school football. Her son was a starter for both defense and offense. Then in February, Phillip became the Florida state champion in wrestling in the 215 lb. weight class, 3A.

In February, 11 Scotties retreated to Sea Pines, Hilton Head, for an in-depth study of ya-yas, steel magnolias, sweet potato queens and birthdays hovering around the half-century mark. In true ASC tradition, they allocated a portion of their time to quoting favorite passages from books, singing "God of the Marching Centuries" (all verses) and discussing current topics of interest concerning church, state, technologically advanced children and Chaucer. The rest of the time was dedicated to the consumption of chocolates and chips, the playing of Chicago, Credence and Three-Dog Night and shopping in silver convertibles (also in true Scottie tradition). Looking even better than they did in the '70s (who doesn't?) were Sally Bryant Oxley, Janifer Meldrum, Mary Paige Lucas, Margaret "Meg" Lines Thrash, Elizabeth "Betsy" Barry Haynes, Nadja Sefcik-Earl, Judy Hamilton Grubbs, Caron Collins Hopkins, Ann Cowley Churchman, Ann Yrwing Hall '72 and Rebecca "Becky" Orlich '71. Sending in long distance greetings were Martha Manuel Emerson, Jocelyn Williams, Sally Schrader Hart, Anne MacKenzie Boyle and Polly Barnes Holmes, who had to stay home because she was being honored as Teacher of the Year in Norman, Okla. (what an excuse!).

Lawton Webber Scott started a new job as an assistant district attorney at the Cherokee County District Attorneys.

Lyn Sanders "Sandy" Stogsdill Ogle and husband Paul spent two splendid weeks in Sydney for the Summer Olympics. She writes that Australia is a wonderful place to visit, that the people are very friendly there. Sandy's job is challenging in Chapel Hill. She is with the same company, but has moved from management to sales. Far less stress, she reports.

Mary Gay Bankston returned to the campus in November and encourages her classmates to visit the recently refurbished McCain Library and the Alston Campus Center.

Jane Marshall Simons has been promoted to vice president, manager of sales communications at Wachovia Corporation in Winston-Salem, N.C. She publishes a weekly newsletter for the branches in Wachovia's five-state market and manages a Web site.

Jamie Osgood Shepard, husband Randy and the boys—Lee, 18, and John, 15—are happily situated in Palo Alto, Calif. Jamie works part time as the site council coordinator at the high school, where John is a sophomore. Lee manages to attend Foothill Community College between surfing, work and pottery, his latest avocation. Randy's company is still managing AT&T's digital set top box development. "Like kudzu, it keeps growing," according to Jamie.

Anne Gwynn Culberson and son Blake spent much of last summer with her mother, who cannot travel, and the remainder at the beach. She sees Anita Kern, who has taught some courses at ASC and works at Fernbank Science Center; as well as Eleni Papador Papadakis, Mary Starling Inman and, on occasion, Betsy Middleton McDonald and Mary Jane Warren Stone. Additionally, Anne Blake's family has a new Boykin Spaniel puppy.

Melisha Miles Gilreath writes that Ann Patterson Clites and her three children of Alexandria, Va., were guests of Wendy Whelchel. During their visit, Wendy hosted a mini-reunion with classmates Melisha, Susan Walker Sullivan, Gloria Wyatt and Cindy Goldthwaite with her 8-year-old daughter of Social Circle, Ga. Activities included the following: a trip to Borders for the new Harry Potter selection and a Civil War mystery, Dead March, by classmate Ann McMillan; hotdogs at the Varsity and a ride through campus. Wendy married Fred Barnes, moved to Sandy Springs and lives two stoplights from Melisha and her family.

Allyn Fine Linas now does the impossible on a daily basis. After earning her master's in special education, she teaches sixth-grade learning disability classes in public school in Richmond and manages a household that includes five teenagers! Fortunately, Allyn's husband, Rick, works for Costco Wholesale; so one can imagine a great deal of bulk buying. Their oldest son, Claude, is at James Madison University; second son Bryan is considering Georgia Tech as one of his college choices for the fall. Biggest plans on the horizon for Allyn and Rick involve a trip to Africa this summer to celebrate Rick's 50th birthday. Bon voyage!

Last Christmas Lily Chan spent a delightful holiday in the San Francisco bay area, relaxing and visiting with family and getting in a bit of business as well. She and her husband, Choy-Heng, along with son Michael, devoted one of the holiday weeks to the mountains of Tahoe for skiing and enjoying the food, wine and roaring fire of the ski lodge. Lily anticipates another year of travel, with Boston and Durham, N.C., on the agenda for the East Coast.

Victoria Burgess Stephan runs her own business, Stephan Consulting and Associates, which trains people working for nonprofit companies. She has also taken on the position of president and CEO of Junior Achievement of Southwest Florida. Vicky still finds time, however, for boating with her husband and two sons, Wade Margaret Carter Altom and Kathryn Bireley Plouff visited Jill Worthey Cox's spectacular historic home in La Grange, Tenn., for a weekend last summer. They had a delightful time catching up with each other as if they had never been apart. In addition, they helped Jill feed and take care of all her animals—horses, dogs, cats and a burro. They also rode Tennessee walking horses through the farms of Jill's neighbors, even getting on Jill's champion walker, Gold. At home, Margaret had the pleasure in the fall of having daughter Kelsey, a senior at SMU in Dallas, in the guest quarters while completing her last semester this fall. She reminds Margaret so much of herself. Since Margaret and her husband travel extensively for business, it was comforting knowing that Kelsey was at the house taking care of everything.

In early December, Lee Dillard, Susan Mitchell Crawley and Betsy McDaniel got together for their 15th annual "Girls' Christmas Weekend." They had great fun touring the mansions in Newport, R.I., shopping and celebrating the holidays in Boston.

Melissa Mills Jacobs is teaching communications at Palm Beach Community College. Their daughter, Julia, is a sophomore at Emory, while daughter Lin, whom she and husband Dan adopted from China in 1998 (on their 19th wedding anniversary), is now 4.

Elizabeth "Buff" McIlrath-Jordan lives in Neptune Beach, Fla., with four of her blended family's seven children still at home. Oldest daughter Sarah McIlrath is a senior at ASC. Buff keeps the books for the family's computer consulting business.

Carol Ann Asbell married Mike W. Payne on June 18, 2000. Nita Whetstone Franz '75, Josette Alberts Bulnes '77 and Genevieve New Chaffee and their families attended the ceremony. Carol and Mike both retired from Herman Miller Inc., and live in Alpharetta, Ga.

Harriett Graves-Beckley is battling a second bout of breast cancer. She had just finished chemotherapy and was anxiously awaiting surgery when she wrote last fall. Son Graves is a sophomore at Sewanee; daughter Betts is a junior in high school and plays lacrosse; and step-daughter Angela is a junior at the University of Kentucky.

Patricia "Patty" Pearson Whitner reports that, in addition to helping plan the reunion, she was "rocking along doing the twins in third grade kind of thing."

After an 18-months' hiatus from working, Susan Grier Bennett made a career change and is now happily teaching English part time at the College of Southern Maryland. After almost two years with First Citizens Bank in Communications, Ellen Fort Grissett has a new job as senior account executive with a public relations agency specializing in healthcare/high-tech accounts. Her son is a June graduate from Woodberry Forest anxiously awaiting college responses. Their daughter, Megan, also completed the eighth grade in June. Ellen continues to get together with Patricia "Pat" McWaters Lehman, Dana deWitt Truitt, Eleanor McCain, Nancy Burnham Stephens and Patrice Davis at least once a year for a "girls' weekend." She stays in touch with Lois Turner Swords, too, while writing and trying to maintain sanity as a single mother of two teenagers.

Lydia Wilkes Barfoot and Alan have three children: Adam, a sophomore at Georgia Tech and soccer player for Christian Campus Fellowship; Allyson, a high school sophomore, who loves running cross-country, performing in One Act and playing soccer; and Alex, a 5th grader and eager participant in soccer and anything else that involves a ball and competition. In between running the kids around, Lydia has enjoyed working part time for eight years at the Technical College.

Susan "Susi" Pedrick McWilliams and Robert have three boys—Robert Jr., 16; Larry, 14; and John, 11. Since all three adore sports from tennis to football and Robert Jr. is thinking seriously about going to Georgia Tech, the family went to the Peach Bowl to cheer for Georgia Tech. Susie practices law in Columbia, S.C.

Mary Anne Barlow, fifth grade magnet teacher in DeKalb County, was voted Evansdale's Teacher of the Year by her colleagues. She is also one of ten finalists for the County's Teacher of the Year honor. An article about Mary Anne's recognition at Evansdale commented, "The honor does not come as a great surprise to those who know her, for she gets high marks and praise from both parents and colleagues." Mary Anne is a math and science teacher and sponsors the safety patrols, plays the piano for the school chorus and serves as an advisor for students in Mathfax. For relaxation, she has six cats, two birds and a Jack Russell terrier named Molly. She loves tennis and her 4.0 USTA team.

Anne Alexander Patterson and David spent the Christmas holidays with their two children, Michael and Sarah, snow skiing in Utah.

Ruth McMullen Bursi and husband Phil enjoyed having their four sons home for the holidays: John and his wife, Shana, from Jackson, Miss.; Chuck on a break from the Air Force Academy; and Alex and Tommy, who are still in junior and senior high.

Linda Shearon loves to ride horses and tries to do so at least once a week. During 2000 she went to the beach with friends in June, sailing school in July and in October met Sarah "Sally" Shurley Hayes in Charleston for a long weekend. It was a great time for catching up and eating some delicious food.

Susan Smith Perry and Mike enjoyed a trip to Europe with their three children. Two are at UNC-Chapel Hill.

Eva Katherine "Kathy" Oates Roos, Steve and their daughters, Rebecca and Deborah, moved to a new house, where they quickly hosted Rebecca's cross-country team for dinner. Kathy teaches piano.

Lynn Wilson McGee, her husband and four boys are back in the states after three years in West Yorkshire, England. They cherished their time there. Now they are living in Columbus, Ohio.

With their two children, Steven and Jennie, Melinda Morris Knight and her husband, Graeme, had a special family wedding gathering at sister Jennifer's wedding in Florida. They all participated in the ceremony and had a memorable time.

Juliette "Jet" Harper visited Cindy Hodges Burns and her family for a fun-filled weekend in Little Rock. They drove to Newport, Ark., and had lunch with Cindy's mother, which was a real treat for all.

Kathryn Hart Bissette and husband Mack adopted a boy, Nathan Hart, born on Sept. 18. Ella is enjoying her new role as big sister.

Amy Mortenson Thorne and her family have returned to the states after three years stationed in Okinawa, Japan. She now works as an anesthesiologist at Naval Hospital, Camp Pendleton, Calif. She and her husband, Chris, are building a house in Carlsbad and hoping to move in by the time this news is in print. Chris is an instructor at the Field Medicine School at Camp Pendleton. Christopher is 5 and loves kindergarten. David, 2, wants to do everything his big brother does. Amy states that except for housing prices and traffic, they like California.

Maria Inserni Requero is homeschooling her three children: Nika, 10, Jon Paul, 9, and Katia, 6. She is practicing law on a "doing-favors" basis and is president of the Suzuki Violin Association of Puerto Rico. Maria is also starting an information resource center for Puerto Rico and the Caribbean for anyone interested in homeschooling. Husband Juan is an assistant district attorney and coaches Jon Paul's baseball team. Maria enjoys her various activities, especially the mothering ones.

In spring 2000 Marion Mayer Crabb received her master's degree in music from Georgia State University. She is now teaching voice and music appreciation part time at Gordon College in Barnesville, Ga. She writes that the experience has given her a whole new level of respect for her ASC professors.

Bonnie Armstrong excitedly writes of the birth of her second child, Conner Faith, born on Oct. 3, 2000. Since the event, Emily Sharp has called several times to offer her "seasoned mom" advice. Bonnie and her growing family moved out of their "treehouse" and into a structure big enough to accommodate everyone.

Laurie McBrayer Coleman is serving as the 2001 Chair-Elect of the Festival of Trees.

Secretary Margaret Kelly Parry wants to thank all those who sent in news. She encourages all the '83 Boy Scouts to send her news and promises not to miss any more deadlines! Margaret celebrated her 40th on Feb. 11 this year and gave herself gifts of guitar lessons, two backpack trips through the Smokies and a new Flat Coat Retriever puppy. In family news, her husband, Dick, is a group vice president of sales at Fidelity Investments. Kelly is 11 years old and Jack, 7.

Shari Nichols Clifton is living in Brunswick with husband Stuart and two sons Ben and Will. Both boys are on their school chess team. Shari discovered that an ASC alum, Nancy Leasingdale Purcell '76, is a teacher at the boys' school! Stuart holds a position with the Federal Law Enforcement Training Center. Shari was able to get together with Kathy Nelson Brownlee, who has a home in Marietta with her husband, Dave, daughter Melissa and son David. Kathy has a position with Mercy Housing and is overseeing a project in Savannah, Ga. Shari reports that Cathy Zurek Lopez is in the process of moving to Mexico City. She and husband Felipe have accepted new positions with the German company Haarman & Reimer.

Kari Walters Banks and husband Burt announce the birth of their daughter, Kathryn Faye Banks, on Sept. 18. Congratulations! Kathryn is in good company with her brothers Andy, Will and Tom, and the secretary is sure they will all keep Kari and Burt hopping. The new addition is truly a joy and celebration of life as Kathryn's brother, John Banks, died on Oct. 19, 1998, following open-heart surgery. Everyone is an angel and a blessing, a point to keep always in minds and hearts.

Allyson Parr Beckley's planned expansion of the house should begin in the fall, when construction is slated to start. She and her husband feel wholly responsible for ending the drought of the South. Good luck!

Doris Butler Truax and family moved from Raleigh, N.C., back to Selma, Ala. Her husband, Jim, quit International Paper to take a job with the family jewelry store. Doris has opened her own shop, Truax & Company. She carries antiques, silver and gifts, and says she is having the time of her life. Her son, Andrew, is in third grade, and they are all happy to be back near the grandparents.

Amy Durand Black is still in the army as a captain. Wow! She was recently reassigned from Korea to Fort Sam Houston, Texas, as chief, officer strength management, U.S. Army Medical Command. Amy lives in San Antonio with her two sons, William, 11, and Joseph, 4.

Susan Danztler Armagost keeps busy "volunteering for everything" and being a hard-working homemaker with three children, Adam, 10, Eric, 7, and Ansley, 3. She and Glenn now live in Fayetteville, Ga.

Laura Salter Braaten bought a new home in beautiful rural upstate New York. Rick is tenured with Colgate University. Congratulations to him! Laura says she would love to hear from fellow Scotties. Her e-mail address is lbraaten@dreamscape.com.

Laura Fleming McKellar is now a mom of three beautiful children: Meghan, 10, David, 6, and Kary, 9 months. She quit her full-time graphic design position at the Christian Index but now does some freelance work. Her husband, Rusty, works with Pattillo Construction in Tucker, Ga. They attend Briarlake Baptist Church in Decatur.

Eileen Altman, husband Mark and Peter, 5, live in Santa Cruz, Calif. Mark is the database administrator for Lightsurf Technologies. Peter is an active and happy kindergartener, who keeps Eileen busy and active, too. She volunteers at Peter's school and at Jacob's Heart

Children's Cancer Association. Moreover, she coordinates the K-4 Sunday School and is in her third year of EFM, a four-year program of theological education for lay people. Eileen is sorry she missed the reunion but has been making several trips south to see her mother, who is battling lung cancer. Classmates are equally disappointed about her missing the reunion, but certainly wish her mother good health and both of them well.

Sarah Bell Meekhof, another hardworking homemaker with four kids under the age of 8, says things are crazy in good old Northern Virginia. Her husband, John, has now completed most of his executive MBA program at Georgetown. In her spare time (between the hours of midnight and 6 a.m.), Sarah volunteers at her kids' schools, plays the piano (this, of course, keeps everybody awake in the wee hours of the night), jazzercizes and works in the inner healing ministry at her church.

Katherine "Katesy" Moffatt Watson has been promoted to vice president of communications and marketing at the American Gas Association, located on Capitol Hill, which represents gas utilities. She says she is sorry she can't help classmates with their gas bills. Katesy spent a month this fall working at all of the presidential debates at the request of the Bush campaign. She traveled to each site and checked with TV stations to make sure they had a Bush representative on their news programs. After the debates, Katesy conducted "spin alley," which, she says, is a little bit like a media mosh pit, but exciting if the spinner can keep from being trampled underfoot. Sounds exciting!

Sharon Bennett Linxwiler has been to India on an assignment. She visited the Taj Mahal and the Lotus Temple in Delhi. She was amazed to look up at times on her way to work and see an elephant, a string of camels or a herd of sheep or goats holding up traffic. (Reminiscent of Dr. Suess' Mulberry Street?)

The secretary heard from Elizabeth Stevenson Fairleigh last month after writing that she was looking absolutely fabulous and driving a stunning red Porsche boxster. She is still looking fabulous and the Porsche will not change, but something special is in the air. Classmates should read carefully in the next issue of MAIN EVENTS.

Carol Buterbaugh Hayes visited Tokyo in October 2000 and marveled at the changes to her old neighborhood. In November, she visited Italy, Nice and Switzerland with her husband, Ed, and their two children, Lauren and William. They currently live in Dunwoody, but are considering a move to Buckhead in order to eliminate some of the mileage from her 50-mile-a-day carpool commute. Ed was recently elected vice president, science, of The Coca-Cola Company.

Finally, if the secretary does not write this one, Belinda Yandell will personally see that she is tarred and feathered. After years and years of hard work and determination, Belinda is finally a published author. Last summer The Audio Book Club held a short fiction contest last summer and the winner (Belinda!) will have her work produced as an audio book. She is thrilled to have signed a real, genuine, honest-to-God contract, complete with royalties and all. She cautions everyone not to "hit her up" for a loan just yet. The line will form only after the first movie deal. The short fiction will be read by a professional actor and should be available by the time this article is printed. Her story, "Small Change," has received glowing reviews, but Belinda assures the secretary no pay-off was involved. Readers should check on www.audiobooks.com.

Belinda implores every alumna, as well as every person she has ever known, to run out immediately and buy her book. It is not for her own personal gratification, but so that dear old ASC can claim yet another esteemed author among its graduates. She is indeed very excited. Congratulations, Belinda!

As for Kristen Sojourner Burgess, she is happily teaching art and music at the Boulder Country Day School in beautiful Boulder, Colo., and loving it. (Of course, this is being written during holiday break, so teaching looks pretty darned good right now.) Larry's company, Array Biopharma, finally went public in November 2000. It's not raining cash yet, but one never knows. The prospects are good. And the kids—Ben, 11, Meri, 8, and Sam, 4—are all doing well and keeping parents busy, but not too busy to write. The e-mail address has changed. After classmates make a note of it, they will please communicate: kristen.larry@home.com.

Elizabeth Lee Webb has a new job with the Georgia Department of Education as Program Specialist for Foreign Languages and International Education. This is an additional challenge for her as her young twins are very demanding of her time.

Anna Cheshire Levitan calls a lovely five-story brownstone home in downtown Boston. Moreover, for her, coordinating five children, a husband and a dog in the city constitutes "a ball." Anna also works as a part-time personal trainer and teacher of dance to children 3-5 years old.

Maria A. Gonzalez has been board certified in internal medicine. She stays incredibly busy in the emergency room at the V.A. Hospital in New Orleans.

Last summer Julie Kilgore Willis and her husband, Mark, took their two children to explore castles in Germany. Then they met with the rest of her family and went hiking in the Swiss Alps. Julie has now retired from her job as a children's minister in order to become a full-time mom.

Laurel Seibels Justice and her husband, Steve, and four children are living happily in Colorado Springs. Last fall they adopted a little girl, Anna, from China. Laurel works at home as a writer and artist while Steve is a consultant for Christian Ministries.

Sandra "Sandy" Dell Futch and Trey are at home in Lawrenceville with their two girls. She is teaching preschool and directing the preschool choir. On most fall Saturdays they can be found at the Georgia Tech football games. On one such occasion, the family traveled to the Tech/UNC game and met with Jan Clapp Bomar '87 and family.

Caroline Chestnut Leslie is a registered landscape architect practicing in Atlanta. She is still riding and showing American saddled horses. Recent projects have included a community playground in Decatur, apartment renovations, subdivision entrances and residential jobs.

Mary Carter Whitten visited Estonia in the summer of 1999 on a Fulbright grant. Last summer she traveled to upstate New York to visit Karen Green. During that same period Mary hosted 18 East European teachers for a Fulbright-funded course in Washington, D.C., and Georgia.

Valyn Roos Erickson has taken on the added responsibility of networking chair for the Washington, D.C., chapter of the ASC Alumnae Association. She has also been on an extended project in Miami. This gave Valyn the opportunity to catch up with "Tricia" Maguire, who was recently found living in Miami. Tricia is serving in the PGI Executive Destination Management Service. She puts together travel plans and itineraries for corporations, keeping her constantly on the go, moving around different travel destinations.

Since 1995 Elizabeth "Nancy" Hardy Noe has been practicing law with Paul, Hastings, Janofsky and Walker, LLP. Effective in February 2001, Elizabeth was elected a partner in the Atlanta office.

Tom and Nancy Carter Cooke celebrated their 10th wedding anniversary on the Mediterranean without daughter Erica. During a wonderful 10-day cruise, they explored the sights of Florence, Rome and Pompeii, Italy, several of the Greek isles and Turkey.

Martha Kate Beckum Leonard and her two children have returned to Atlanta. Kate is fulfilling her busy role as mom and taxi driver.

Hope Hill-Westphal and her husband, Mark, have a new addition to their family: Julia Anne Westphal. Julia was welcomed by her two siblings, Paul, 5, and Maggie, 2.

BIRTHS

- Julia Anne Westphal, daughter of Hope Hill-Westphal and Mark, Jan. 12.

Lauren Snee Booth and her family have moved to Whitey Island, Wash., where Andrew flies Navy rescue missions. They plan to stay in Washington for about three years.

Beverly Ashmore Nagle married Paul Nagle in August 2000. Since the wedding, both Beverly and Paul have changed jobs: Paul, as plant manager for LAPP; Beverly as manager of HRMS Process Design at IKON North America. Her position keeps Beverly on the road all over the U.S.

Newlyweds Ronda Lynn Deas and Michael Wilkes will celebrate their anniversary on Jan. 20. She is a high school guidance counselor in Jacksonville, Fla., and he works for the Trane Co. as well as serving as the minister of music at Beach United Methodist. They reside in Jacksonville Beach, Fla.

Margaret Hamm Venable teaches chemistry at Georgia Perimeter College. Leon stepped down as chair of the chemistry department at Agnes Scott College so that he could help plan the new $35 million science building. Quentin, 2, is enrolled in preschool several mornings a week. His big accomplishment in 2000 was becoming potty-trained.

Elaine Crosby Schauer's twins—Anne Christine and Caleb Dalton—have been baptized by the Rev. Meda Stamper. Meda is in her second year at Princeton Theological Seminary. Elaine reports that Meda wrote and delivered several beautiful prayers at the baptism.

Catherine Cooke Polkinghorne and her husband, Scott, have returned from living in Sydney, Australia. They now reside in Greenwich, Conn. In July 2000, they had their first child, Trent Ellis. Catherine says that while they missed being in Sydney for the Olympics, they enjoyed watching all of their old stomping grounds on television.

After many years of waiting, Shannon Adair Lowery has been blessed with another child. Colum Gabriel was born on April 25, 2000. Seth, 5, is proud of his status as big brother.

Jeanine Dwinell Henry is home with her two children, Alexander, 3, and Carolyn, 17 months. With Meg Bryant Davenport '88, Jeanine teaches acting to fifth and sixth graders one day a week. Jeanine, Meg, Jeanie Norton Carr '88 and Becky Sanders enjoyed their annual Christmas get-together last year. On the creative side, Jeanine and Meg wrote a children's play that was produced by the ASC theatre department in February 2000.

Renée Caudill Schramm and husband Chris welcomed Baylor Thomas on Aug. 15, 2000. Weighing in at 7 pounds, 7 ounces, he was 20 inches long. Baylor joins two brothers, Bennett and Harrison.

Catherine Martin Lindauer and Douglas also added a son on Nov. 18. Jerry Douglas came in at 7 pounds, 14 ounces and 20 inches long. Two sisters, Caty and Carson, are delighted.

Dawn Bennett Baker's son, Bennett, is doing well with his chemotherapy treatments and enjoying kindergarten. He is in the maintenance phase and, thanks to his very good nature, seems to be taking his illness in stride. Dawn had lunch and a great time with Paige "Charay" Norwood Jennings and Elaine Crosby Schauer '87. They hope to get together on a regular basis.

Accompanied by Michelle McGinnis Robinson and her husband, Brian, Sarah Camille Burton went skiing in Switzerland. In September, they also went sailing in the British Virgin Islands.

Krista Lankford married Chris Hillyer. They live in Dunwoody not too far from Elizabeth "Beth" Leonard Glover.

Suzanne Heywood Miller and her husband, Chuck, bought a house around the corner from ASC. They have two daughters, Caroline and Audrey.

Elizabeth "Beth" Leonard Glover and husband T.J. are additional Dunwoody residents. Beth's eldest daughter, Anna Pate, is in kindergarten this year. Beth is much occupied with school activities, church and her younger daughter, Keyton.

Another very busy Scottie is Lisa Slappey Whitton, with her decorative painting business, Mona Lisa, Inc. Her work was featured in the Street of Dreams show houses for the third year in a row. Lisa's three children—Alexis, 11, Alaina, 8, and Jake, 5—are all doing well. She says that she is trying to slow down work a bit so that she can travel more with her husband.

Melanie Cliatt Williams and husband Scott live in Peachtree Corners with their two sons, Marshall and Garrett. She works PRN as a respiratory therapist in the neo-natal unit at Georgia Baptist Hospital and at Dunwoody Medical Center.

Kimberly Baker has been accepted into the doctoral program at Notre Dame. Her concentration is in the history of Christianity.

Elizabeth "Ebie" Blizzard Camelo's house continues to hum with activity. Her son, Luke, has just celebrated his fifth birthday; his younger sister, Eleanor, and their baby brother, Jack, keep Ebie and her husband, Pete, very busy. Ebie reports that Jack is a "chunk" and that Eleanor is a "little pixie" who makes up for her small stature with her large personality. After a five-year absence, Ebie returned for a weekend visit to Atlanta. She stayed with Eleanor Dill and visited with Kate Baird Hammond, Aimée Peeples Haines, Kimberly Osias and Ginger Patton-Schmitt.

Heidi Staven Carpenter left her job, sadly, to care for her mother, who died of lung cancer in March. Heidi was living with her mom while she underwent chemotherapy and radiation. The diagnosis shocked Heidi and her family, since her mother had exercised regularly, worked three jobs and taken great care of herself.

Anne Leacock Coughlin has begun a new job as membership team director for the City Club in Washington, D.C. This position is with the same company for which she worked for many years in her association with the Tower Club. Anne and her husband, Chris, enjoyed a fabulous trip to Maui, provided by Anne's company. In addition, she traveled with her family to Gainesville, Fla., for the christening of Dee Agee Fabijanic's baby, Gillian Anne. Anne was delighted to be an essential part of her goddaughter's special day. Finally, Ansley Scoville '86, godmother to Anne's daughter, Ansley, visited Anne and her family for Thanksgiving.

In February, Nelathi "Nela" Nanayakkara DeSoysa and her husband, Sheanath, went to Bangkok. Naomi, their 10-month-old daughter, is doing well, and Nela has completed one half of her coursework for her master's in NGO leadership.

Eleanor Dill has had a difficult year. After being diagnosed with breast cancer, she underwent a double mastectomy, requiring complete chemotherapy and radiation treatments throughout the spring and into the summer. Although this has been a trying time, Eleanor has been surrounded by her many College friends; and mini-reunions have occurred at her home time and time again. Among those visiting with Eleanor have been members of the class, including Kate Baird Hammond, Ebie Blizzard Camelo, Aimée Peeples Haines, Kimberly Osias and Ginger Patton-Schmitt. Also, Eleanor has been spending a great deal of time with her friends from the class of 1988, including Sarah Camille Burton, Shelly Trabue Castell, Sally Mairs Dugan, Beth Leonard Glover, Krista Lankford Hillyer, Liz Pleasant Hudson, Catherine Martin Lindauer, Amy Gottsche Miele, Suzanne Heywood Miller, Krista Hedberg Russell, Renée Caudill Schramm, Lisa Slapppy Whitton and Melanie Cliatt Williams. Eleanor is looking forward to participating in the Avon Walk for a Cure in October, and encourages her classmates to join in her endeavor.

Rebecca Earnshaw and her husband, John Hudson, recently purchased a lot in Atlanta, on which they plan to build a rental property. They are hoping to duplicate the real estate success they have enjoyed with their renovations of downtown properties in Savannah, Ga.

Carolyn Weaver Field has moved from the marketing department to compliance at Bank of America Investment Services, Inc., a brokerage subsidiary of Bank of America. She continues to work part time as she studies for her Series 7 brokerage license. Carolyn and her husband, Pete, relaxed during a memorable vacation in Jamaica, where they snorkeled and took a catamaran cruise. When Carolyn wrote, Rebecca, 2, was struggling with her potty training endeavors, but making progress nonetheless. Also, when Carolyn visited with Kathie White Harper '88, she met her beautiful baby girl, Elizabeth Warren, born in February. Kathie was looking and sounding great.

Conchi Gonzales Iglesias and her husband, Angel, bought a four-bedroom house in Dunwoody, Ga., and Conchi maintains that she will be happy living in her new home "for the rest of [her] life."

Linda Harris has been elected to serve as president of the Joel Chandler Harris Association this year. The association is a volunteer board that oversees the Wren's Nest House Museum, the oldest house museum in Georgia, located in southwest Atlanta, on Ralph Abernathy Boulevard. Linda encourages anyone who would like to know more about the organization to e-mail her at lharris@decaturga.com.

Jill Jordan, owner of Jordan Art Consulting in Denver, Colo., is now serving on the board of directors for an organization that encourages people in their 20s and 30s to become more involved in the arts.

Crystal Collis Landrum has completed her Ph.D. and is serving as director for the University of Georgia's Oxford Study-Abroad Program while also teaching in the University's English department.

In one weekend, Louisa Parker Mattozzi and her husband, Michael, found a small townhouse, just 15 minutes from D.C., and bought it. She calls it "teeny, but super cute;" it is only a 10-minute drive from Tina Carr's home in Reston, Va. In addition, Louisa had a book review accepted by the historical periodical The Sixteenth-Century Journal. The article will be published sometime this year.

Alexandria Kimberly Osias loves working for ABC Channel 33/40 in Birmingham, Ala. She has covered everything from a devastating tornado to plane crashes to more lighthearted feature stories. Recently, Kimberly and Kate Baird Hammond traveled to New York City, where they took in a Broadway show and did a little shopping. Parker, Kate's daughter, and the goddaughter of Kimberly and Ginger Patton-Schmitt, is now calling them by name, a delight to both. Kimberly, an inveterate, avid runner, plans to run in the New York Marathon again in the fall.

Mini Abraham Paniker in living in Maryland, has worked as an internist and partner in a group practice for four years in a suburb of Baltimore. She and her husband, Jacob, have two children: son Jonah, 4, and daughter Meera, 1. Mini reports that Jacob loves his little sister, as does Meera her big brother. This past summer, Mini and her family had a fantastic time visiting with Elsa Jann Newman Schaefer, her husband, Scott, and her daughter, Maisie.

Ginger Patton-Schmitt and her husband, Michael, along with Ginger's law partner and her husband, have begun renovating homes in Atlanta for resale. In conjunction with her law practice, now focused primarily in the areas of real estate and estate planning, Ginger has obtained her real estate salesperson's license to assist in buying and selling her own investment properties. Although she stays busy with her law practice and business ventures, she continues to work around her sons' schedules and tries to be a full-time mom and part-time attorney.

Amanda "Mandy" Roberts, Mitrina Mogelnicki and Tina Carr visited Louisa Parker Mattozzi in March. Together, they had a delightful time touring Mantua, Venice, Padua and Siena.

Hiromi Wazawa Rozett has been volunteering at the Singapore American School, which her daughter, Irene, attends and loves. In travel activities, Hiromi's family enjoyed a trip to Desaru, Malaysia, and to India. She reports an "eye-opening experience" in India, when her family was amazed to see cows, camels and pigs, among other animals, roaming the streets unattended.

Jill Thomas has been hired as a project administrator for SunTrust Bank with its Enterprise Information Services.

DEATHS

At this writing Frances Scrivener Johnson was still in Flower Mound, a Dallas suburb. Because her husband, Lewis, had taken a job at Georgia Tech, however, a return to Atlanta was imminent. Frances will be at home with her daughters, Hannah, 6, and Mary Francis, 3.

Teresa Ramirez Dore had a baby girl on Feb. 9. Carmen Cecilia Dore weighed 6 pounds, 7 ounces.

Hillary Soper Strong and her daughter, Katilynn, were skiing this winter in southern Vermont while her husband, David, was completing his degree in mechanical engineering. After managing to survive a big storm that dumped approximately 32 inches of snow in their area, they did a great deal of shoveling.

Jennifer Boyd Miller's son, Crawford, is walking and throwing everything into the garbage can. Meanwhile, she has been working on her gifted certification and plans to move from teaching a half day remedial to teaching a half day gifted next year.

Michele Moses Lackey and her husband sold their house in Phoenix and now are in Plano, Texas, just outside Dallas. Having actually lived in three different states in one year, she hopes to avoid moving for a while.

Karen Anderson is spending time representing a global biotechnology industry coalition in the Biosafety Protocol negotiations (under the United Nations Convention on Biological Diversity umbrella). In December, she devoted additional time in Montpellier, France, to that same project that had already taken her to Vienna, Montreal and Nairobi. Karen found it hard work but fascinating travel. The highlight of her winter was a January trip to the French Alps with friends from graduate school for an intense six days of skiing.

In addition to teaching reading recovery part time, Andri Akins Pilgrim is taking on another job. She is working as the Bremen City School's grant writer. Furthermore, Andri is enjoying her life as the first lady of Carrollton. She and Gerald have been involved in many projects that have helped improve the city.

Erin Gaston went on her first interpreting assignment with the U.S. Department of State. It was a month-long trip around the U.S. with a group of Latin American journalists, meeting with the U.S. media. She even got to interpret for them on the floor of the United Nations General Assembly (every interpreter's dream) and to have a photo taken with U.N. Secretary General Kofi Annan. No kidding!

Kathryn "Katie" Pattillo Fisher, Jennifer Brand Gruber, Heidi Wilson Ream and Jean Wilson Tate all got together for dinner when Katie and Heidi visited Atlanta.

After graduation Kristy Jay Ramsbottom returned to her hometown of Macon, Ga., and enrolled in graduate school at Mercer University. She has received her master's degree in family studies, while also obtaining a real estate license. Upon completing an internship in the family therapy field, she realized counseling was what she wanted to do. Consequently, she obtained her license in marriage and family therapy. In personal happenings, Kristy married her husband, Billy, in 1995. She was the manager of an employer assistance program for seven years until the birth of their little girl, Kerry Sloane Ramsbottom, on Oct. 2, 1999. She is now working only two days a week and treasures being at home the rest of the time with her daughter. Kristy is also much involved in volunteer work in her church and the community.

Margaret Innes Manning and Sonny have moved to Duluth, Ga.

Ashley Barnes Bagwell reports that Jake, 5, entered kindergarten this year and Bailey is 3. In October, Ashley presented at the Georgia Council for Teachers of Mathematics Conference and is taking courses to receive her certification in gifted education. She is teaching fifth grade as well.

Jennifer Producers Johnson and Jim welcomed Mary Elizabeth Johnson into the world on July 1, 2000.

Jennifer Pilcher Duke's husband, Sandy, completed his ENT residency this spring.

They have several job prospects in Georgia that they are excited about, happy and ready to return home after their time in Winston Salem, N.C. Updates on their children reveal that Samuel is 5 and Katie Belle, 1.

Allyson Whitley Burroughs and husband Mark bought their first home in May 2000. They are in Clarkston, Ga., exactly three miles from the Decatur courthouse. Their three dogs have a real yard for the first time and love it!

In Savannah, Sally McMillan teaches chemistry and biology to 10th and 11th graders. She plays soccer on a city league and would like to hear from anyone by mail or e-mail: sally-mac@mindspring.com; 2325 Walz Drive, Savannah, GA 31404.

Chrissie Lewandowski left teaching to begin a new career working for Jostens Publishing Company as a yearbook representative. She sees Annmarie Anderson, Tammy Shirley, Daphne Norton and Cara Cassell on a regular basis. They are in a book group together or were active planning the reunion. Chrissie also recently divorced and has taken back her maiden name.

Davina Crawford McGrail and Dave had their first child, a baby girl named Alexandra Lynn, on July 21, 2000. Her beautiful smiles and curious ways keep them occupied day and night. In order to be at home with Alexandra full time, Davina made the decision a couple of months later to quit her sales job with United Healthcare in Memphis. She may, nevertheless, do some part-time work from home.

Michelle Roberts Matthews and Vince also welcomed their first child, Carter Lee Matthews, into the world on Nov. 29. He weighed 9 pounds, 14 ounces, and is doing very well. While Michelle and Vince and their families are thrilled, their two dogs, Daisy and Max, are adjusting to no longer being the "babies" in the house.

BIRTHS

In January 2000, Jennifer Bruce met Lauren Fowler and Helen Harber in Ogden, Utah, for the Sundance Film Festival and skiing. Jennifer will finish her residency in June and in July will be off to France and Italy with her mother. Upon her return, she will travel to Georgia for kayaking with her father. Her new job in Montrose, Colo., (near Telluride in the Four Corners region) begins on Aug. 15; but before that, Christia Holloway '91 will have paid her a visit in May. Between all the traveling and visiting, Jennifer will sell her current home and purchase a new one in Montrose.

Jenessa DeFrees Burney and husband Brad welcomed their daughter, Emily Dasa ("day-sah"), into the world on Nov. 24 at 6:30 a.m. She weighed 6 pounds, 11 ounces, and was 18 inches long. Because of maternal toxemia, labor was induced three weeks early, but mother and baby are fine. Jenessa can't wait to introduce Emily to her Scottie "aunts" at the reunion next year.

According to Lauren Fowler's annual Christmas letter, she has been extremely busy. Multiple ski outings in Utah with various family and friends, a scuba/snorkeling trip to the U.S. Virgin Islands, a presentation at the Denver Conference for the International Neuropsychological Society, a mother-daughter hiking venture in Bryce and Zion canyons and another in the Uinta Mountains and Logan Canyon, a kayaking/rafting trip down the middle fork of the Salmon River in Idaho, a family visit in Texas and Christmas holidays in Georgia and Texas make up an impressive list. This doesn't even count all the people who came to visit her! (Lauren also mentioned something about margaritas and day-after Aspercreme as part of her 30th birthday celebration with friends from Georgia.) In other news she began her second year as a professor at Weber State University and spends the rest of her time on school-work and writing.

Two weeks before Christmas, Elizabeth Fraser Washburn, her husband, Matt, and parents went on a cruise on Royal Caribbean's ship Explorer. They visited San Juan, St. Thomas, Labedee (the cruise line's private resort off the coast of Haiti) and Nassau. They kept occupied with rollerblading, mini-golf, rock climbing, ice skating and noshing on the delicious food. Elizabeth highly recommends this cruise to everyone.

The second of three births reported in this column is that of Haley Elizabeth, daughter of Amy Higgins Hulsey and her husband, Keith. Haley was born on Nov. 22 at 1:21 p.m., weighing 8 pounds, 5 ounces, and 20.5 inches in length.

Ruth Lightfoot Adams and husband Michael returned to the U.S. in June 2000 after a two-year assignment in Amsterdam. She "finally" passed the CPA exam and works for Highwood Properties in Raleigh, N.C. The only children they have now are of the four-legged furry variety that meow.

Sandee McGlaun is thrilled to report that she completed her degree requirements for her Ph.D. in English at Ohio State University on Sept. 18. A photograph of Sandee at the Dec. 8 graduation ceremony is posted on the Class of '92 e-Circle. She is also happy that she is once again a Georgia resident, having accepted a tenure-track position in rhetoric and composition in the Language and Literature Department at North Georgia College and State University. Sandee shares her cozy townhouse in Dahlonega with her cat, Roscoe, who delights in running up and down the stairs watching birds in the comfort of their backyard. In addition, being back in Georgia afforded Sandee the opportunity to visit with Christine Cozzens and the Writing Center tutors back in August. She also ran into Amy Higgins Hulsey at an event in Gainesville, which was a very pleasant surprise!

Angela Miller Loiselle checks in with much news. She married her husband, Richard, six years ago. Their most recent big news is the birth of their second son, Pierce Franklin, on Oct. 17. His big brother, Graham Miller, born on Sept. 6, 1997, adores his new brother and has not once asked that he be taken back! Along with their dog, Jasmine, and cat, Zachary Taylor, they live in Pensacola, Fla. Angela returned to college to get a bachelor's degree in computer information systems. She says that school offers a great way to be in the company of adults.

Claudia "Christie" Miller was recently commissioned to help write the second edition of the Time Out Guide to Miami, working on that through the month of March. Then, when the editor from the Time Out London offices was in Miami in February, Claudia showed him the town. She has, furthermore, been asked to contribute a chapter on "Gay and Lesbian Tourism" for a book called Gay Tourism that will be published by Continuum Press early next year. Some work she did for OUT Magazine on travel in Fort Lauderdale and Key West was on the stands in March, and the Miami section of the Web site that she helped write—CityChoices.com—went live in February. The February cover story in WHERE, Miami Magazine, called "Guardians of the Gates," was another creation of this prolific classmate. The story tells all about club doormen.

Sara and Rob honeymooned in Amelia Island, Fla., and Mexico. In December 1999, they moved to Asheville, N.C., after commuting for two years from Atlanta. Rob had been recruited by Quest Engineering in July 1998 to work with the Cannondale Motorcycle Project. Sara stayed in Atlanta to continue working for Ad Shop Inc. In Asheville, she is in the programs department of MANNA FoodBank, assisting with agency relations, public relations and special events. MANNA serves all 17 Western North Carolina counties. She stays busy as well volunteering, including helping The Eblen Foundation and the Buncombe County GOP. For pleasure, Sara and Rob have a beagle named Aston and enjoy sports car racing, going to Mexico to dive, decorating their house and getting to know Western North Carolina. Sara's brother, Scott DiGiusto, met the husband of Mary Snyder Loeb '95, in Pensacola during Naval flight school; and they were roommates in Corpus Christi, Texas, during the remainder of flight school. Sara's mother, Carol, graduated from Columbia Theological Seminary in 1999 and is an associate at a church in Ponte Vedra Beach, Fla.
